The Mails.

[From The Borax Miner, May 16.]

We made a brief allusion in The Borax Miner of April 18th, to the mail difficulties in this remote portion of Uncle Sam's dominions. Mr. C. W. Kendall sends the annexed reference to the problem:

WASHINGTON, May 4.

ED. BORAX MINER—I have submitted the inquiries suggested in a late number of The Miner, to the Postoffice department, and have received the inclosed reply. Will you, if your people desire a change made in the postal arrangements, make a petition setting forth the particulars, and I will do the best possible for you in the matter. Yours in haste, C. W. KENDALL

The letter from the Postoffice Department to Mr. Kendall is as follows:

WASHINGTON, May 2.

HON. C. W. KENDALL—In reply to your letter of the 30th ultimo, inclosing slip from The Borax Miner in regard to mail service between Aurora and Columbus and Columbus and Alida, you are respectfully informed that the service from Aurora to Columbus was let as it has been heretofore but if it is found that part of the distance can be saved, it will be curtailed. Service from Alida to Columbus was accepted April 13, 1874, and will run through Fish Lake Valley. If that service is needed, as it is claimed, there should be offices established in that valley.

JOHN S. ROUTT,
Second Assistant P. M. Gen.

There is a Postoffice at Alida and one at Oasis (Piper's), in Fish Lake Valley. One other office, at Harrell's or McAffee's, would probably be sufficient for the service required. If the farmers of Fish Lake will select a Postmaster at a point convenient to all, and send in a petition for the appointment, we will forward it to Mr. Kendall, and the matter will undoubtedly be attended to.

A Rather Social Governor.

Gov. Lazrus Powell, of the State of Kentucky, was never an orator, but his conversational, story-telling and social qualities were remarkable. His great forte lay in establishing a personal intimacy with every one he met, and in this way he was powerful in electioneering. He chewed immense quantities of tobacco, but never carried the weed himself, and was always begging it of every one he met. His residence was in Henderson, and coming up the Ohio past that place a gentleman overheard a characteristic anecdote of him. A citizen of Henderson, coming on board, fell into conversation with a passenger, who made inquiries about Powell. "He lives in your place, I believe, don't he?" "Yes, one of our old st citizens." "Very sociable man, ain't he?" "Remarkably so." "Well, I thought so; I think he is one of the most sociable men I ever met in my life—wonderfully sociable. I was introduced to him over at Grayson Spring last Summer, and he hadn't been with me ten minutes when he begged all the tobacco I had, got his feet in my lap, and spit all over me—remarkably sociable."

How to Sharpen a Razor.

It is said that the simplest method of sharpening a razor is to put it for half an hour in water to which one twentieth of its weight of muriatic or sulphuric acid has been added, then lightly wipe it off, and after a few hours set on a hone. The acid here supplies the place of a whetstone by corroding the whole surface uniformly, so that nothing further than a smooth polish is necessary. The process never injures good blades, while badly hardened ones are frequently improved by it, although the cause of this remains unexplained.

Sad Death.

The funeral of E. E. Hewitt's little son, Eldridge, was attended by a large concourse of citizens and friends of the family yesterday. The Board of Supervisors adjourned its morning session that the members might be present at the funeral, and business at the depot was partially suspended, allowing the railroad employees under Superintendent Hewitt the same sad privilege. A long line of carriages followed the little child to his last resting place.—L. A. Herald, May 8.

Slightly Personal.

Nesmith, of Oregon, who is a Congressman, gets off a good thing occasionally. He it was who so clearly defined what a Supreme Court is, by saying that it is the Court which has the last guess at a case. We enjoy Nesmith's way of saying things, whether or not we agree with him. Just now he seems to be after Attorney General Williams, and the telegraph reports him as saying, April 25, the following:

The House went into a Committee of the Whole on the Legislative Appropriation Bill.

Mr. Nesmith, of Oregon, moved to strike out from the paragraph relating to the Department of Justice, the item of $1,400 for the care and subsistence of horses, and of $600 for repairs to carriages and harnesses. He spoke of the Attorney-General's $1,600 fraud, and remarked that the lawyers in his State, of the Attorney-General's caliber, rode on fifty-dollar mules. There was, he said, a Spanish proverb to the effect that "If you put a beggar on horseback he will ride to the devil." [Laughter]

Mr. Negley was opposed to the comparison of an officer of the Government to a beggar on horseback.

Mr. Nesmith said, "I simply referred to a mule."

The Chairman—The gentleman from Oregon will be careful to keep in order.

Mr. Nesmith—I was only quoting a Spanish proverb which says "Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." I have no objection to the termination of the journey in that particular direction, but I don't want the people to pay for the transportation. [Laughter]

After further debate the item was stricken out.

Measuring Hay.

To measure the contents of a stack of hay, proceed as follows: If it is a round stack, tapering to a point from the ground, measure the width of half way between the ground and the peak of the stack; multiply this width by itself, and divide by 7854; this will give the the average area of the surface covered by the stack. Then multiply that by the hight from the ground to the point where the width was measured. If these measurements are feet, the sum found is the cubic feet in the stack. If the hay is timothy, orchard grass millet or Hungarian, 500 feet will make a ton, or a cubic eight feet each way. If the stack is very solid and when cut was dead ripe, 350 feet will make a ton, or a cubic of seven feet each way. If the hay is mixed with clover, or light meadow grass, or redtop, 900 feet will be required to weigh a ton, unless it is pressed very hard, when some allowance must be made. These estimates are made from notes of a great many stacks and mows of various kinds, and will give a fair average.

Personal.

Miss Tennie C. Claflin, otherwise Col. Claflin, of the Ninth New York Regiment, and who, withal, is a regiment in herself as a smart business woman, and prepossessing in appearance, visited Gold Hill to day in the capacity of advance agent for Victoria C. Woodhull, who is to arrive in season to lecture at Piper's Opera House next Monday evening, and also as canvassing agent for Woodhull & Claflins Weekly. She was only in town a couple of hours, but during that time managed to transact as much business as seventeen men. She even talked about going through the mines, and will do so before she leaves this part of Uncle Sam's dominions. She was accompanied by her mother, a well-preserved, intelligent lady, about 60 years of age.—Gold Hill News, May 13

Investigating.

The mystery surrounding those unearthly and diabolical disturbances are to be solved, if possible, through human agency and scientific research. It has been decided that Prof. Le Conte, and possibly other scientists, shall make a rigid and thorough investigation in the haunted house, and in the company of the same persons who were there when the phenomena occurred. A phonographic reporter will note the details, and also take down the evidence of the outside parties who were present on the three eventful nights. It is hoped that for the sake of science the cause of these unprecedented phenomena may be ascertained, and if there has been the slightest deception practiced that it may be unearthed.—Oakland Transcript.

Relieved.

Thank heaven, it is over! The mind of the nation once more is tranquil and at rest, and greenbacks have advanced ¾; the Comstock mining share panic is averted, but the elements are disturbed. Bessy Stewart is married—two hearts beat as one, and a third heart, William's, is probably still conjuring up schemes to beat every one. Now, if Nelly and Sartoris would only put an end to the national agony, we would all be happy.—Eureka Cupel.

A Flourishing Burg.

Texarkana, Texas, is about 75 days old, built in a dense forest. It now numbers over 2,000 inhabitants, and there are 200 buildings going up. It contains a general ticket office, two railroads, two express companies, two telegraph lines and forty saloons. It is called the "Enchanted Village of the Lone Star State."

An Extraordinary Demand.

The time of Justice Thompson's Court was taken up yesterday with the case of Briedenstein vs. Schmidt. This action was brought to recover $299 99 as damages for closing up the saloon of plaintiff, under the following circumstances: Alex. Schmidt, who is a brother of the defendant, was a barkeeper of the plaintiff at North Beach. He occupied rooms over the saloon for himself and family, consisting of a wife and child. On May 1st the wife of Schmidt was in a dying condition, and on the following day died. Whilst lying in extremis, the brother in law, and defendant in this action, informed Briedenstein that he would do well to suspend operations in a noisy bowling alley connected with his saloon, informing him of the dying condition of the lady up stairs. After considerable remonstrance, Briedenstein yielded. On the following Monday, the day of the funeral, Briedenstein closed his place for a few hour during the funeral. Afterward Briedenstein commenced this suit against defendant for closing up his place as aforesaid. The trial excited considerable interest, and quite a crowd of attorneys and spectators were attracted to the Court room. Judgment was given for the defendant.—S. F. Chronicle, May 16.

Fast Freight Line.

There is a fast freight line between Owens Lake and Los Angeles, consisting of 56 teams of 12 to 14 mules each. There are 11 stations, and 4 regular teams work between each station. The round trip is made in 22 days, and 370 bars of bullion are shipped over the road each day. This gives some idea of the amount of work done in the mines in Inyo county. The prospects on this side are equally as good, and no doubt will prove to be much better. If the Visalia & Inyo Road Company had their road completed through to Owens Lake, much of the freight would come across to this county, as Owens Lake is only about 90 miles due east of here, and it is 225 miles to Los Angeles.—Tulare Times

A Mutual Astonishment.

Paper money don't count for much in Hayti. Mr. Hazard relates that during his stay in the Republic he ordered a beverage at the bar. Having swallowed the mixture, he inquired the price. "Thirty dollars." Stupified for a moment, the stranger takes a firm resolution; he will not be swindled. So he produces a silver dime and lays it on the counter. "I havn't the change, sir," says the barkeeper. A little while later Mr. Hazard discovered that $1 in gold was equal to $400 in Haytien currency.

A Scaly Vindication.

Gen. Howard escaped conviction by "the skin of his teeth." A Washington dispatch says that the count stood as follows: Generals Sherman, Raymond, Meigs and Miles for acquittal, and Generals McDowell, Pope and Getty for conviction. Which would seem to be a scaly "vindication."

The Distressed South.

The recent (and existing) overflow of the lower Mississippi is occasioning the most widespread suffering, and energetic measures are being taken in various portions of the Union with a view of alleviating it as much as possible. A General Relief Committee for Louisiana has been organized in San Francisco and are working with a will and good promise to send forward every means of relief possible. Woodward tenders the free use of his gardens and the gross proceeds of a pic-nic to be held, there, and a circus and some of the theaters tender benefits for the purpose, besides which as much money as possible being raised by contributions.

Work on Tunnel Locations.

An amendment to the Mining Law of May 10, 1872, has been introduced in Congress, providing that work done on a tunnel for the purpose of tapping a ledge, shall be equivalent to work done upon the ledge itself. Commissioner Drummond, August, 1872, decided that expenditures in running a mining tunnel, before the ledge was struck therein, was not tantamount to expenditures on the lode. This construction was approved by the Acting Secretary of the Interior, and accordingly, if work was not done on the claims themselves, in addition to work on the tunnel, the claims were legally subject to relocation. So says The Mining Press.

Compulsory Education.

No avoiding school after July 1st of this year. A law passed last session of the Legislature makes it compulsory for parents or guardians living within one mile of a school house to send all children in their charge, between the ages of eight and sixteen, to school for at least two-thirds of the time it may be in session, unless otherwise taught the usual branches. A failure to attend to this provision of law entails a fine of $20 for the first offense and $50 for each subsequent one.

A Great Calamity.

A terrible calamity was occasioned in Massachusetts on the 16th by the breaking of three large water reservoirs. Three towns, Williamsburg, Leeds and Haydensville, were almost totally swept away, and some 120 lives lost, besides an immense destruction of property. In numerous instances whole families were drowned together. The cause of the accident is not explained.

No Election This Fall.

Both Houses of Congress have acceded to the resolution of our last Legislature asking that the election for Congressman be by law postponed until the general election in 1875, so if the President signs the bill, as he doubtless will, we will be saved the expense and annoyance of holding an election this Fall merely to choose Congressmen.

School Age.

The age of census children has been changed by the Legislature. On or before the 1st of August of each year, County Superintendents of Schools must make a report to the State Superintendent and Board of Supervisors, of the number of children between the ages of five and seventeen years.

Will Show 'Em Up.

Our independent contemporary, The Havilah Miner, threatens to publish the names of its delinquent subscribers, if they don't pay up. It that event our neighbor will have to attend to its "proofs" a little, or the miserable delinquents wouldn't recognize their own cognomens.

Land Register.

George H. McCallum, Esq., a gentleman of large experience in land office duties, and a man of high character, is to be made Register of the Land Office at this place, vice J. Earl, whose confirmation was indefinitely hung up, for good and substantial reasons.

Not Exempt.

The House of Representatives lately passed a bill declaring that the lands of the Pacific Railroads are subject to State or Territorial taxation from the time the companies were entitled to them, irrespective of the date of the issue of patents.

His Price.

Prof. Silliman lacks considerable of being a silly man in a strictly monetary sense. It is now stated that he received $50,000 for making his report on the condition of the Emma mine, in which the Britishers were so badly bilked.

Mechanics' Institute Fair.

Work on the Mechanics' Institute building, San Francisco, has been commenced. The edifice will be completed on or before the 1st of August.

HOW TO KILL IT.

The Los Angeles papers, particularly The Express and Herald, have done good work in portraying the need and advantages of the proposed Los Angeles & Independence Railroad, and no doubt intend to continue doing so until the proposition becomes a fixed fact. But in one of their later plans, how to make building a railroad easy, they have switched off on a track pretty well calculated to make people believe the business of the road will not justify anything but the cheapest and most temporary road, and in carrying that impression are doing much towards killing off all chances of getting a railroad of any kind. A cheap road is certainly a great desideratum; if possible it ought to be cheap enough so that we, the people directly interested, may be able to own and conduct it without risking too much in the hands of mere speculative capital. If our people can be made to see it in the right light, to know and believe there is money in it, both as an investment as well as in the much larger return to be expected in the way of building up the country, as it inevitably will do, then we believe enough will come forward with their mites and amounts to build a railroad, not a tramway. But if they are made to believe the prospective business and advantages, direct and indirect, are not more than sufficient to justify a mere temporary but costly makeshift, such as is now proposed, practical common sense will impel them to keep their mites and amounts in their pockets.

The new proposition contemplates a wooden railroad or tramway—ties to be laid six feet apart, carrying long timber stringers, these to be covered with quarter inch strap iron, the whole to cost, ready for the rolling stock, some $3,500 per mile—this to constitute the great narrow-guage through thoroughfare to head off or be the counterpoise of the grasping Central and Union Pacific.

This proposition trenches clearly upon the ridiculous, especially as it is assumed that the average rate of speed attainable on wooden rails will be from 10 to 15 miles an hour! The latter is a higher average than that of the Central Pacific, with 50 pound rails, ties two feet apart and a perfect road bed.

In Canada and some other localities, where there is an abundance of the very best timber, these wooden railroads have been found to answer a good purpose; but iron on the stringers is discarded in favor of very wide and heavy wooden rails, not less than eight inches on the face, with wheels of cars and locomotives made to correspond. This kind of rail is superior both for safety, speed and lasting qualities, to those where scrap iron is used, as the tendency of the latter to make "snake heads," particularly on soft timber, condemns its use in all cases where weight and speed of the rolling stock is anywhere near equal to those of an ordinary railroad.

But admitting the wooden railway to be a success in those timbered regions and on short routes, as they all are, there is at least one important condition peculiar to this region to render them of no practical account here—the power of the Summer sun is such that it would be next to impossible to make timbers retain either place or shape, especially if heavy enough to be used without the iron straps, and if these were used then, in addition to the warping of the timber, comes the other unavoidable trouble and danger of the inevitable "snake-heads," which would reduce the average safety speed on this continental thoroughfare to something near four miles an hour.

Allowing such a road built at no greater cost than the engineer's estimates—which are about one-fourth too small to begin with—and moderately successful in operation, its capacity must fall short of the requirements in less than two year's time, by which period the extra cost of its maintenance, added to the original, would most certainly make the total considerably more than that of a first-class narrow-guage iron road, capable of doing four times the business. The cost of preparing the road bed and laying the track of the latter would be somewhat less than for the wooden road, first, because it would require more time to fit and fasten stringers than to merely spike down iron, and, second, the grading for the tramway would be more costly, since the smallest curves admissible would have to be quite as great as for a wide-guage railroad.

In our opinion it is only a waste of of time and chances to give this new proposition serious attention. Such an obvious makeshift cannot be made to command confidence enough to begin with, nor to do the work if completed. We want and need a narrow-guage railroad; nothing less will answer the needs.

We hope the suggestion of The Express [illegible] take at least half a million of the stock will be at once acted upon, and then with such a tangible starter, we belive that Inyo will respond in nearly or quite half as much more. At least with that example it would then be of some avail to put the question to a practical test.

THE MINING LAW—EXTENSION OF TIME.

A bill has been introduced into Congress to give claim-holders one year longer—to-wit: till the tenth of June, 1875—in which to perform the work required by the original law to maintain title to mining (ledge) claims.

The original law of May 10, 1872, provided that on each claim located after the passage of the act until a patent was issued for it, not less than $100 worth of labor should be performed or improvements made each year. On all claims located prior to the passage of the act $10 worth of labor must be performed or improvements made each year for each one hundred feet along the vein.

On the 1st of March, 1873, an amendment to the original act was approved, which extended the time for the first annual expenditure of claims located prior to the passage of this act, to the 10th day of June 1874. As this date is nearly at hand, in many cases the miners have done, or commenced to do the work as required by law. Others, however, will probably wait until the last day before commencing work.

This proposed extension of time will doubtless be a decided convenience to numerous claim-holders who are honestly struggling to develop their property, but are unable to do so for lack of means; but it will be still more so to the thousands of speculating Micawbers who monopolize claims by the dozen for purely speculative purposes. This proposed extension of time will be especially acceptable to the numerous class who will neither "fish nor cut bait," and at the same time by virtue of their unlimited rights under the present United States mining laws manage to exclude those who are willing to do both from vast areas of as good mining ground as we have.

If Congress was as well informed in relation to the claim-holding business of this coast as it ought to be this amendment would not become a law. It ruins the chances of the early development not only of a claim here and there but of whole districts located previous to May 10, 1872. With no limitation as to amount of labor required to prove bona fide intentions, nor no limit of time when, without such bona fides, an abandonment may be looked upon by a new claimant as a fixed fact, capital dare not make and develop any of its own new locations for fear of meeting blackmailing litigation should the claim prove of sufficient value to excite the cupidity of the first locators, who, in practice if not in law, can scarcely make a legal abandonment if they were to try. But should they apparently do so, by will and intent, there are always third parties ready and willing to take the chances of renewing their old title for them, but which would never be asserted as a title but for the fact that the new claimants have expended time and money in giving value to what they thought was their own undisputed property.

It should be noted that the proposed amendment or extension of time, as also the existing one, approved March 1, 1873, extends the time for the required expenditure only to those claims located prior to the 10th of May, 1872, thus giving the preference to the very class of claims that have already been held for years in their natural condition, awaiting a market or a jumper out of whom something may be made. In regard to all claims located since May 10, 1872, the law still requires the expenditure of at least $100 in labor or improvements each year upon each claim; a claim may be fifteen hundred feet or less. Should the proposed amendment not become a law, then the expenditure must be not less than $10 for each hundred feet of all old claims

While Congress is tinkering with the mining laws it would enhance the prospects of mining developments materially by cutting down the present possible maximum of each individual locator—a company cannot locate to exceed 1,500 feet on a ledge, but one person may and generally does constitute the company, and may locate as many claims of 1,500 feet as he can find ledges to stick his name to, and thus a few manage to exclude many others, some of whom would willingly go to work to do something more than merely hold possession for purely speculative purposes. These extensive locators cannot possibly develop their claims, or perhaps any portion of them, and derive little or no benefit, because their extended possession effectually bars all chances of enhancement of any part through the labors of others, that might and often would be expended on some portions of this extent.

CORRALED AT LAST!

Vasquez is captured at last, and now all Southern California rejoices and feels much comforted. On the morning of May 14, Sheriff Rowland received authentic information that the bandit was at "Greek George's" house, only eight miles from the city, and soon had a party on the line of march to attempt his capture. As the Sheriff's movements were certain to be watched, he did not go himself. Albert J. Johnson, Under Sheriff, went in command of the party, consisting of eight persons in all. By stealthy movements the party got within a mile of the house where they had reason to believe the robber was. A Mexican came to where they were concealed and him and his team they captured, making them of great assistance in the execution of a very neat stragetic movement, by which the whole party succeeded in going undiscovered within one hundred yards of the house, from which they could surround it before any one could escape from it. The way this was done was by compelling the Mexican driver under fear of his life, to haul them huddled down in the bottom of the wagon to the desired spot. Vasquez when the door was bursted in, made an attempt to escape through the window into the adjacent willows and tall mustard, but was met by bullets on all sides, receiving a number of wounds, when he smilingly surrendered, saying "You are good men, good men." It was thought for a time that he could not long survive his wounds, and thinking so himself, he began some interesting revelations, which he brought to a close when satisfied his hurts were not fatal. He was soon safely in the city prison, his arrest and confinement creating a most profound sensation throughout the city and county. One of his gang only was secured, but the rest will be forced to flee the country or they will also soon come to grief. As a Chronicle reporter did good service in the capture, that paper will doubtless expand two or three holes more, even if it does not claim a share of the reward. Here is a point or two of interest received by the reporter from the bandit the day after his capture:

"I had just taken off my revolvers and set my rifle down to go into the kitchen and get some dinner when the first alarm came. I had no time for arming myself. I saw the wagon coming up the road, but didn't pay any attention to it. At no time before since the Repetto affair have I been unprepared to fight. I have robbed for twenty years, but I have never killed anybody, and I think they might have given me a show. I tied up twenty men at Coyote Holes, and though a man shot and wounded me there, I did not take his life, though I might have done it easily, for I had him completely at my mercy. I regret being taken in this way, for I always expected to sell my life dearly. Now I suppose I will be hung up like a dog."

The Southern Flood.

A Memphis dispatch of the 13th gives the following in relation to the terrible inundation in the Mississippi Valley:

The Southwestern inundation bids fair to become as disastrous in the State of Mississippi as it already is in Louisiana and Southern Arkansas, where the greater portion of the country is under water. Additional crevasses are reported along the east bank of the Mississippi, and the country in portions of the State of Mississippi is being rapidly submerged.

About daylight yesterday morning a levee broke at the Apperson's plantation, opposite Friar's Point. At last accounts the crevasse was one hundred and fifty yards wide, and the water was spreading over the plantation, one of the finest in that section. The crevasse at Miller's, on the Missouri side, is now six hundred yards wide, and the water in the streets of Friar's Point is three feet deep. Whole families are moving out, and merchants are busy removing their goods. The water is rapidly covering the entire country. Some idea may be formed of the force with which the water passes through this crevasse from the fact that it is tearing up huge cottonwood trees two and a half feet in diameter and covering them over the neighboring plantations. The steamers now all come through the Council Bend cut-off

A Small Matter.

Some people are ready to swear that the earth is precisely 6,000 years old, while Bischof calculates the time for the formation of coal at 9,000,000 of years, and it is not impossible that the world was a hoary-headed old sinner when the formation of coal began. But, after all, there is really so very little difference between 6,000 and 9,000,000 of years that the matter is hardly worth disputing about.—Courier Journal.

Dead.

William Doran, one of the men wounded in the recent shooting scrape at Belmont, died on Saturday last. He was shot in the thigh, and amputation being found necessary, that operation was performed by Dr. Moore, but the patient died soon afterwards. Sutherland, the other man shot, is said to be in a critical condition.—Austin Reveille, May 14.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY VIRTUE OF AN EXECUTION ISSUED OUT of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, in the suit of Paul W. Bennett and Patrick Reddy, Plaintiffs against William Watt, William B. Skidmore, Henry Dexter, John H. Ockershausen, Isaac M. Bull, Henry Edwards and Richard C. Edwards, Defendants, upon a judgment rendered in said Court on the 12th day of May, A. D. 1874, for the sum of thirty-one thousand dollars damages, together with $213 75-100 costs, and interest, duly attested the 13th day of May, A. D. 1874, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of $31,213 75-100 in U. S. gold coin, besides interest and all accruing costs, I have levied on all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or either of them, in and to the following described real property, to-wit:

The Omega property, consisting of the Omega No. 1 lode or mine; the Omega No 2 lode or mine, and the Omega tunnel; the Front lode or mine; the Crowning Glory lode or mine; the Franklin lode or mine; the Alpha lode or mine and tunnel, and the Potosi tunnel—all of said property being situated in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, county of Inyo, State of California, and is held by and standing in the name of William H. Van Arsdale on the records of the county of Inyo, State of California.

Also, the Santa Maria lode or mine, and the Friburg No 1 lode or mine, both situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, county of Inyo, State of California.

Also, all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or either of them, have under and by virtue of a certain sale and certificate of sale made by the Sheriff of the county of Inyo on the 8th day of April A. D. 1874, in and to the Swansea furnace property situated near the head of Owens Lake in the county of Inyo, State of California, and described in said certificate of sale as follows: The works which have been built or purchased by the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company, in the vicinity of Owens Lake, commonly known as the Swansea Works, with all the furnaces, machinery, buildings, fixtures, tools, implements, water courses and water powers, and all the privileges and franchises thereto incident, pertinent and appurtenant, or therewith usually used and enjoyed, together with the appurtenances and any and all rights that said defendants have in any manner in and to said above described property. Also, all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or any of them, in and to all the fractional south-west quarter of the north-east quarter, and the south half of lot number one in the north-west quarter, and north half of lot number one in the south-west quarter, and fractional north west quarter of south west quarter of Section number thirty-one, in Township number seventeen, south of Range number thirty-seven East, Base and Meridian of Mount Diablo, together with all the rights, water privileges, right of way and right to use the waters of the creek known as Cottonwood creek; and also all the rights of way for constructing a flume on said creek; also, all the rights and title to the flume constructed and being constructed on said creek known as the Stevens flume. Also, the saw mill known as Stevens' saw mill, situated in the Sierra Nevada mountains, on the waters of said creek, all of said property situate, lying and being in the county of Inyo, State of California.

Notice is hereby given that on MONDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, A. D. 1874, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 5 o'clock P. M., to-wit: at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House, in the town of Independence, county of Inyo, State of California, I will sell all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or any of them, in and to the above described real property, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the Plaintiffs' demand, with interest and cost, at public auction, to the highest bidder or bidders, for cash, in United States gold coin, in parcels as follows:

1st. The Omega tunnel property, consisting of the Omega No. 1 lode or mine, the Omega No. 2 lode or mine, and the Omega tunnel.
2d. The Santa Maria lode or mine, and the Friburg No. 1 lode or mine.
3d. The Crowning Glory lode or mine.
4th. The Front lode or mine.
5th. The Alpha lode or mine, and tunnel.
6th. The Franklin lode or mine.
7th. The Potosi tunnel.
8th. The Swansea Works, with all furnaces, buildings, machinery, fixtures, tools, implements, water courses and water powers, with the appurtenances.
9th. The Stevens saw mill, flume and land, situate, lying and being on Cottonwood creek, with all water courses and water powers, rights of way and rights and privileges, with the appurtenances.

District Court.

The time of this Court was principally occupied this week in hearing Reddy vs. the Boushey Co., and Martin Mee vs. the same. The last was for labor performed in running a tunnel on the Boushey mine; judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $3,040. The first mentioned suit was to determine the right of ownership between the Empire Mining Co. and the Boushey Co. to the ledge covered by the Boushey Co's tunnel, the same tunnel involved in the other suit. Boushey had originally made his location with the assent of the Empire, it being understood by the latter that he was to run south from the first location, which was also the southern limit of the Empire claim. But instead of doing so it is alleged that he began his tunnel some 750 feet too far north, nearly opposite the Empire tunnel, about 350 feet distant from it, the two tunnels running nearly parallel, but, as is claimed by the Empire, both on or for the same ledge, or the one originally located by that company. The Boushey Co. deny the allegations in toto, claiming to have located and to be on a different ledge, and entirely clear of the surface area claimed by the other. The evidence in one or two important points was in direct contradiction, so when the matter was submitted to the jury they found themselves totally unable to agree, and were finally discharged, standing five for the Empire to two for the Boushey. The case goes on the docket for a hearing at the November term. The value of the property is wholly prospective, but it is much to be regretted that all chances of determining that value should of necessity be staved off indefinitely through delays and expenses of law. The Court adjourned for the term on Thursday evening.

The Cerro Gordo Water Works.

The Cerro Gordo Water Company after all their trouble and expensive accidents, have got their works in good working order and for near two weeks past have furnished the town a bountiful supply of excellent water, and at very reasonable rates. The price at the pipes is four cents per gallon, one cent added for delivery at any point in the town. We are not in possession of sufficient data to attempt a description of this highly important work, but we hear the total cost will approximate $120,000. It is a matter for general rejoicing that this plucky company have finally succeeded in their undertaking, which promises to be of invaluable benefit in giving Cerro Gordo in due time a status as a mining camp, scarcely second to any other on the coast.

Personals.

Col. J. G. Howard and Judge Reed left yesterday morning for their respective homes. Judge A. C. Hanson got back from the East Thursday evening. Mr. S. Boushey left the same evening for Los Angeles. Mr. Boushey has been very unfortunate in his undertakings to help develop our country. He is out and injured to the extent of about $15,000, and now quits the county without a dollar. The turn the affairs have taken in which he has been interested in is scarcely more unfortunate for him than for the interests of the county generally.

Will Locate Here.

A. S. Addis, who made quite a reputation here last Summer as a photographic artist, is now en route from Los Angeles for this place, where with his family he proposes to permanently locate. There is an interesting point to be noticed in this connection. His daughter, only about 12 years of age, according to the Los Angeles papers, is a poetical writer without a peer of her years. Some of her effusions are not excelled by any writer.

How's This.

We are told that the Justice at Big Pine required the Indian prisoners arrested for the murder of their medicine man, to pay the costs of their own arrest, some $25. The prisoners' friends came into Court one by one and anteed their quarters and halves until the required sum was raised. This may be all right, but it don't have a pretty look.

Races.

The half-mile race between a Benton horse and the Cochran colt, which has been on the tapis for several weeks and has been once or twice postponed, is to come off at Bishop Creek to-day. The stakes are $600 a side, with plenty of backers for both horses remaining. We prophecy that about half these backers will come out losers.

"Home Again."

That is the song that our superior friend Josiah probably thought he ought to sing on his return here during the week. Should it be required we would suggest a suitable refrain to go with it—something besides "I'm a soldier of the Rhine."

Jeweler.

Mr. Keltner, late of Anaheim, a gentleman of advanced years, is preparing to establish himself here in the jeweler and watchmaking line. He comes well recommended as a workman, and will for a time, at least, find plenty to do.

Sentenced to Death.

At 9 o'clock last Saturday night Judge Reed ordered E. P. Welch to stand up and receive his sentence. The order was obeyed by the prisoner not without a perceptible effort to make his limbs do their duty, yet otherwise with coolness and perfect self command. Just previous a motion had been made for a new trial, submitted without argument, and overruled, and in answer to the usual question by the Court, "Have you any reason to show why sentence should not be pronounced?" Col. Howard quickly responded "We have none." His Honor then proceeded to read the formula of sentence, reciting the main points of the crime, for the punishment of which he could but perform his duty and condemn the prisoner to a death by the hangman's rope, fixing the time of execution for the 10th day of July ensuing. The prisoner maintained his standing position and apparently imperturbable demeanor sometime after the Judge closed his portentious remarks, and until informed that he could take his seat. It was an impressive scene; probably there was not one out of the large number present but who felt a thrill of pity to see this miserable murderer ordered to his feet only to be solemnly told that his days on earth were but few, very few and surely numbered It was perhaps the first moment when the doomed man fully realized the awful consequences—though yet but pending—of that murderous resolve which caused him to send an unoffending soul to eternity. After taking his seat, the prisoner showed that he begun to realize the hopelessness of his chances, and notwithstanding the whispered hopes based upon the chances of law, Welch yet plainly shows that he feels there is no hope for him. His counsel, however, has by no means given up the contest yet, nor will not until the Supreme Court affirms the proceedings, or a different verdict is secured at the end of a new trial. The chances for a new trial are very small, but it is possible they may serve the purpose. We shall, however, defer comments upon them now.

Stage Matters.

Under the Assignee, J. M. Meredith of Aurora, John L. Bourland of Bishop Creek takes the management of the Northern stage line, and the creditors thereof can rest satisfied that it is in excellent hands. Mr. Bourland thinks that the entire proceedings in bankruptcy will all be closed up within six months, the shortest time in which it can be done under the law. We have an idea that if the Court at Virginia had appointed a professional Assignee this business would not have been settled up under two or three years, in which case, it is needless to add, the creditors would not have realized to any perceptible extent. Mr. Frank Cluggage, a widely known stage man of our neighboring State of Nevada, was here during the week, preparing to fulfil mail contracts in which he will be interested from and after July. It is said that he will run the Gellett contract from Aurora to Carson besides, and thus make a through line of 285 miles from Carson to Cerro Gordo.

The Pioneers.

At a meeting of the Pioneers held on the 2d instant, it was decided to change the time of celebration from the 20th of May to the 17th of June. At that date they propose to have a Pioneer dinner, to which all Pioneers of the Valley are invited. The appointed Committee of Arrangements consists of T. F. A. Connelly, J. B. Rowley and Thomas May, to whom all members desiring seats will please give timely notice as to the number required. The Recording Secretary, J. J. Moore, was authorized by the meeting to take signatures to the Constitution till June 10th ensuing. After transacting some other business of an unimportant nature, the meeting adjourned to the next regular day, which is the first Wednesday in September, 1874. The society membership now numbers 38.

Thanks.

At the request of the committee of ladies, Mrs. J. R. Hughes, Miss Lee, Wayland and Mrs. Adaline Chalfant, selected to solicit subscriptions in aid of the Independence Sunday School Library, we hereby return thanks to each and all for their liberal donations. The total amount received was nearly $100. We may remark on our own account, that we hear that the "crusaders" scarcely met with a refusal during the whole time that they were on the war path. That none may feel themselves slighted, particularly the few who were not at home during that critical moment, we are further authorized to state that they were not designedly overlooked, and that there is still a chance for them to get their names on the very respectable list.

"Decoration Day."

We are pleased to call attention to the fact that Decoration Day, May 30th, is to be duly observed at Bishop Creek, in accordance with the custom of the G. A. R. It is a beautiful and appropriate ceremony, calculated to call out the best feelings of the heart, notwithstanding its foundation rests upon the most melancholy page of our national history.

For Mormondom.

Monday next J. L. Darrah proposes to start, per hurricane deck of a mule, for Brigham's dominions. Thence, if he does not decide to take stock in the Order of Enoch, he goes to Prescott, Arizona, where he will become a stage man.

Arrived at the Post.

Mrs. Dr. C. B. White and Major Wingard, Paymaster, U. S. A., arrived at Camp Independence on the evening of the 21st instant, by the Northern stage.

Indian Murderers— Two of Them Held to Answer.

BIG PINE, May 21.

MESSRS. EDITORS—A day or two ago information was received by Duncan Campbell, Justice of the Peace at this place, that the Indian Doctor, "Little Joe" had been murdered by his tribe for malpractice in his profession. Mr. J. W. McMurry, S. J. McMurry and W. Criber started out to where the body was reported to be buried, and after exhuming it, they identified the remains as those of the doctor. Two deep gashes were found in his neck and one in his breast; his head was crushed as with some blunt instrument, like a stone. Upon information received as their whereabouts, Mr. J. W. McMurry proceeded to Fish Springs after the murderers, and arrested two of them known as Indian Big Fish Spring Joe and Indian Jack.

During the examination, held before Justice Campbell, it was shown that Indian Sapsey and Bohoepe were present at the killing, and saw Big Fish Spring Joe stab the medicine man with a pocket knife, once on each side of the neck and once in the breast. This occurred on Sunday, May 17th. After the stabbing, Indian Jack mashed in the victim's skull with a stone. The accused were held to answer for murder.

Trouble was anticipated, and Capt. A. B. MacGowan having been called upon, came up with a detachment on the night before the examination, and with his men was on hand if required. On his return he took the prisoners to the Sheriff, at Independence.

INFORMANT.

The Funeral.

Business engagements prevented us from accepting an invitation to attend the obsequies of Josiah's long handled war hatchet, which was to be decently interred last night, and therefore we are unable to give any particulars of the ceremonies other than that they were becomingly lugubrious. What made them especially lugubrious was the fact that the chief mourners had but just recently discovered that this long handled implement of warfare against the Treasury was mostly of sounding brass mixed with poor steal, good for noise or to slash pumpkins on a manure pile, but totally unequal to a contest with honest metal. It occasioned the chief engineers a sickening sensation of the diaphragm when they realized that it was only the stain of pumpkins and manure piles on its brassy cheeks which they had been led to believe was human gore from hard fought fields, the noise of which they once thought they heard, and thus it was they deemed it best to bury it deeply away. To this end the runners went forth to gather the clans; but the clans were offish—wasn't on it largely, so but a select few gathered round to view the interesting remains. Not a bottle was tapped, Not a Treasury note was seen, As to the dramparts they hurried.—Cause why? The steal in the composition of the implement to be so deeply buried had always been overlapped by the brass, a condition of affairs poorly calculated to josier the requisite number of such notes for a very brilliant funeral, and hence no bottles were tapped, but little was to be said, and it only remained to gently and quietly put the deceptive thing deep enough down to prevent its former believers from again breaking their own shins over its handle, which they now concede, always was too long for their champion to wield without more damage to the friends in the rear than to the enemies in front. So the hatchet was buried; had a good funeral, well enjoyed by those who were not there.

Store at the Post.

Sometime ago J. Cohn took a notion that he didn't want to keep store at the Post any longer, so he sold out to his partner, J. Harris, and took a rest. But reconsidering the matter he thinks that's the place after all, and there his numerous friends will find him with a fine stock of staple and fancy goods, which he proposes to sell just as cheap if not cheaper than anybody. See his new "ad."

A Reception.

We understand that Capt. Joe Bowers, the veteran "Chief" of all the Piutes, will on next Monday evening, at 7 o'clock, at the Masonic Hall, be tendered a public reception and presentation, at the hands of our citizens. A social dance, under the management of Chris Engle, Dr. Blair and others, will follow—the party to be under the auspices of the Dancing Club.

Columbus.

From what The Miner has to say about it we infer that the business prospects of Columbus and vicinity are improving somewhat. Wetherill's mill, in Hutchison's canyon, will probably start up the 1st of June....The travel to Columbus on the Benton line has greatly increased in the past month.... A large number of big teams are going to Teel's Marsh to load with borax....The Northern Belle mine at Columbus is now in fine shape for working, immense bodies of ore having been uncovered in the mine. This is regarded as the leading mine of the district....Gen. Page, a well known mining man, has gone to Lida Valley to wake up the dormant interests of that locality....J. S. Jamieson, of Columbus, and M. A. Murphy, of Aurora, announce themselves as candidates for District Judge.

LETTER FROM BENTON.

BENTON, May 20.

MESSRS. EDITORS: After a sojourn of a few days in the neighboring country on a business calling, in which we paid a passing visit to Fish Lake Valley, Columbus and back to Benton, via. Hutch's Canyon. We found the country, generally speaking, in a flourishing and prosperous condition. The valley farmers have finished sowing their cereals, and are now busily engaged irrigating and herding off stock. In this portion of the country no stock died from the severity of the Winter or scarcity of feed, while the stockmen of Big Meadows, Sweetwater, Round Valley and Bishop Creek lost heavily from their herds. White sage and bunch grass from last year is found all through the valley, but more abundantly on the west side of the valley. Columbusites all feel sanguine that business is much better now than a month ago, and improving. Yet money is very scarce, and likely to remain so for the Summer months. Why money matters are so close, and dollars and cents so scarce among such an enterprising and ambitious populace, where borax and silver bars are produced by the ton, is a matter of financial mystery we are not able to solve at present.

Leaving the city of the desert to the scorching sun, we made good time to Hutch's Canyon, and up the same to the (Wetherill's mine), where we met T. A. Cutter and P. G. Kelley. Mr. Wetherill not being present, and we were kindly taken care of by the above gentlemanly miners. The mine never looked better than it does at present. It is now assuming an angle dip of about 40° pitching south; some thirty feet of a face is exposed at one place in a solid body, measuring from twenty-four to forty inches in thickness, and all first-class milling ore. Some six or eight miners are here engaged taking out the argentiferous ores. After a pleasant night's rest in the jaws of this romantic canyon, we were off for Benton.

INDIAN QUEEN LEDGE

Calling at

we met Mr. John Howell, who has just arrived from the Bay to take charge of the machinery and furnace of the mill the coming Summer. This mill, though small, is an excellent piece of property, located in the midst of a dense forest of pinyon pine and near the bank of a running stream of water, say one hundred inches miners' measure. By some miscalculation the millwright unfortunately made a serious blunder by putting into the mill one of Bryant's four-stamp iron batteries. I am informed that it is getting out of repair constantly. In connection there is a Stevensen amalgamating pan and a Varney improved settler, with one of White's revolving furnaces, and with Mr. Howell's numerous improvements, the machinery is practically and economically arranged. The mill at present is undergoing repairs, and will be ready to run by the first of next month.

ARRIVING AT BENTON

we heard of the death and burial of Mr. Ross' eldest son. The young man was subject to epileptic fits, and required strict attention at certain times. He remained out over his usual time, when Mr. Ross became uneasy and went in search of him, and in a few minutes his dead body was found in the creek, a short distance below the dwelling. It is supposed that while he was endeavoring to cross the stream he fell into the water under an attack of this fearful disease, and drowned. He was about twenty-two years of age, and has been more or less troubled with the disease since childhood.

The engineer of

got up steam last Saturday to test the engine, pumps and piping. The whistle put forth its resonant peals at noon and evening, and all moved off well, to the entire satisfaction of the machinist and proprietor. In about three weeks the battery will be ready to drop; then look out for more trade bits.

BUTTER.

The Borax Miner talks back. We can hardly give him credit of being a philanthropist or akin to benevolence, since patent butter fell in the market. He little thinks he is wasting his sweetness on the desert air, or putting his quaint substance afloat to the effusiveness of our retired British General (one of the chief horticulturists of this place). Garden sass and peanut stands strike the General's dignity with disgust and a terror of revenge, as much so as patent butter has its telling effect on the champion of The Miner. Nevertheless, the General will exchange garden sass for patent butter, providing The Miner's champion forks over that little bill "you know," for fruit and peanuts; otherwise hostilities go on.

CONTRIBUTOR.

The Tilly Case.

John Tilly, the man arrested as being the outrager and murderer of the little girl over in Kern county some weeks ago, has been examined before Judge Colby at Bakersfield during the past two weeks and has been adjudged not guilty. Forty-five witnesses were very rigidly examined, counsel having all desired latitude, and they not only utterly failed to throw a reasonable implication upon Tilly, but also failed to elucidate the horrible mystery in any manner. It now appears to be a matter of surprise to the local papers that suspicion ever should have been directed against the party tried, as his previous character was totally at variance with such a deed, while the assumed grounds of suspicion have proved to be nothing in this supposed exception to a former good record.

The Cerro Gordo Narrow-Guage.

[From The San Bernardino Guardian.]

That the projected narrow-guage railway from Los Angeles to Cerro Gordo, will run via the Cajon Pass, is certain, at least if Los Angeles consults her best interests, and the saving of time and money are any objects with the capitalists who will furnish funds for the enterprise. Mr. Potter, an experienced mountaineer, who is perfectly familiar with the topography of the country between Cerro Gordo and Los Angeles, assures us that the Cajon route is at least 80 miles nearer to Los Angeles than the Santa Clara route. Besides there are no topographical difficulties in the way. The Cajon grade slopes gradually and presents no engineering difficulties. Run the road by the Cajon, and Los Angeles will secure in perpetuity the entire San Bernardino trade. Again there is a most important argument in favor of the Cajon relative to the advantages which Panamint will gain thereby. By the Cajon route the Panamint settlements can be supplied with lumber direct from Holcomb Valley, an important consideration to that rapidly growing young settlement. The Cajon route will tap both, the rich and extensive mineral sections—the Cerro Gordo and San Bernardino—which Los Angeles now claims as her back country; the other route will only tap one. The Cajon road will unite in iron bonds Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Inyo; the other road will leave San Bernardino isolated and compel our trade to gravitate toward Anaheim. The Cajon road will make San Bernardino integrally a suburb of Los Angeles; the other road will completely sever them commercially. It is for Los Angeles to determine which she will adopt. The route which must be most beneficial to herself—the Cajon—must also be most beneficial to San Bernardino.

Sensible Girl.

The Indianapolis Journal pays this compliment to Miss Stewart, recently married at Washington in the house of her father, the Nevada Senator:

In these days of foolish display a good word must be said for Miss Stewart, daughter of Senator Stewart, who was married in Washington lately. To begin with, the bride is said to be one of the most sensible as well as beautiful young ladies in Washington. She sews, cooks, markets for the family, and is versed in every useful accomplishment. Her wedding cards, eschewing the silly custom of the times, had no monogram. The wedding was in her father's house, at an early hour, and followed by a good, old-fashioned dance. There was but one bridesmaid, the bride's sister. The bridal trousseau was purchased entirely in Washington, and every article of it made at home, under the personal supervision of the bride and her mother. Finally, the newly wedded couple do not make a "tour," but settle down at once to common-sense happiness. All this is refreshing.

L. A. & I. R. R.

A meeting of citizens interested in this road was held at the bank of Temple & Workman last night. Some general discussion occurred concerning the employment of Mr. James Crawford, lately connected with the Texas Pacific Railroad, to make the preliminary surveys of the road, but no definite action was taken.—L. A. Herald, May 17.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celebrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:
Saturday,.....May 23, 1874.

—The champion compositor holds a case on The Detroit Times. He is not noted for his dexterity in picking up the shining metals, but for his persistence in following copy. He had an "ad" which read, "Wanted—A new milch cow, for which a liberal price will be paid." This cow was purchased after a while, and the citizen who ordered the advertisement called at the office and stated that he wanted a hired girl, and asked to have "girl" inserted for "cow." The change was made, and one can imagine the feelings of the advertiser as he read the three or four lines over.

—An hour of vice is as long as an hour of virtue; but the difference which follows upon good actions is infinite from that of ill ones. The good, though it diminishes our time here, yet it lays up a pleasure for eternity, and will recompense what it taketh away with plentiful return at last. When we trade with virtue we do but buy pleasure at the expense of time; so it is not so much a consuming of time as an exchange.

—A Nebraska journal invitingly says: "Who says farmers can not get rich in this State? Fifteen years ago a young man came to this State without a dollar in the world. Last week he went out of the State, carrying with him the sum of one dollar and thirty-eight cents, the savings of only fifteen years of frugal life. Come West, young man, come West!"

—The Madison Times prints this sensible paragraph: "Correspondents will oblige us very materially if, in their articles, they will confine themselves to the use of either 'we' or 'I.' The indiscriminate use of both is vexatious. Neither is it necessary to quote every other word and italicise the rest."

—A. C. Meeker writes to The Stockton Leader, and says he has found a remedy for "curled leaf," that at present is affecting peach trees throughout the State. He says that it the bark of the tree is slit, from the top to the bottom of the trunk, that the tree will recover and the fruit will mature.

—The editor of a Western paper, who is now seventy-six years old, says that he likes to sit up with a girl just as well as he did when he was twenty, though he owns it is a little hard on his eyes after 3 o'clock in the morning.

—An English Judge, Baron Alderson, on being asked to give his opinion as to the proper length of a sermon, replied, "Twenty minutes, with a leaning to the side of mercy."

—Sixteen years ago Tom Kenyon went to Kansas City with a cent, and the other day he signed a check for sixteen thousand dollars. He signed it with another man's name.

—Butler will be fifty-six years old next November. The proposal to make the anniversary of his birth a day of national fasting and prayer excites much enthusiasm.

—There are about three and a half millions of unmarried women in England, above the age of fifteen, who are engaged in specific occupations, and are earning money.

—Are blacksmiths who are making a living by forging, or carpenters, who do a little counter-fitting, any worse than men who sell iron and steel for a living?

—The Ohio Legislature has introduced a bill fixing a fine of from five to thirty dollars for pointing any kind of fire-arms at a person, "loaded or unloaded."

—A custom house man writes that he has heard ladies of refinement, wealth, position and education lie a customs' officer out of countenance.

—Col. Tom Scott says his reputation and fortune shall be risked on the completion of the Texas Pacific Railroad.

—A Georgia editor was bitten by a dog, "being evidently mistaken for a bone."

—Voltaire describes the happy man as one who considers himself so.

—"Letting off sleep," is a little boy's definition of snoring.

—Two heads are better than one—especially in a barrel.

A Grange Burial.

[From The Leavenworth Times, March 8.]

The first burial of a member of the Patrons of Husbandry within the bounds of the Order that has come to our notice took place day before yesterday at Kicapoo, when the remains of Henry Bolin were consigned to their last resting place with all the pomp and funeral pageant of the Granger burial service. Mr. Bolin was a prominent member and the attendance was very large, some four hundred persons being present. The programme was about as follows:

On leaving the residence of the deceased the hearse which contained the remains was flanked on either side by three pall-bearers, who walked with uncovered heads and regalia draped in mourning. Following the hearse came the relatives of the deceased, and next marched the sisters of the Order, clad in full regalia. The brothers came next, and following them the vast concourse of people, who had come from far and near to witness the ceremonies. The remains were first taken to the church where a priest went through the service peculiar to the Catholic Church, of which deceased was a member. When the exercises had been concluded the procession took up its march for the cemetery, where the Granger funeral rites were performed. The coffin was placed on supports directly over the open grave and remained there till the impressive and interesting service was concluded. G. B. Coffin, Master of the Franklin Grange, conducted the ceremonies.

When the brothers and sisters of the Grange of which deceased was a member had assembled about the grave, the Master read a selection from the burial ritual, followed by a second selection by the Chaplain, and then the members repeated slowly and solemnly the Lord's prayer, closing with a beautiful prayer. The brothers of the Order then stepped to the grave and threw into the opening several bouquets of flowers and evergreens. A short but powerful address was next delivered by the Chaplain. While the coffin was being lowered a beautiful and soul-inspiring hymn was sung, and during the singing the sisters showered bouquets of flowers upon the descending coffin until it reached the box at the bottom of the grave. The Master then sprinkled a portion of the dirt thrown from the grave over the coffin, and the service closed with the solemn benediction of the Chaplain.

Taken throughout, the ceremonies were very beautiful and impressive. This is the first burial of a Granger in the county, and if we are correctly informed, in the State—that is, with the ceremonies of the Order.

You'll Never Find a Better Friend.

When Jebbard Beise, the harper, hung himself a few days ago at his house on the Hamilton road, a favorite but uncouth looking dog that he had taught many tricks and treated long as a companion, demonstrated his grief by crowding close to the body, licking the face and hands and whining piteously. When the undertaker came the animal was disposed to attack him, and it was with extreme difficulty that he was removed and confined in an adjoining room. The day of the funeral the dog's lamentations were louder even than before, and although it is not known how he saw the proceedings, he jumped through the closed window and followed to the hearse. Unsuccessful attempts were made to drive him back, but he managed to keep close to the hearse until it started, and then he was allowed to trot behind it all the way to Spring Grove. At the gate he threatened to attack the keeper and continued with the cortege to the grave. When the earth was thrown the poor dog howled again, and when all was over he sorrowfully departed with the mourners. —Cincinnati Gazette.

Evidently Insane.

It is said that when Gen. Francis A. Walker was appointed Superintendent of the Census he had the word "emoluments" erased from his commission, consenting to serve upon the condition only that he should receive no pay. We have known men to be sent to the insane asylum for eccentricities far less glaring than that.

How the Dutchman Was "Mistooked."

[From The Virginia Enterprise.]

A day or two since several Comstockers, who were seated in one of our breweries sipping their lager, began in a boastful way to tell of the great men for whom they had been mistaken. One stated that while traveling on one occasion through the State of New York, a gentleman came into the cars, and walking up to him slapped him familiarly on the back, exclaiming, "Why, Mr. Astor, how do you do?" Another stated that upon getting off at Aspinwall, when on his way to California a few years ago, a gentleman had rushed up to him, seized him by the hand, and cried, "Commodore Vanderbilt, it gives me great pleasure to meet you here, sir." When these stories were being told, it was observed that a Dutchman seated near the party was growing quite uneasy. He listened very attentively to the conversation, hitching his chair gradually nearer the group of men of remarkable appearances, and showing evident signs of anxiety to contribute his experience to that which had already been related. At last he saw an opening and thus told his story:

"Well, yentlemen, dot reminded me of dot time ven I first gone to Cincinnaddi. I vos in my to Cincinnaddi dere on one of dem steamboats. Well, I comes dare to Cincinnaddi, and when der boats stop I valk down der plank to der levee mit mine garpet sacks in mine hand ond mine pig meerschaum pipes in mine mout, ven yoost den one yentleman—he was a fine lookin' feller—he rush up to me, and mit astonishment tooked me by the hand ond cry out: 'Yesus Christ! how you vas?'"

Church and State.

[From The New York Times.]

We hear from Romanists journals in America of the godliness of education which is not controlled by the priests; of the duty of the Catholics to break up the public schools; of the devoted spirit and pure religion of the Order of Jesuits, and of the desirability that the Pope should exercise greater influence in this Republic and its future development. If we are not mistaken, the American Roman Catholic organs defended the syllabus, the proclamation of infallibility and the encyclical of March 7, to the Bishops of Austria. The Pope has warmer admirers here than he has in Italy or Austria. The Order of the Jesuits has gained a new foothold on this continent, and by the aid of political combinations has acquired possession of considerable property. There are even political journals in this city who are their mouth-pieces. Now we in America want no such Middle Age persecution of Jesuits as the ardent liberal Catholics of Austria or the free-thinking Protestants of Prussia demand. We know that the best corrective of priest-craft and superstition is education. So long as we can keep the free schools pure and secular, we fear neither priest, Jesuit or Pope. We know that persecution only increases errors and heresies. We trust in a free press, free schools and a free church. But our more intelligent and liberal Catholics ought ever to remember that, like their brethern in Austria, they have an equal interest with ourselves in the secular character of the schools, in the separation of Church and State and the discouragement of such associations as the "Order of the Jesuits."

The New "Insecticide."

Hot alum water is a new suggestion as an insecticide. It will destroy red and black ants, cockroaches, chinch bugs, spiders and all the crawling pests which infest our houses. Take two pounds of alum and dissolve it in three or four quarts of boiling water; let it stand on the fire until the alum disappears; then apply it with a brush, while nearly boiling hot, to every joint and crevice in your closets, pantry, shelves, bedstead and the like. Brush the crevices in the floor of the skirting or mop-boards, if you suspect they harbor vermin. If, in whitewashing a ceiling, plenty of alum is added to the lime, it will also serve to keep insects at a distance. Cockroaches will flee the paint which has been washed in cool alum water. Sugar barrels and boxes can be freed from ants by drawing a chalk mark round the top, which must be unbroken or they will creep over it, but a continuous chalk line an inch in width will set their depredations at naught. Powdered alum or borax will keep the chinch bug at a respectable distance, and travelers should always carry a package of it in their hand-bags, to scatter over and under their pillows, in places where they have reason to suspect the presence of such bed-fellows.

Novel Application of Power.

In the erection of the Insane Asylum at Napa, a small hydraulic elevator, similar in principle to the contrivance used to move sewing machines and for other light work, is to be employed for hoisting all the brick, mortar and other materials. Water under a pressure of 150 feet furnishes the motive power. The aperture through which the water enters the machine is only about five-eighths of an inch in diameter. The saving of labor and expense will, in a building of such magnitude, amount to many thousands of dollars. No doubt the same inexpensive power will also be found convenient for many purposes after the buildings are completed.

LETTER FROM SACRAMENTO.

SACRAMENTO, May 14, 1874.

DEAR "INYO:" The beaming countenance of your plethoric sheet has just smiled upon me—the first time in four weeks—and I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of the issue of May 2. The Lord sakes, don't you need a railroad though! Nearly two weeks in getting mail-matter from Independence. No wonder people don't go there to settle. Its a longer and harder trip than that to New York City, and not nearly as much to see after you have arrived. If your people do not improve the present opportunity of they ought to be eternally left out in the cold—or go to that other place, the climate of which is said to be the reverse of cold. The completion of the projected road from Los Angeles to Independence is all that is needed to make the Inyo country the Golconda of the Pacific coast. I have been traveling throughout California, Nevada and Utah for several years in hunting mines and I must say, after having visited your country, I believe you have of mineral where feet and pounds can be found in any of the other camps I have visited.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the "Member from Inyo" for the tact displayed by him in getting when it is known how hard others, connected with the C. P. R. R., were working for the same franchise; and the fact that that company was so anxious to obtain the charter ought to be enough to convince anybody that it is a good thing, for that corporation don't invest in non-paying ventures. In truth I cannot refrain from adding my evidence to that already cumulative in regard to the active and honorable course of Mr. Parker during the entire session of the Legislature. I had the honor to board in the same house with him during the session, and I know of no member who was more attentive to the business pending or more desirious of serving all his constituents for the advancement of the and of the State. This is not intended as flattery, for he does not represent my politics, nor did I vote for him, but "honor to whom honor is due."

THIS RAILROAD BILL THROUGH,

PROSPECTIVE.

Numerous inquiries are daily made of me in regard to Inyo, and quite an increase to your population may be expected from this county as soon as the building of your railroad is secured.

QUIET.

Since the adjournment of the Legislature Sacramento is quiet, but I predict that a healthier business and better times will follow the harvest of the plenteous grain crop this Fall than we have had for years.

Blue Sky and White Clouds.

The ethereal blue color of the sky is due to minute particles of matter which float in the air. Were these particles removed, the appearance of the sky would be dead black. It is a fact in optics that exceedingly fine portions of matter disperse or scatter the blue rays of light, coarser portions scatter red rays, still coarser portions scatter all rays, making white light. An atmosphere is full of aqueous vapor, the particles of which diffuse white light in all directions. When these particles are enlarged, they become visible in the form of clouds. The vapor particles of the white clouds are supposed to be finer and lighter than those of the dark clouds. That the diffusion of light in our atmosphere, the blue coloring of the sky and the colors of the clouds, are due to the presence of matter floating in the air, has been conclusively proven by Tyndall. On passing a beam of sunlight through a glass tube the beam is rendered brilliantly visible by the reflection of light from the dust particles floating in the air contained in the tube. But on removing the dust particles, which is done by filtering the air by cotton wool, or causing the air to pass over a flame, the beam of light is no longer visible in the tube.—Scientific American.

Meanness.

A curious case, illustrative of the magnificent meanness of certain kinds of human nature, has lately come before a Brooklyn Court. Some seventeen years since one William Baker erased a name from a will, substituting his own. By this he fell heir to $100,000 worth of property, upon which as collateral he raised $60,000 borrowed money. He now refuses to pay the $60,000 because the will was fraudulent, brazenly admitting that he substituted his own for another man's name. Under the limitation statutes he cannot be punished. In all Court records from the earliest times we doubt whether an example of meanness and criminal sharpness equal to this can be found.

No Hurry.

An old man from the country called at Mr. John C. Palmer's to-day for his silver watch which he had left there seven years ago for repairs. He got it, and it "kicked all right," as he expressed it. He departed in peace with a light heart.—Raleigh Sentinel.

Adopts a New Constitution.

By a majority of 135,000, Switzerland recently adopted a new Constitution. According to its provisions, education is made compulsory and secular, and put entirely under the authority of the Government. It provides for a central University, to which the adherents of all creeds shall be admitted. It was thought necessary to introduce an article to the effect that the Government should protect the rights of all its citizens against the encroachments of ecclesiastical authority.—Sacramento Union.

Astronomical.

In 1874 there is to be two eclipses of the sun, neither visible in the United States; and two eclipses of the moon, the first not visible here, and the last a total eclipse of four or five hours' duration, on the nights of October 24th and 25th. But the strangest phenomenon will be the transit of Venus over the sun's disc, which will be visible only in parts of Asia, Africa, Australia and the Sandwich Islands. The last occurrence of this phenomenon was in 1796.

Realistic Response.

A literal-minded younster was picked up by a visitor of the family, who dandling him on his knee said, "I wish I had this little boy; I think there's money in him." To which promptly responded the child, "I know there is, for I swallowed a cent when I was at grandma's the other day."

FOR A TELEGRAPH.

There is a movement now on foot to raise by subscription the sum of $15,000, to be applied toward the construction of a telegraph line from some point of connection with one of the main Southern lines. Most of the leading citizens of this place have signed with a fair liberality, and Lone Pine, Cerro Gordo and other connecting points will probably do as well. THE INDEPENDENT has faithfully advocated the advantages of a telegraph for this region, and discovers in this effort good prospect of final success, after some further and necessary preliminaries have been arranged and understood. Before urging action in the matter as it stands at present, we would like to see it put in a more business-like shape. Contributors are asked to pay amounts of money, from $5 upwards, waieh sums are to be returned in telegraphing—which is all fair enough so far as it goes. But there is nothing in the shape of mutual obligations as to the time of payment, whether by instalments or all cash. It is not stated, that we recollect, at what stage in the progress of the work the money is to be paid, nor are we given to understand what rates would be charged for the telegraphing thus paid for by advances. Presumably the rates imposed would be those usually collected by other lines of the State for like distances, but so far the public knows there are no "usual rates" on new lines. Let these important details be understood first, and then, after awakening an interest by public meetings, crowd the project ahead by all means.

The Inflation Question.

Newspapers so fairly represent the current of public opinion that a canvass just made in the Northwest must be taken as a just indication of the sentiment of that part of the country upon national finance. The New York Tribune says that of 933 newspapers in nine States of the Northwest, 514 have responded in favor of the President's veto of the inflation bill; 408 are opposed to the President's views, and the remainder are non-committal. There does not seem to be any need of replying to the loose and oft repeated assertion of one or two inflationists in Congress that the West wants more currency, and "will have it." But if there were, this little straw ought to be sufficient to show which way the wind blows.

Wants Help.

Governor Taylor, of Wisconsin, has issued a proclamation calling on the people of that State to aid the authorities in the enforcement of the law against the railway corporations. He charges that several of these corporations have entered into a conspiracy against the law, and with the view and effect of weakening the respect of the people for the authority of the State and placing themselves and their agents above its reach.

Vasquez.

This cutthroat has been taken to San Francisco, to go thence to Monterey county, for trial for murders committed there, and to fulfil the requirements of the Governor's proclamation respecting the outlaw's delivery at that point. On leaving Los Angeles the bandit publishes an appeal to the public, pathetically urging the good people to assist a poor, "unfortunate man" to obtain counsel.

Rochfort.

San Francisco's last sensation was the presence of Henri Rochfort, the escaped French exile and noted journalist, communist, etc. He goes back to France to surrender himself to the authorities, for imprisonment for life, in order to escape The Chronicle.

Diagram.

We are favored by The Los Angeles Star with a printed diagram of the scene of the Vasquez capture, which is quite a credible display of printer's skill in making a good map with job office material.

A Vote of Censure.

The Committee of Ways and Means will report a resolution censuring the Secretary and his assistant and the Solicitor of the Treasury about their part in the matter of the Sanborn contracts.

The Centennial.

So far the subscriptions to the centennial exhibition are $4,400,000. The committee say $8,750,000 is the sum needed, and that it can't be raised without aid from Congress.

DID HE DO HIS WHOLE DUTY?

We direct attention to a communication from Mr. Reddy, to be found in another column, wherein he attempts to show that our strictures upon District Attorney Snelling's management of the Welch case did that officer injustice. Through inquiries and explanations of several circumstances, which at that time give fair grounds for the belief to the contrary, we are now quite well satisfied that he was honest in his "aims" and intentions, and we really believe, acted in good faith. But to concede that the case was well managed or anything like well managed, on the part of the people is something we in all reasonable probability will never be able truthfully to do, though all the lawyers in the State were to argue to the opposite. We were also present, not a portion of the time only, but throughout the trial, and take nothing second hand. The verdict of the jury in no manner alters our views on this point. Had we not have been in doubt as to the real cause of the indifferent prosecution of the case—had we been satisfied that the District Attorney was acting in perfectly good faith in the performance of his duty to the public, we should have passed that matter without perhaps a passing remark. But in addition to the circumstances to which we have already alluded as having since been satisfactorily explained, there was the marked difference, within our own knowledge, of the ability displayed by the peoples' attorney in this case and his efforts in others of a civil and comparatively unimportant nature. In those cases he looked after his clients' rights with an earnestness of purpose manifested by a creditable display of legal abilty; in this case, involving issues of more importance to this community in some respects than any other that has ever occurred within it, what did he do or apparently try to do, to command the confidence of that community to the end that he would do his best to guard its rights? Mr. Reddy says that he adopted the only course to secure the result that was attained, viz., a verdict of murder in the first degree, without recommendation. Before considering that matter we wish to correct wrong inference which seem to have been drawn; first, we do not demand, nor would not if our in power, permit anything even bordering on a vindictive prosecution of any man; second, we do not claim that nothing else than the defendant's life could atone his crime against law and this community, for that bloody act was no murder to be punished by death, if the plea set up by the defense was true in fact; we do not claim that it was necessary to open up the dark pages of the defendant's previous history to prove that he committed this deed; neither do we demand an abusive examination of witnesses.

Pactically, the only issue to be determined after the case was fairly opened was not the fact of the atrocious killing or who did it, or whether mitigated by any circumstances of self-defense, but this: Was defendant in a mental condition making him responsible for a murder, was he truly insane? Defense plead that he was, and at times had been for three years previously, dating and resulting from a certain accident. To establish that fact only were witnesses for the defense called or questioned. By them alone could it be disproved, since their testimony so far as it went was positive, and if facticious, could only be made to appear so by requiring them to tell the whole story instead of just so much as the defense required, and that much often in the same words in which the questions were put. By these witnesses only could their own testimony on this vital point be successfully controverted, if false in fact. We maintain now, as heretofore in almost the same words, that in this respect the prosecution permitted witnesses to go off the stand when he had obvious if not positive reasons for believing their stories only half told—drawn out just far enough to give a Sickles, Cole, Laura Fair or any similar jury at least the usual "reasonable doubt" regarding the prisoner's sanity, leaving it very problematical whether they could agree on any verdict at all unless it would be one of acquittal. The case was not technically in a safe condition to put in the hands of a jury, unless, as it turned out, it was a jury resolved to weigh the evidence in support of the prisoner's insanity on its true instead of technical merits. All the evidence on that point was positive in character, while that in rebuttal was wholly negative. Certain crazy acts had been sworn to, which taken in the abstract and supported as they were by high medical authorities, were well calculated to give jurors, disposed to stickle upon a technical "reasonable doubt," good grounds for refusing any verdict, unless of acquittal. This risk, to put it in those words, was the result of an inefficient or insufficient examination by the prosecution of defendant's witnesses, a fact clearly apparent from the printed report of the testimony, which report was pronounced correct by defendant's attorney, and by him proposed to be adopted as official if not objected to by the Court. We cannot now pursue this matter further and prove our position by special review of questions and answers, and many other facts going to show that no adequate effort was made to secure Justice from imposition by another of those outrageous shams which have brought law into contempt, and given life to vigilante committees to shake society to its center. It is an interminable question but if circumstances require it we shall take up these points in detail instead of in a general way as at present, showing that society did not receive a fair show in the prosecution of this case.

Assessment.

The Eureka Sentinel claims to be the only paper in that State (Nevada) that has taken grounds in opposition to the proposed amendment to the mining law extending the time one year in whica to do the assessment work. The Cupel and The Borax Miner denies the claim of The Sentinel on this point, and THE INDEPENDENT, though not exactly in Nevada, begs leave to say that it is and has been in hearty opposition to the ill advised measure. We can see no sense or justice in a law wholly in favor of the least-deserving of all claimholders, those who have held claims for years to the total exclusion of others more enterprising, and yet without having done a single thing to make them of any value to themselves or any one else. It is highly important to prospectors, miners, mining men and the general interest that a limit should be fixed outlawing all old claims, those of that purely speculative character which alone can be benefitted by an extension of time. If the claimants to these old locations have not now had time enough to do work in the way of demonstrating their intentions, it is clear that they never will have time enough until a chance turns up for them to make their old perdu claims a means of victimizing more enterprising parties.

The Big Bore.

The Comstockers are going to claim a royalty from Sutro for draining his big drain tunnel. Some of the mines are now 300 feet or more below its level, and at these points are as dry as a powder horn.

The Independence Railroad.

[From The Los Angeles Herald, May 22.]

Mr. Crawford has gone out for the purpose of making a preliminary survey of the Los Angeles & Independence railroad. This is something in the way of commencement, and will, we hope, be followed by still more energetic action on the part of our citizens. The plan suggested by Mr. Crawford of running the road from Spadra through the Cejon pass, and of building the road on the cheap plan detailed in The Herald some days ago, meets the approbation of the company and of our citizens generally. The route is certainly the best that can be selected, while the quality of road proposed is the only one we are able to build On Mr. Crawford's plan the cost of building and equiping the two hundred and five miles of road will not exceed $1,200,000 To put down the ordinary rail would cost more than double this amount, and place the work beyond the means of our own people. The road if built at al must be built with local capital, and success therefore depends on reducing its cost to a sum within our reach. When a cheap road is completed and in operation, then outside capital will be ready to invest in it and enable us to lay down the iron rail, not before. It is our work now and we must do it. The task is not heavy if every man places his shoulder to the wheel, but it is entirely too heavy for the easy performance of a few men. If Los Angeles would secure the important trade this road will command, she must go to work—she must invest her money. Talk is all very fine in its way, but it never built a railroad, and never will. What is needed is action, prompt, energetic and untiring action.

Local Option.

The Sacramento Bee, in speaking of the general condition of the State makes the following remarks concerning "Local Option:"

There were three Local Option elections last week—one in Cache Creek township, Yolo county, which includes Woodland, one in Grayson township, Yolo county, and one in Santa Clara. In the two former "No License" won, and in the latter "License." This leaves us with Visalia and Santa Clara as having voted for "License," and with a township in Contra Costa, one in Nevada, and two in Yolo having voted "No License"—two ayes, four nays. The rule seems to hold good that while the towns, with but few exceptions, vote "License," the country precincts or townships will, in the main, vote "No License." Elections are to be held in nearly all of Yolo, Sonoma, Napa, Contra Costa, Alameda, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Colusa, Tehama, Butte, Nevada, Trinity, etc., so that before Summer is out half the territory in Northern California may be "No License;" but may not contain more than a fourth of the people.

IMPORTANT TO PARTNERSHIPS.

The mysteries of the new New Codes are being inquired into, and among other things is discovered a law relating to those partnerships where the names of all partners interested are not given in the firm name, which will have a decided tendency to do away with the "& Co." style. We think the public will fail to see the necessity for a law of this nature, and it is doubtful if such a one would exist had not its provisions been smuggled through the Legislature under cover of the voluminous "amendments to the Code." These amendments were submitted by the San Francisco advisory Commission, revised by the Creed Haymond Commissioners, considered and corrected by the Judiciary Committees of the respective Houses, and finally wrestled with by a large special Committee on the Codes—each being bound to "improve" (?) the work—after which the Legislature shut its eyes and metaphorically gulped down the result, without examination, discussion or even reading. Following is the law, however, which must be complied with:

SECTION 2466 Except as otherwise provided in the next section, every partnership transacting business in this State under a fictitious name, or a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners in such business, must file with the Clerk of the county in which its principal place of business is situated, a certificate stating the names in full of all the members of such partnership, and their places of residence, and publish the same once a week for four successive weeks, in a newspaper published in the county, if there be one, and if there be none in such county, then in a newspaper published in an adjoining county.

SEC. 2567. A commercial or banking partnership, established and transacting a business in a place without the United States, may, without filing the certificate or making the publication prescribed in the last section, use in this State the partnership name used by it there, although it be fictitious or does not show the names of the persons interested as partners in such business.

SEC. 2468. The certificate filed with the Clerk, as provided in Section 2466, must be signed by the partners and acknowledged before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgement of conveyances of real property. Where the partnership is hereafter formed, the certificate must be filed, and the publication designated in that section must be made within one month after the formation of partnership, or within one month from the time designated in the agreement of its members for the commencement of the partnership; where the partnership has been heretofore formed, the certificate must be filed and the publication made within six months after the passage of this act. Persons doing business as partners contrary to the provisions of this article, shall not maintain any action upon or on account of any contracts made or transactions had in their partnership name, in any Court of this State, until they have first filed the certificate and made the publication herein required.

SEC. 2469. On every change in the members of a partnership transacting business in this State under a fictitious name, or a designation which does not show the names of the persons interested as partners in its business, except in the cases mentioned in Section 2467, a new certificate must be filed with the County Clerk and a new publication made, as required by this article, on the formation of such partnership.

SEC. 2470. Every County Clerk must keep a register of the names of firms and persons mentioned in the certificates filed with him, pursuant to this article, entering in alphabetical order the name of every such partnership and of each partner therein.

The Des Arc Citizen.

That is the name of the Arkansas paper which came addressed to "The Independent, Valley of California." A later issue plausibly explains that matter thus:

An amateur mailing clerk, who could not distinguish between "Vallejo" and "Valley of," sent The Citizen over into your "valely." We had him shot on the spot.

That's all very fine, but we can't feel safe from that amateur, not knowing what particular spot was selected when he was done for.

As The Citizen is published amidst the scenes of our present civil war, these items have an interest like those from the same region during the big muss of a few years ago:

King White and the Lonoke boys whipped John McClarton's party on the opposite side of the river from Little Rock yesterday morning. We could not get the particulars, but the rumor is that the Brooks party lost nine men killed, while White's command only had a few wounded.

Capt. Thomas, together with his command, while on the way from Devall's Bluff to join Brooks' forces at Little Rock were captured by some of Baxter's boys at Lonoke. We would advise the young Captain in the language of King David to his maltreated ministers: "Tarry thou at Jericho until thy beard grows."

We received the first mail yesterday for a week, and the latest dates from Little Rock were up to the 6th. What a blessing it is to live in one of the reconstructed States, where the people are not supposed to have any rights!

—Rev. H. A. Bury, of Bertram, Iowa, is buried out of sight in the county jail for "indiscretions."

A Matter of Opinion.

INDEPENDENCE, May 27.

MESSRS. EDITORS: In your issue of the 16th of May, 1874, in reviewing the proceedings of the trial of E. P. Welch, you made the following statement: "Probably there never was a trial in which a human life was at stake, that ran so smoothly. There was no discord between the attorneys; they were so essentially harmonious in their apparent aim and manner of proceeding as to leave an impression in the minds of those present that both were for the defense." The writer having been one of those present at the trial (the greater portion of the time, at least) begs leave to state that the management of the case for the People was not of a character to leave any doubts on his mind as to the aim of the District Attorney, nor that the District Attorney was for the defense, but on the contrary it seemed to me that the District Attorney adopted the only course which would have produced the result which was attained, that is, a verdict of murder in the first degree without recommendation. Had the officer above named indulged in denunciations of the defendant on account of his character—which was not in issue—he would have been guilty of inflicting needless pain and suffering upon the innocent, helpless and hapless wife and children of the defendant; and not only that, but he would have been guilty of gross misconduct in the eye of the law, as will be seen by reference to the case of the "People vs. Laura D. Fair," wherein it is stated that unless the defendant put his character in issue, the prosecution cannot attack it, and if the prosecution disregard this rule it is error for which a new trial will be granted. Again, it is not the duty of the prosecuting attorney to tomahawk the character of a defendant on trial for his life, unless the defendant attempts to make a shield of it. "The District Attorney should be in such cases just as impartial as the judge who sits upon the bench to try the case," so says Judge Sharswood, an eminent jurist and a standard authority on legal ethics; again our own Supreme Court, in the case of the "People vs. Butler," "8th California Report," page 440, say, "On the part of the State the prosecution is but a fair and just inquiry into the guilt or innocence of the accused; she can have no interest in convicting the innocent, or in releasing the guilty; she stands perfectly impartial as between the community and the individual. Prosecuting attorneys should therefore do their duty faithfully, but no more. They should never act as employed counsel; no advantage should be taken of temporary public excitement against him, arising from any cause whatever, and if such attempts are made, the Court before whom the prisoner is tried should put a stop to them." Under the above rules what could the District Attorney have done in the case more than to bring out the facts as you have reported them in your paper of the date above mentioned

"To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with a taper light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess."

Not less wasteful, not less ridiculous would have been the efforts of the ablest in the land to unfold the horrors of that most horrible transaction, as it appears from the testimony reported in your paper. The deed—the blushing deed itself—distances every effort of speech and baffles all attempts at description, unless indeed the man was insane, and upon that question a jury of his countrymen have said that he was not, and therefore I drop that question. Doubtless the officer referred to this view of the case, and having exercised his judgment, the correctness of which was demonstrated by the verdict of the jury, I deem it unfair to impugn his motives, his aim or his purpose, or blame him for doing that which it was idle, if not worse to do. When I speak of its being unfair, I do not wish to be understood to say or mean that you intended to do our District Attorney injustice; I believe I know you too well to make such an assertion, but that you misunderstood his action in the premises.

Now in conclusion of this somewhat lengthy article, allow me to say that the whole object of this communication is to bring this matter again to your notice, believing that you will give it more careful consideration, and if you find that your former conclusions on the subject were erroneous you will promptly correct them, and "do unto others as you would have others do unto you." Yours respectfully.

PATRICK REDDY.

Controller's Instructions.

The following circular has been addressed by the Controller of Nevada to the Assessors of Washoe, Ormsby, Douglass and Esmeralda counties:

This office having received official notification of the confirmation by the Federal authorities of what is known as the Von Schmidt survey of the eastern boundary of California, you will please take notice of and respect said survey in making the assessment of property in your county.

Singular Phenomenon.

Yesterday at about 2 o'clock P. M., the citizens in the northern part of Virginia were startled with a loud report from the neighborhood of the mountain west of the city, and by an oscillation of the earth from east to west. The shock lasted for two seconds, and was felt with greater severity in the vicinity of the Sierra Nevada mine. A party of gentlemen who were out target practising returned to the city and announced that the earth on the side of Mount Davidson had opened in a straight seam for more than a mile, in all places the fissure being of an uniform width.—Gold Hill News, May 19.

Horrible Tragedy.

The San Diego Union of May 19th has a long account of the discovery by Mr. Chapin of the family of Mr. John Overend, murdered in their home, at La Jolla, three miles from San Dieguito, and 26 miles from San Diego. Mr. Chapin was passing the Overend place, when he noticed that nothing was stirring about the premises, which appeared to be deserted. He approached the house and saw lying near it the dead body of John Overend. The head was horribly mangled and bloody. Entering the house he encountered a stench so horrible that he was obliged to rush to the door, nearly fainting. He once more entered and found the corpses of Mrs. Overend and two of the children. One of the little ones was covered with a cloth, which he raised and found the face in an advanced state of decomposition. The dreadful effluvia gave evidence that the people had been murdered several days. Mr. Chapin did not attempt to search for the other two children—there were four in the family—but was convinced that their bodies must be somewhere on the premises, as if they had been spared they would have found their way to some neighboring place. The youngest child is supposed to have been but a few months old. The Overend house is near Mr. Chapin's ranch, but is somewhat isolated, being three or four miles distant from any neighbors. It is supposed that the deed was done by Indians for the sake of plunder, although nothing upon which to base any suspicion had been noted at the time the informant left. Overend was an elderly man and had resided in the neighborhood of San Dieguito for the last four or five years, and is well known in town. He cultivated a small farm, and raised a good deal of market produce. He also owned some stock, cows, horses, etc.

Belly-achers.

It is a strange anomaly that the only persons who ever growl about the course or charges of a newspaper are those who are either very slow pay or never pay at all. It is seldom you hear a man who pays his newspaper bills promptly growl about charges.—Reese River Reveille.

Natural Advantages.

The site and foundation of A. B. Williams' new mill at Benton presents a study for geologists, as well as some remarkable features which can only be fully appreciated by those familiar with engineering and the construction of quartz mills. For the site of the structure the face of a rounding knoll was selected, a few hundred yards from the center of town. In excavating, about eighteen inches of loose soil was found on the top, underneath which was struck a solid formation of soft stone, or a solidified volcanic ash, or tufa. This can be hewn to any shape with an axe, and with about as much trouble as it would have been to remove that quantity of dirt, the square, 30x60 feet was graded out. The rock hardens upon exposure, and now the battery and machinery are set upon a foundation of rock without a seam therein to interfere with the great desideratum of solidity. A well, carved out of the center of this material, was sunk to the depth of about eighteen feet, where an inexhaustible stream of nearly boiling hot water was was struck. Here is a well nearly under the boiler, the walls of which are the natural solid rock, hardening with time to the consistency of granite, the water being already heated almost to a boiling point. Those interested in this curious matter can estimate for themselves the economy in fuel to result from this advantage.

His Picture.

We are indebted to A. S. Addis of Los Angeles for a very well executed photograph of that noted scoundrel, Tiburcio Vasquez. The picture represents a very ordinary looking Mexican—nothing more or less—differing from the written description of the robber chief, since it shows nothing of the desperado, nothing of the "high forehead" and generally intelligent expression above the average, or to a degree to mark him as a leader, except, perhaps, as a sneak thief or three-card monte sharp. Still it's Vasquez' picture, and as such possesses unusual interest now, and will until the villainous original is finally disposed of. Any one desirous of obtaining one of these photographs can doubtless do so by enclosing a greenback to Mr. Addis at Los Angeles.

An Excellent Pump.

Some time since we made mention of the wooden pumps lately introduced here by Dr. Gelcich of Lone Pine. We purchased one of these pumps, and after two weeks' trial have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best suction pump within our knowledge. Unlike metal pumps the water through it is always as pure as from an oaken bucket, no matter how long it may stand in the pump, while its capacity is not excelled by any pattern of equal size.

Defeated.

Through private advices from Washington, we are informed that one of the special bills—Houghton's—for the relief of settlers around Camp Independence was adversely reported upon by the House Land Committee, and because of this action both are probably killed for the present Congressional session. We may hereafter explain the reason of this action on the part of said Committee.

School Matters.

Miss Whitcomb's private school, the only one we now have in this district, is progressing finely, her method of teaching giving general satisfaction. It should be borne in mind that a Board of Trustees are to be elected the coming month, and by way of change it is proposed to have at least one or two ladies on the Board. Look up your candidates in time.

Preparing.

V. G. Thompson, mine host of the Blaney House, is making preparations for a grand ball to take place June 17, the Bunker Hill and California State constitution anniversaries, and the day when ye Taboosers are to meet in full force to have a little suthin' to eat. The indications are that at least a hundred couples will be present.

Weather.

This week the weather was quite cold and windy. We have heard no complaints, but the probabilities are that considerable young fruit has been destroyed by the wind if not by frost. To-day the weather is very much of the Web-foot order, cloudy and rainy.

Personal.

We have been favored with a call from Mr. John G. Ames, of Washington, on a visit to this State in connection with Governmental affairs, but in what particular direction we are not prepared to state.

The "Rose Buds."

This is the pet name of our social dancing club, which meets twice each week, and adds more to the socialableness and enjoyments of the place than anything we have yet had.

Amusement.

Joe Harris, at the Inyo Saloon, has added a new carondelet table to the attractions of his place.

Preaching.

Rev. E. H. Orne will preach at the school house to morrow evening.

A Reception.

It was an earnest and enthusiastic crowd that tendered Capt. Joseph Bowers a reception Tuesday night. They all enjoyed the fun most as well as the Captain himself. He was greeted with music and song of welcome, improvised by the boys for the occasion, which was encored a number of times. A neat address to the Captain recounted his virtues, showing wherein he had not only proved himself a reliable and constant friend of the whites, often at the peril of his life at the hands of his own people, but was a man at heart under all circumstances. At the close of the first address, which covered a good portion of what is to follow, the speaker presented the Captain with a fine meerschaum pipe, a hat, tobacco, etc., which made the honest old chap swell with pride and satisfaction, followed by some remarks of his own from which it was understood that if he ever put those things from his possession, it would not be for the purpose of saving them from executions upon judgments. It was further made to appear that he was a chief, not of a mere lap "ring," that persistently refused to close, but of an unadulterated Indian ring from which no swindles had ever radiated; according to the speakers, he was deserving of compliment because he had done something; negatively, because he had never in his life stolen a saw mill; cap-swallowed the live stock of a defunct pard; had never been compelled to resign a municipal office and take up his abode on the "verge of civilization" because he had criminally inflated the truth to obtain that office; had never spent his time and other people's money in trying to put the industrious and inoffensive whites on a reservation, expecting to be made the thieving agent thereof; had never tried to inveigle army officers into corrupt practices, or enforce results by threats of effecting the removal of subordinates, nor done anything in that line worse than to let the "little Captain" get home as best he could when "mubbe so no catch'm water or grass on the desert." No, the Captain had never done any of these things, and he was proud to say that he overflowed with satisfaction in being able to proclaim that he had never tried to swamp a whole community, nor laid awake o' nights conniving plans to skin 'em individually or collectively. Though laboring under the immense misfortune of having no great influence at the State and National capitals, he managed to eke out an honest sort of a living, just about as good as he could expect had he possessed these advantages, and enjoyed it all the better because he still retained his self-respect, and had never negotiated with Mephistopheles for present glory at the expense of his soul hereafter. In fact, the Captain disclaims any business relations of any kind with Mr. Mephistopheles, and wants it to be understood that he is neither trying to ring in with or supersede him. Altogether it was conceded that Capt. Joe was entitled to this honor because he was a good Injun, not because he was a bad one to receive crocodile sympathy for his numerous failures.

Habeas Corpus.

The two Indians under arrest for having made way with their doctor were, through P. W. Bennett, Esq., brought before Judge Hannah Thursday last on a writ of habeas corpus, and there being no evidence to hold them, they were permitted to take their corpuses away. They will of course be subject to a call from the Grand Jury, unless that body should conclude to approve the aboriginal method of improving the practice of medicine.

The Horse Race.

The race set for last Saturday at Bishop Creek came off according to programme—that is, the programme of the Benton horse and his friends, for he came out ahead and took the cash, which was pungled in considerable amounts.

Stock Ranching.

The Taboose Station and ranch, conducted by the popular Harry Wright and lady, will be found an excellent place to send stock for ranching. Harry sabes all about horses, and will take good care of them.

Tonsorial.

One of the cosiest and most comfortable places in town is Huff's barber shop and bath house. For his efforts to serve the public, Huff ought to be regularly patronized by all, and well patronised, too.

Mutton.

John Broder this week received some 400 nice mutton sheep, which he had recently purchased near Visalia. While being driven across something over a hundred head were lost from the band.

A Horrible Fate.

By the burning of the Succor hosting works, in Lower Gold Hill, Nevada, on the 23 instant, two miners named Jas. Billings and James Rickard met with a most horrible death. The destruction of the building was so rapid that it was found impossible to alarm the miners at the bottom of the 500-foot shaft, and so they had to slowly suffocate and perish.

Adjournment.

Both Houses of Congress have agreed to adjourn on the 22d of June. It is not the intention to bring up any new business of importance, and it is supposed that all now pending can be finally disposed of by that time.

Connecticut Senator.

Eaton's election as United States Senator was confirmed by a joint convention of the Connecticut Legislature, May 20.

Columbus News.

We take the following interesting items from The Borax Miner of May 23:

We are informed that the Marriotte furnace, at Sylvania, which, by the way, is an experiment, will be ready for the fire on Tuesday next. Many miners have examined this novel structure since the doctor commenced building it, and when asked for their opinions concerning it, the answer is generally "Quien sabe?" If this experiment should prove successful, the Marriottes can make more money than they want by selling patent rights. The result sought is the smelting of ore without a blast!

Parties in from Lida during the week state that Gen. Page is buying up the indebtedness of the Lida Mill, with the view of starting that concern to work at the earliest possible moment. It is said he is receiving favorable bids from the creditors, who take a sensible view of the General's efforts to revive the business of the camp. The miners are anxiously waiting his success.

A private letter from San Francisco to this office, dated May 9th, contains a paragraph of general interest to this camp, which reads as follows: "The Columbus Mill and Mining Company is still alive. There is some prospect of its indebtedness being paid—how soon, I cannot say."

No Extension Wanted.

CERRO GORDO, May 25.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Is it too late to send a remonstrance to Congress against the passage of Houghton's bill extending the time another year for compulsory work on mining claims located prior to May, 1872?

If that bill becomes a law it will be simply an outrage on every honest miner and laborer. It will protect locations for which there should be no mercy. It will work a great harm here; no man or company will be safe in attempting any development whatever. MINER.

[If the proposed extension of time is had at all, it is now too late to forward remonstrances, as it will have to be rushed through before the 10th of June. The chances for the passage of the bill are, we think, unfavorable.—EDS. INDEPENDENT.]

Married.

Miss Nellie Grant was married May 21st, to Mr. Algernon C. F. Sartoris, an untitled English gentleman. It is said to have been a pure love match, and as Miss Nellie is an unassuming little lady, she has everyone's hearty wishes for unalloyed happiness. Her future home is to be in England.

The Female Brokers.

The Woodhull and the Claflin are going on California street as stock brokers—in order to lend some respectability to the business, we suppose—whereupon the San Francisco mining gamblers are in a flutter, and the reporters glorify.

R., the 30th day of May is set apart as a national day for decorating the graves of our comrades who fell on the field or who have died since. An observance of the day will be had by decorating the graves of Comrades Clark and Moore, as per request of the G. C. Dep't of the Pacific.

EXERCISES AT THE GRAVE:

1st. Prayer;
2d. Hymn and the Decoration;
3d. Election and Remarks;
4th. Address, by a Member of the G. A. R.;
5th. Closing Prayer.

All are respectfully invited to join in the solemn duty.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,.....May 30, 1874.

—An Indianapolis jeweler has on exhibition a "widow's mite." It is about the size of a silver three-cent piece, is of copper and very much worn. On one side the head of the reigning Emperor, Tiberius Cæsar, can be seen. The characters on the reverse are illegible.

—Mr. J. T. Fields says in one of his lectures, that the extravagant, indolent man who, having overspent his income, is sumptuously living on the principal, is like Heine's monkey, who was found one day hilariously seated by the fire and cooking his own tail in a copper kettle for dinner.

—One of the most recent advertising novelties in London is a system of printing advertisements upon eggs, and in several of the windows of the provision merchants may be seen a quantity of them inscribed with all manner of notices.

—"Alas!" said the nurse who attended the witty divine, Sidney Smith in his last illness, I have made a mistake and given you a bottle of ink." "Then," said the dying wit, "fetch me all the blotting paper there is in the house."

—A Lutherian minister in Freedom, Wisconsin, refused to conduct the funeral service of a farmer belonging to his parish, because the man had been a Granger. His society promptly requested his resignation.

—A story is told of a boy in Iowa City who, while fishing recently, caught a muscalonge weighing over 22 pounds. The boy was pulled into the river, and a Newfoundland dog brought fisher and fish ashore.

—A Western preacher discoursed from the text, "How old art thou?" and the next day about one-third of the women of the congregation called to tell him it was none of his business.

—A not uncommon trick in Paris is for a person with a bad cigar to stop a gentleman having a good one, to solicit permission to light, and in the handing back manage to substitute the inferior weed.

—A Hartford man, having just married, caught the small-pox, got drunk, had the tremens, and endeavored to end his celebration by jumping into the river the other day. A local paper says he is doing well, which is encouraging.

—An Illinois editor returns thanks for a centipede sent him by mail from Texas, "it being," he says, "the first cent of any kind that we have received for several weeks."

—They have taken a rat census of France, and return the whole number of rodents at two thousand millions. A pretty straight tale, though a stiff one, and not without a point. Cats in proportion.

—It is stated that Parson Brownlow's friends read the papers to him eight hours every day. The endurance of the Parson and the patience of his friends are equally commendable.

—Laura D. Fair is going to demand an humble apology from every person who has said anything against her. The consequent humility of the United States will be stupendous.

—A Nashville man broke his leg the other day trying to put on a tight boot. That ought to be a warning, and every one will take it for his neighbors.

—It has been decided in Iowa that no gentleman will keep a trap-gun in his corn-crib to send an unprepared soul to eternity.

—When cremation becomes fashionable, whose ashes will make the strongest lye? There's a question for the average Sunday School scholar.

—An old fogy in Philadelphia objects to paying a gas bill of eighteen dollars, for the frivolous reason that there are no burners in his house.

—A chicken in West Goshen, Pa., has only one leg, and that grows from the top of his back. The old hen did it with her hatch it.

—An observer says that American girls are growing prettier every year; this remark does not apply to girls over twenty.

—It is a mark of a true gentleman to go out of doors alone when feeling an inclination to swear or smoke a clay pipe.

—A good little Bangor boy recently refused to spell cider because he had signed the pledge.

—The pursuit of knoweldge ought to nullify egotism instead of increasing it.

—Barnum only had to advertise one day to get fifty donkeys in New York

—It is often a pleasure to incur the enmity of a fool.

—A sneer is often the weak subterfuge of impudence.

—A word to the wise—Keep so.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

MY CHOICE.

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet—
The traces of small muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry glowing
All spotless with blossoms and fruit!

And I know my walls are disfigured
With prints of small fingers and hands;
And I see your own household whiteness
All fresh in its purity stands.

Yes, I know my "black walnut" is battered
And dented by many small heels,
While your own polished stairway, all perfect,
Its smooth, shining surface reveals.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many old treasures and toys,
While your own is in dandiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys!

And I know my room is invaded
Quite boldly at odd hours of the day,
While you sit in your own undisturbed,
And dream the soft quiet away!

Yes, I know that I have jackets that wear out,
And buttons that will never stay,
While you can embroider at leisure,
And learn pretty arts of crochet.

And I know there are lessons in spelling,
Which I must be patient to hear,
While you sit down to your novel,
Or turn the last magazine near.

Yes, I know there are four little bedsteads
Where I must stand watchful each night,
While you go out in your carriage,
And flash in your dresses so bright!

Now, I think, I'm a neat little woman—
I like my house orderly, too;
And I'm fond of dainty belongings—
But I wouldn't change places with you.

No, keep your fair home with its order,
Its freedom from trouble and noise,
And keep your own fanciful leisure
But give me my four splendid boys!

What a Man is Worth.

Some very interesting facts and figures are given in The New York World, in regard to the actual coin value a man is worth to community, and the loss it sustains if from any cause he should "go to the bad." It says: The value of an able-bodied, clear-headed, healthy boy, fifteen years old, who has been to school the average length of time—six years—is not easy to compute. He is educated in the simpler branches of knowledge. He may have also learned the rudiments of a trade, and become already, in a small way what society has a right to expect he will become in a very few years in a large way, a producer. The mere private cost of his production is by no means small. He has had his share besides in the protection and safety of government and the accumulated comfort of the past, all of which has been lavished on him in the legitimate hope that he would in his time shoulder a part of the taxes, and aid in accumulating comfort and capital for the future. As a child, supposing that his life has been passed in the family of a mechanic, his expenses for fifteen years cannot fall much below this estimate:

THE COST TO THE FAMILY.

Board ten years at $2, and five years at $3 per week	$1,820
Share of rent at $14 a month in a family of five persons	504
Clothing $20 for ten years, $30 for five years	350
School books	30
Miscellaneous, sickness, etc., in all	275
Total	$2,979

All this on the supposition that the family home has included three rooms only, that the family has had not more than five persons in it, all told, and that food and clothing have been of the plainest description, with enough of both to produce a healthy and vigorous growth; but with nothing to vary the monotony of fare limited to the necessaries of life. He has cost as a member of a family, and that family in expensive and economical, about $3,000, as a citizen he has cost a much smaller sum, but still one that is fairly appreciable.

THE COST TO THE STATE.

Schooling, six years	$ 63
Taxes—State, fifteen years	165
Taxes—County, fifteen years	123
Taxes for national expenses, fifteen years	195
Total	$546

As a person up to the age of fifteen has done nothing to earn the cost of the protection which a civil government gives in all its different branches, it is evident that so far as he is concerned the aliquot share expended on him is so much paid out to rear and educate; a direct investment which the community makes in him with the hope of a return. This investment amounts to at least $546. It is direct and easily computed. There is another just as certain, but which cannot be so readily reckoned. The total valuation of the country is placed at $30,068,518,507 in real and personal estate, and all this accumulated wealth of the parts works together to make life easier for the young man, who till he is fifteen years old, has added nothing to it. He stands, too, the representative of another expense as tangible, but even less easy to give definitely. About half the population die before they reach the fifteenth year from birth. That is, to bring 500 persons to this point requires the birth and support for a longer or shorter time of $1,000; and the cost to the community of each at the age just mentioned is enhanced by the expense of those who fail to reach it. There are a hundred thousand other influences which cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents, but they exist none the less, and should be taken into account and kept in mind as part of the loss which the community at large suffers when one man fails to make any return for the talent confided to his care. The gross, perceptible, enumerable parts of his cost price are, to his family, in money, $2,979; to his country and community, $546; his share of the income from $30,000,000,000 of property, and the partially developed life wasted and cut off that his might reach maturity. In all the direct outlay is $5,000—an understatement in two directions.

At 15 years a man may begin to be a producer; or, as the most common, most dangerous means by which he becomes non productive, he may also begin to be a drunkard. Neither are likely to occur before this age, though either contingency may occur years earlier as well as after. Society has spent some thousands of dollars on him, and devoted some millions of capital in providing him with an education and throwing around him influences which make his life a profitable investment.

But society has also taken some pains and trouble to render null and void its own efforts. It licenses numerous places at which the means of forming the habit of drunkenness can be found, and society pays four times as much to support them as it does to protect and educate the boy whom it has raised at such trouble and expense. He enters his eighteenth year a drunkard. At least, the State loses by his intoxication the direct investment of $5,000. At 18 the man's labor is worth at least $728 a year, or $14 a week. All this is lost, and it amounts to the interest on nearly twice the sum spent for his education. The average life of a man addicted to the use of ardent spirits is about 17 years, and the sum lost in this way is $12,376.

It is even greater than this. At 20 a person in health has an even chance of living 44 years; a dram drinker's chances are cut down to about one-third of this period; the difference being a loss of $19,656, making the total deficit stand thus:

Original investment	$ 5,000
Loss of labor during life (17 years)	12,376
Loss of 27 years of labor by drink	19,656
Total	$37,032

The article also gives statistics which prove that the drunkard commits a very large proportion of the crimes of the community, and thus greatly enhances his expenses by the amounts expended in conviction, punishment, etc. Altogether it is a showing that should make the thoughtful pause before condemning too rashly the efforts of the reformers in this direction.

The Laughing Plant.

The London Garden copies from Palgrave's work on Central and Eastern Arabia, an account of a plant whose seeds produce effects similar to those of laughing gas. It is a native of Arabia. A dwarf variety at Oman attains to a hight of from three to four feet, with woody stems, wide spreading branches and dark green foliage. Its flowers are produced in clusters, and are of a bright yellow color. The seed pods are soft and woolly in texture, and contain two or three black seeds of the size and shape of a French bean. The flavor is a little like that of opium, and their taste is sweet; the odor from them produces a sickening sensation and is slightly offensive. These seeds contain the essential property of this extraordinary plant, and when pulverized and taken in small doses, operate upon a person in the most peculiar manner. He begins to laugh loudly, boisterously; then he sings dances and cuts up all manner of fantastic capers. Such extravagance of gesture and manners was never produced by any other kind of dosing. The effect continues about an hour, and the patient is uproariously comical. When the excitement ceases the exhausted exhibitor falls into a deep sleep, which continues for an hour or more, and when he awakens he is utterly unconscious that any such demonstrations have been enacted by him. We usually say that there is nothing new under the sun, but this peculiar plant, recently discovered, as it exercises the most extraordinary influence over the human brain, demands from men of science a careful investigation.

—Little John (alluding to the governess, who is giving a music lesson)—"Isn't Miss Dickson a bad tounter for a governess, ma?" "What for, my dear?" "'Cause she keeps tounting one, two, three, four, and tan't get any further—but she teeps trying. May I tell her the next is five? do listen, ma."

—"Siamesed" is the North Carolina word for married.

Prospectors.

The seekers after hidden and undiscovered treasure are becoming more plentiful as the season advances, and are now seen wending their way through town daily. This year the prospector wanders not with his accustomed confidence in any particular newly discovered camp; he has no abiding faith in San Juan, neither does he put unquestioning faith in Stickeen. The majority of them are guiding their barks—or, rather, mules—in the same direction as the Star of Empire, and Southern California and the Cerro Gordo country is the locality which is to rain prosperity upon their weather beaten heads. They deserve success, for no men are more persistent than they. No men bear repeated misfortunes with more philosophy, and none are more ready to attack fate over and over again. But when Fortune allies herself with him, helps him in his effort and overthrows his enemy, "ill luck;" when she fills his pocket with new and shining double-eagles, then is he repaid for all his toil and hardships. The barkeeper smiles his blandest smile upon him, and the winsome hurdy forsakes all other admirers and lavishes upon him her most seraphic and captivating charms. This earth is to him a very paradise until he "goes through," and then—the mule, the pack, bacon, beans, and—try it again.—Eureka Cupel.

Things to Remember

If you do not keep your paper, cut this out and put it where you can find it:

A surveyor's chain is four poles or 76 feet, divided into 100 links or 792 inches.

A square chain is 16 square poles, and 10 square chains is an acre.

Four roods are an acre, each containing 1,240 square yards, or 34,787 feet, or 24 yards 28 inches on each side.

A pole is five yards and a half each way.

An acre is 4,840 square yards, or 69 yards, 1 foot, 8½ inches each way; and three acres are 120 yards and a half each way.

A square mile, 1,760 yards each way, is 640 acres; half a mile, or 880 yards each way, is 160 acres; a quarter of a mile or 440 yards each way, is a park or farm of 40 acres, and a furlong, or 220 yards each way, is 10 acres.

A Granger's Dream.

A Granger dreamed that he died. He went straight to the spirit world; he knocked at the gate of the New Jerusalem, and it was opened unto him. The books were opened; he was asked: "Did you ever belong to any secret society?" To which he replied, "I did—to the Grangers." "Then, sir, you can't be admitted; depart." He then went to the door of the bottomless pit, where the same questions were again asked him by the devil, and again he was told to depart. After he had gone a little way off, he was accosted by the homely ruler of the pit, when the following propositions were made: "Stranger," said Nick, "I will not admit you here; they do not want you in heaven; but I will sell you two hundred barrels of brimstone for cash, ten per cent. off, and you can go start a little hell of your own, with no agents or middle men."

The Bullion Prospects.

Nevada is keeping up her reputation as the leading silver region of the world. Her mines will doubtless produce $40,000,000 during the current year. All the camps in the State show some improvement this Spring. From the Comstock an unusual amount of bullion is being extracted; Belcher and Crown Point alone yielding at the rate of over one and a half millions per month. Consolidated Virginia is also stepping several hundred thousand per month, and is expected in a short time to rival anything on the lode. It is said to be a wonderful mine, even greater than either of the above named. But besides these there are several other mines producing considerable bullion on the lode, and the aggregate yield of this wonderful bonanza for the year will be immense.—Coast Review.

A Huge Skeleton.

The most remarkable object in in the Warren Museum is the largest skeleton of the mastodon giganteus ever discovered on the continent. By its side, by way of contrast, is the frame of the elephant Pizarro, the largest ever brought to this country. The skeleton of the mastodon giganteus will not fail to cause the visitor to start back in awe, and he will hardly be able to suppress that adjective of fools, "impossible!" It is twelve feet high, and thirty-four feet in length, from the tips of its tusks to the extremity of its tail. Its trunk is seventeen feet in length. The animal must have weighed more than 20,000 pounds!—Popular Science Monthly.

Walking.

In 1809, Captain Barklay, an Englishman, walked 1,000 miles in 18 days. In 1847, James Eaton (70 years of age), walked in Boston, Massachusetts, 1,000 quarter miles in 1,000 consecutive quarter hours. In 1856, Wm. Spooner, at London, England, walked 7 miles in 52 minutes. In 1858, Charles Westhall, London, England, walked half a mile in 3 minutes and 10 seconds. In 1858, W. H. Boyd, "North Star of Canada," walked in Charleston, S. C., one mile in 6 minutes and 42 seconds. In 1865, Hill, of Brooklyn, N. Y., walked half a mile backward in 7 minutes.—New York Paper.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

For a Wonder.

Unlike any other county in the Union Barnwell county, South Carolina, don't think a public thief is much better than any other, and as a wonderful innovation on popular custom, has actually sentenced her three thieving Commissioners, respectively, one to ten years, one to nine years and one to thirteen months in the penitentiary, instead of slapping on a coat of whitewash according to rule. This may have a depressing influence on those politicians who are so generally successful in inculcating upon the rising generation the belief that the chief honor of life is to steal themselves rich at the public expense.

That Watch.

A Bulletin reporter interviewed Mr. Vasquez during the short stay that gentleman lately made in San Francisco while en route to Monterey, where he is to appear for the defense in a criminal suit, and among the incidents related is this:

At this point Mr. Belshaw, one of the gentlemen who were robbed at Coyote Holes about two months ago, came to the cell-door and asked Vasquez in Spanish what he had done with the watch he took from him on that occasion. He said that he was willing to pay for it, if Vasquez would restore it to him or tell him where he could find it. Vasquez seemed a good deal pleased at the reminiscence, and replied that he did not know where the watch was, but thought that Chavis had it.

What Next?

This world is getting alarmingly virtuous. Now comes the New York Supreme Court and coldly refuses to give that unfortunate boss thief, Wm. Tweed, a chance of liberty through a new trial, notwithstanding the fact that he was sent to Blackwell by as big a villain as he was himself. May be that Mrs. Partington was right when she admonished Isaac not to steal as it would become "very oderiferous in the public nostrum."

The Musical Echo.

This is a magazine of music and literature published by H. W. Hemsted, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Each number contains a number of songs with music and instrumental pieces, in the aggregate for the year, not less than $10 worth if sold as sheet, besides a large amount of interesting literature, and all, for only $1. This excellent publication ought to be in the hands of every lover of music, particular learners.

Local Option.

A large number of localities have lately tested the local option question, or are about to do so. The results, one place with another, are various. Oakland, Vallejo, Santa Rosa and some other places are local optionized by decisive votes. Others, among which we may mention Cloverdale, same county with Santa Rosa, go the other way. The fight is on all along the line.

Won't Let Go.

Richardson, the much admired Sanborne Secretary of the Treasury, says he is not going to let go the public teat until he is choked off—is much obliged for the tendered opportunity to resign at his leisure, but feels constrained to say that he has no leisure for that purpose. The resolutions of censure reported by the Investigating Committee have not yet been taken up

Change of Base.

The Miner has been removed from Havilah to Bakersfield, where henceforth it will be published. This makes three newspapers for that froggy metropolis. No doubt the three or four other houses not occupied by the printing offices and private hospitals will now command a pretty fair rent for business purposes, mostly of a liquid nature.

Fire in Havilah.

May 28 a fire broke out in Craig & Cohn's store in Havilah, destroying the building and everything it contained except a bundle of "shammy." The goods were insured for $6,000, half their value, in the Union company of San Francisco. The origin of the fire is entirely beyond conjecture, no one being able to account for it in any manner.

Rewards.

The Governor has offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest, and delivery in Monterey county, of Chavis, the second villain of the Vasquez troupe, and $1,000 for the arrest of the unknown murderer or murderers of John Overend and family in San Diego county.

Indian Troubles.

News from Camp Warner, Oregon, indicates danger of an Indian outbreak. The settlers have only the military protection of one company of infantry at Camp Warner.

THE LOS ANGELES & INDEPENDENCE.

THE INYO INDEPENDENT is not in favor of either the route of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad nor the quality of road it is proposed to build, and it proceeds to say that the course of The Express and Herald on the subject is better calculated to kill the enterprise than to aid in carrying it out. We regret that our views run counter to those of our excellent contemporary, and assure its editor that if he can convince us of our error we will at once abandon the ground. The Express, we are sure, will not hesitate to do likewise. We have spoken favorably of both the route and character of road proposed by Engineer Crawford.

The above is from our able friend, The Herald, which is clearly laboring under a very wrong impression on one or two points. THE INDEPENDENT has most certainly never uttered a word of objection to either of the routes proposed, nor has it had any occasion to do so, since that matter has not yet come up for definite consideration or action. We say now, as the sum of all that we have said on that point heretofore, that so far as our present knowledge goes, it is a matter of but secondary importance which or what route is selected, as regards the interest of this county; the road itself is the prime consideration to that interest, which interest is best subserved by which ever route conduces the most to that of the road, with certain limitations. Like The Herald we are disposed to favor the "longest way around as the shortest way across" in making a choice between the two general routes now proposed. The extra thirty miles of travel on the San Bernardino route will doubtless be fully compensated in the increased amount of business that that section will give the road when completed, as well as in enlisting valuable aid when most needed—now, at the outset. Until an actual survey of both is made we can have no reliable means of judging their comparative engineering merits, etc., which of itself may be quite sufficient to give the preference to the longer line, regardless of the important matter of way trade. The trite school-boy saying above quoted is eminently applicable in mountainous railroad operations, regarding both first and current costs, requiring but a slight difference of gradients in favor of the longer line to make it practically the shortest and cheapest. Believing this, and knowing nothing of our own knowledge of the topographical character of any of the routes, we are and have been quite content to let those who do know decide between them.

We know full well that a stranger, however observing, cursorily glancing over the desert expanse which is to furnish business for our railroad, would see but little, judged by the usual standard, to encourage him to take hold of it as a paying investment; neither would the figures of the actual business of the present day be abundantly reassuring to capital stickling on facts as they are regardless of what they may and surely will be, therefore it comes, we presume, that The Herald is constrained to declare that we must build a very cheap road within ourselves necessarily, or have none at all, as outside capital fails to see it in the light of an investment, and consequently will not come forward. We are not at all surprised at the apparent reluctance of capital to take hold of a very expensive enterprise, the merits of which it appreciates only as shown by a desert view, actual figures of the day, and the apparent esteem in which it is held by those who ought to know. If these concede that the prospective advantages invite only the smallest possible outlay to secure them, cent per cent. capital sees nothing in it, and is especially repelled when asked to take stock in what it is thus led to consider a temporary but expensive expedient if not a very problematical experiment. These are the days when iron rails are rapidly giving way to far more expensive steel, because capital decides the latter to be the best investment, and in its everyday experience with machinery of all kinds, finds that railroads above all others need to be of the very best material and construction for paying investments. In such cases the first cost, with a due regard to actual values and the end to be attained, is a matter of little moment, compared to the deterring fears of never ending expenses for repairs to poor machinery called cheap because of its poorness, or because the purpose for which it was designed demands nothing better.

We conclude, then, that if capital is, by such propositions, given to understand that the business prospects of our country is now and likely to be but equal to the capacity of a wooden rail, according to the popular estimate of that capacity, then capital would not help furnish even the wooden rail, however well it might answer the purpose. That is why we thought the tramway proposition would tend to cut us out of any kind of a road, since outside capital holding aloof would have an influence on that more nearly interested.

But if we are to depend wholly on our own resources, as The Herald tells us, and those resources are only equal to this experiment carried out, then let us have that by all means, at least far enough to determine its probable value.

St. Nicholas for June.

We do not know that we can do better than to adopt the language of the editors of this pleasing work, and say that the number opens with a seaside story, "How the Gull Went Down," by Rebecca Harding Davis, illustrated by two of Miss Scannal's characteristic drawings. There is also an English story, "The Two Carriages," by Mrs. Chanter, sister of Canon Kingsley. "Folded Hands" is a remarkably well told story of Albert Durer and one of his friends. Clara G. Dolliver has a little sketch called "Mrs. Slipperkin's Family," and there is a first-rate boys' story, "The Little Reformers," by Rossiter Johnson. "The Heroiny Among the Gnarled Pines" is a hunting sketch by C. A. Stephens. There is an account of Isaac Newton, who is described as a nice old gentleman who held office and was honest, and an admirable article by Wm. H. Redeing telling how sunken vessel are raised and their cargoes saved by our coast wreckers. A number of excellent engravings show how the divers work, etc. Among the poems in this number we find, "Gowns of Gossamer," by Lucy Larcom; a jolly story in verse by Mary Mapes Dodge, called "The Sun and the Star," and a poem by John Hay. There is a brief account of the "Jardin d' Acclimitation" in Paris with two captivating pictures, one of children riding on an elephant and another of youngsters in a carriage drawn by an ostrich. The three serials are as good as ever; in "Fast Friends," J. T. Trowbridge gives his heroes some amusing New York experiences; there is a night adventure in a wood in Olive Thorne's "Nimpo's Troubles," and an account of the peculiar workings of a boys' telegraph company, in "What Might Have Been Expected," by Frank R. Stockton.

A De Young in Trouble.

Gustavus De Young, a brother of the great chroniclers of events yet to occur, has occasioned a subject for considerable excitement over about Visalia. He hired a livery team, and is accused of driving them to death. A warrant for his arrest was issued while he was in Visalia, and to prevent the service of the same, De Young jumped into a buggy standing near and cleared out with tremendous rapidity. Three officers pursued, and in about three miles overhauled him. Gustavus had an arsenal of revolvers and showed much fight, but didn't burn any powder. The officers, however, finally persuaded him to submit to some manacles and be be carried back to town; where he was incarcerated in jail, and brought up the next day on a charge of fast driving, which charge amounted to nothing, as the ordinance against it had no legal existence. He was discharged and again arrested by the Sheriff of Fresno county for the first offense, but was released on bail, to appear at Fresno on the following Friday to answer to the charge of cruelty to animals. De Young publishes a statement in The Delta from which we are led to infer he loves his wife very much and has himself been despitefully used.

Enterprise Triumphant.

The Los Angeles papers are loud in their praises of the energy and public spirited enterprise displayed by Mr P. Beaudry, particularly in a grand water supply project just completed, a full description of which we find in The Herald. We append the introductory remarks of that paper:

Yesterday was a day of triumph for Mr. Beaudry, and for the city of Los Angeles. The task of raising water to the hills in the northern part of the city, which involved so much planning, labor, pluck and capital, was completed and its success assured. Glory enough for one day. For seven years past Mr Beaudry has been forming his plans, and expended his capital for this very object. He has purchased a large portion of the hill property, comprising several hundred acres, and has staked the whole amount of his outlay on this one venture. Without water the land was worthless, and water it had not. Although comprising some of the most delightful building sites in the county, the property could not even be given away for residence purposes. When Mr. Beaudry proposed to erect machinery to supply the all-important want, many wiseacres shook their heads and said, "It can't be done; it's well enough for you to try, but then ——" A corporation representing sixty thousand dollars capital preferred to be excused, nobody else wanted to burn their fingers (figuratively speaking) with the water project, and so Mr. Beaudry, with the weight of his hill speculation on his shoulders, was compelled to go it alone." How well he has acquitted himself of his task, is easily told.

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT FLIRTS.

BY PAT MCGINNIS.

[Written for THE INDEPENDENT.]

I was once younger than I am now, and had less sense—if possible. Then I lived in a pretty little valley, where purling streams, prolific soil, pretty girls, hard shell preaching and ignorance all conspired to make us happy. I was the right age to love and I made use of the age. In fact, love and courtship were my chief studies. I saw but little use in book knowledge. If a stuck up school teacher had come into our settlement and said the world was round, and that the sun didn't run, he would have been persecuted worse than Galileo was for promulgating his new astronomical theory—we would have hooted him out as a crazy impostor.

My duck's name was Mittie. She was the belle of the valley, and I had no ambition—I went for Mittie. Pretty was no name for her attractions. If girls could be angels, Mittie was an archangel, and I thought that all she lacked of being an angel was the wings. But I should have objected to her having wings, for fear she would have flown away and left me alone on earth. Mittie was pretty and witty. She had raven hair, dark eyes, vermeil lips, dimpled cheeks, snowy neck, and was kind, gentle, loving, clinging, confiding and affectionate. I loved Mittie! The birds sang Mittie, the bells rang Mittie, the hens cackled Mittie and the zephyrs played Mittie with the whispering leaves. Mittie was my theme of themes and dream of dreams. I made trouble with store clothes, low quartered shoes, speckled shirts, paper collars, cravats, cologne, and spoiled three razors trying to grow a moustache during the time I was courting Mittie.

Mittie's mother believed in shouting (but didn't believe in me), and said that she believed in lottery so far as marrying was concerned. Though she never stated whether or not she believed Mittie was "lotted" to me for a wife. Mittie had a little brother that was a stumbling stone in the path of my courtship. I got to calling too often to suit him, and he suggested to me one day in the presence of Mittie, "See here, Mr. McGinnis, don't you think you'd better bring over your duds and stay here all the time? There's no use running backwards and forwards so much." I didn't say anything to him, but if I had had him out I would have sent him off to be a little angel. Mittie didn't scold him enough to suit me for his uncalled for impudence.

Time rolled on apace. I had a rival and his name was John. Mittie was a member of the church, and could shout first rate for one of her age. She told me that John was not in my way. She said, "I told you that I love but one, I have told you enough. I can never love another as I really love you. You certainly understand me. You need have no fears. I don't love John, I only like him as a friend." Although Mittie belonged to the church, I concluded to settle the question by proposing marriage. My proposition was accepted, but Mittie said we would have to run away. "Why," I asked, "what's the objection?" "Papa says we are both too young to marry; but we can steal off and get married, and he will have to be all right." "Any way," I replied. It was in the flowery month of May, and we arranged the Thursday night following for the clandestine movement. Before we parted Mittie said low and sweetly, "Please bring some friend with you to aid us; bring John, for he is our best friend; but bring him with you." I assured her that I would be there about 10 o'clock in the night, and bring a thousand Johns to officiate if she wished them. We kissed and I started 16 times before I made a leave of it. On Wednesday following I took my mother aside and said, "Ma, ask in five or six cooks, kill all the domincker chickens on the place, and have a big dinner prepared for Thursday. I will have Mittie here on that day as my wife." My brother-in-law was a squire, and I went and requested him to be ready to perform the ceremony about 12 on Thursday night. I sold my fiddle, purchased my license and then called on John. When he heard the object of my errand he affected astonishment, but assured me that he would do anything in the world to accommodate me; that he would fix up, prepare a horse and buggy and call around after me about 9 o'clock Thursday night. Thus the preparations were arranged. I told pa about it. He said little either way; signified that when I got married I would find something else to do besides cursing and stealing watermelons.

All things were now lovely in the valley for me, and I never felt so important in my life. Thursday night came. My linen was starched, and I was bathed in rose oil from head to foot. John arrived with the horse and buggy all rigged up in style. I leaped in by his side, as happy as a king, and we arrived at the hitching post of Mittie's residence at about the appointed hour. Soon I discovered the little angel emerge from the entry, fluttering in the finest paraphernalia. All was on the tiptoe of excitement, and I was bouncing around with the airs and manœuvres of a French poodle fyste. John met Mittie at the gate; they whispered low one moment, and she hurried up to me and exclaimed, "Oh, darling, I have left my satchel in the room on the table! Won't you go and get it? Be easy, for papa and mamma sleep in that room. Oh, be easy, it won't do for them to wake." "Can't you go without?" "No, no, darling, I must have it—but go easy." "I'll go or die, of course," said I. I noticed nothing, but hurried to the room door with my heart beating like a forge hammer. The first pass I made was to fall over a chair lam—bang—lam.

"Who is that? What's that!" exclaimed the old man.

"Want water. I only—"

"Want the devil! in this room. Get out—get out—out. Who are you? Mittie! Mittie!"

"I am going. I am going," Said I. "Goddlemighty! Who is that!

I rushed for the door, fell over a spinning wheel and lit in the garden; the dogs covered me, and I tell you they chawed me considerable. I arose again, however, tore through some rose bushes, ruined my clothes and lost my hat. I run through the yard to the post. I could hear the old lady screaming and the old man charging. I could see nothing of John and Mittie. I ran to where the buggy was, but it was gone. I expected they had hurried on to my brother-in-law's, as I had told John that we would marry there. I ran every step of the way, and John and Mittie were—not there. My brother in law asked me where my hat was. I told him in a few words. He said there was a joke up—that I was played off on. Daylight for the first time broke upon my understanding. I saw it all. I then thought of pistols, bowie knives, shot guns and strychnine. I thought of all desperate things. My brother in law wanted to laugh, but thought I might be dangerous just then.

I stayed all night with him and went home next morning. "What in the world is the matter," exclaimed my mother. I told her nothing much, but she needn't mind about that big dinner.

I then retired to the barn loft, and stayed there twenty four hours, until all the facts had leaked out. Pa came to me and asked me if I didn't think I'd better go off and go to school awhile. I told him I thought it would be a good idea. I went. John and Mittie were married that night, and are now doing better than I am. So you see I lost my duck and my hat, and have never found either since. Selah!

Steamboated.

For several weeks past some of the "big dailies" have been "steamboating" their readers with the information that "a steamboat is being built at Cerro Gordo to ply on Owens Lake." That will be a launch worth looking at when that boat is sent down from an elevation of 4,000 feet, over ways ten miles long, in order to reach the lake or the nearest point where water can be obtained in quantities sufficient to dampen the captain's grog for less than four cents a gallon. It will be a sight worthy of the best efforts of a Chronicle reporter. A steamboat has, however, been plying on the lake for the last two years.

From Panamint.

Mr. Caldwell, who has just returned from Panamint, speaks in the most glowing terms concerning the mines in that district. So far as richness goes there has never been such ore seen in the United States. Steps are being taken for the erection of a ten-stamp mill and roasting furnace.—Los Angeles Star, May 23

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE. Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

Mining Matters.

A tunnel is being driven in on the Silver Sprout which, it is expected, will tap the ledge in about twenty days and about 50 feet below the bottom of the deepest shaft. Should the ore at that point turn out, in accordance with confident expectation, as good as in the shaft, the mine will be considered as prospected, and permanent operations looking to the reduction of the ore be at once commenced.... Captain Chase is still perseveringly hammering away, solitary and alone as for the last three or four years, on his tunnel over at the Chrysopolis. He is in now about 150 feet, every inch of it his own labor, and full in the faith that he will strike the ledge in a very few feet more. We hope so, and a second Mono in value.... Mr Van Arsdale is in San Francisco, but his return may be expected soon, when, as a result of his trip, it is very probable that work at the Swansea furnace and at the Cottonwood flume will be resumed at once.... Mr. Belshaw returned to Cerro Gordo a few days since; Mr. Beaudy is still below; both furnaces are constantly in full blast.

Let Us Hear.

Our mining interests are attracting considerable outside attention this Spring, as is evidenced by a number of letters of inquiry addressed to this office, as well as in other ways. As all the mines are from 12 to 100 miles distant from us it is clearly out of the question for us to make up reports from personal observation, therefore the only means we can possibly have to keep the public acquainted with the fact that such mines are receiving any attention at all, rests with the miners themselves. We are occasionally in receipt of brief communications from correspondents containing valuable informarion regarding mining operations, particularly Panamint, but these do not come often enough. Benton, Panamint and every other district, come to the center! One sentence at a time or forty, it matters not which nor how.

June 17.

The indications are very flattering for the June 17th ball to be the largest attended of any we have ever had here. Preparations are being made for the accommodation of not less than one hundred couples, and the chances are that full that number will be present, in connection with the Pioneer celebration and ball together. The dinner and ball supper are to be given at the Blaney House and the dance at the Court House. The Cerro Gordo string band will furnish the music. All members of the Invitation Committee are respectfully requested to see, each in his own circle of acquaintances, that the cards of invitation are properly and thoroughly distributed; but independent of these let it be understood that the invitation is general. The tickets will be issued the coming week.

New Brewery.

We would call attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Walters & Kurtz, who now have the Star Brewery near Camp Independence, in satisfactory operation. I. O. G. Ts will note that Art. II and their wants are looked after with care, the soda and sarsaparilla being warranted not to make the drunk come under any circumstances, and yet to be better tasted than the best sheepherder's delight in the State. Parties who want to do the grand at balls and dinners might get a useful hint from these few remarks.

County Court.

The suit between John Lucas et als., and C. L. Jackson for the second right to the water of Lone Pine creek has occupied the attention of this Court and a jury of twelve the entire week, with a pretty fair prospect at this writing of the next going in the same way. The testimony is quite voluminous, and the trial very tedious, because it is all taken in writing. Bennett & Gregg appear for Jackson and Reddy for Lucas.

Gaining.

Mr. Cowles, Cartago agent of the Cerro Gordo Freighting Co., informs us that the teams, since the completion of the railroad to San Fernando, now make the round trip in eleven days, increasing their capacity so much that they have gained somewhat on the furnaces, there being but two of the latter running. The number of bars of bullion now on hands at Cartago does not exceed 6,000.

The Eclipse.

It appears that Captain Eudey has made satisfactory arrangements to go on with operations at the Eclipes mine and mill, having now a number of men at work upon the property, which number is to be considerably increased at once, or immediately on the return of the Captain from Grass Valley where he has gone after his family, and more men.

The Bishop Creek Store.

S. Pinchower, as will be seen by his new advertisement, is prepared now to do a largely increased mercantile business, and will give the grain and feed line especial attention.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the schoolhouse here at 11 A. M., and 7:30 P. M., to-morrow.

Notable Visit.

We are pleased to record a visit this week from James Crawford, Engineer of the Texas & Pacific, and Los Angeles & Independence Railroads. Mr Crawford, though but a young man (and by the way, just married, which may be a militating circumstance possibly), is a practical engineer of ten or eleven years' experience, and is withal a very pleasant and energetic gentleman. As our readers are aware Mr. Crawford is now engaged in making a preliminary survey of the L. A. & I. Railroad. In pursuance of this duty he has traveled in a buggy the entire line as contemplated via. San Bernardino, Cajon Pass and Borax Lake to this place. His return will be over the San Fernando route. His report will give exact distances by odometer, and approximate profile of the country on both routes, and, pending the appearance of these reports, it will be of little avail to attempt a statement in detail of what has already been done. We may state, however, that Mr. Crawford's line of travel was from Cajon Pass to a heavily timbered (large cottonwoods) valley at the bend of the Mohave. This valley is covered with excellent grass, is some 14 miles in length, Government land and with but few settlers. Thence, northerly in nearly a direct line to Black's ranch, 20 miles, thence 20 miles further to Little Lake canyon, 115 miles total distance from Los Angeles. At these several points there is an abundance of water either on or quite near the surface, and the same is true at 20-mile intervals of the remainder of the route through to this point. From the Mohave north to Borax Lake and in fact all the way through to Owens Lake, the line lies through a chain of valleys or dry lakes, separated by but slight elevations, so that the route is practically level, and nowhere over shifting sand, or enough so to be of any consideration in operating a railroad. This route, both in an engineering and commercial point of view, appears to present peculiar advantages. It will command the highly important trade of San Bernardino county, Northern Arizona and numerous mining districts before and after reaching the Inyo line; notable, the two most of these south of Cerro Gordo are Panamint and the borax mines. The entire distance from terminus to terminus does not exceed 225 miles. Mr. Crawford presents some new ideas in relation to a wooden road, putting that proposition in a pretty favorable light in some respects, but we shall defer a review of these matters for notice hereafter; also a presentation of several articles in this connection appearing in the Los Angeles and San Bernardino papers. At the desire of Los Angeles parties, Mr. Crawford took a short run over to Waucoba, but in the very limited time at his disposal, could do no more than take a cursory view of one or two of the most accessible mines. With these he is very favorably impressed, but claims for himself no experience of value as a silver mining engineer or expert. He started on his return yesterday morning. We shall look for his promised report with considerable interest.

"Winnedemuh."

This is the name of the remarkable pinnacle of rock, known as the "Piute Monument," looming up 80 feet high, sharp and slender as a tall lighthouse, on the crest of the Inyo range directly east of this place. Winnedemuh according to the Indian legend, was very many years ago, the Washington of their tribe, and dying his spirit took up its abode in this rocky tower, where it will always remain the watchful guardian of the tribe until the latter misbehave themselves, in which event the monument goes down, Winnedemuh's spirit gives o'er its benign vigils, and his descendants will thenceforth have to look out for themselves. As the monument stood unharmed through the mighty shaking up of two years ago, the chances are that our red brethern have builded their faith on a permanent rock, and will have to carry themselves very bad indeed, before Winnedemuh's outlook becomes untenable for his watchful and potent spirit.

Rev. John G. Ames.

The above is the name of the gentleman whom we mentioned as having arrived here last week from Washington in connection with some Government affairs—the land department more particularly, we may now state. Mr Ames overhauled the books of the Land Office here, and we have no doubt, will report the immediate affairs of the office in correct if not neat shape; some extraneous matters more or less intimately associated therewith may, however, not receive the reverend gentleman's highest enconiums; should think not anyway. Sunday evening Mr. Ames preached a sermon to an unusually large number of interested listeners, at the close of which, a liberal contribution was taken up for him, but every cent of this he gave to the Sunday School. On the following morning he took his departure for Sacramento.

Off Again.

Wednesday morning last our junior started on a visit to Virginia, Nevada He expects to return with his family in about three weeks, though it is possible he may not be able to do so for a couple of months. In the meantime, as heretofore for many months, our sanctum sanctorum is almost exclusively at the "case"—which saves all expense for pencils by the way—therefore we have no time to loaf around and interview people as to what they know about this thing or that, and if our friends won't interest themselves a little in the way of bringing current events of a local nature to our notice, the chances are ten to one these current events will never be recorded for the benefit of the present or future generations.

Off for British Columbia.

We received a call to-day from Mr D. W. B. McKay, who has so long and acceptably taught the public school at Lone Pine. His school closed yesterday with a fine exhibition, and Mr. McKay is now on his way to British Columbia, where he will sojurn for a time. He is an excellent teacher and his departure will be regretted.

Man Killed.

We learn that a Mexican whose name we understand to be Salazar, was accidentally killed at a wood camp near Cerro Gordo on Thursday last He was rolling logs, when one of them in rolling caught his clothing and crushed him to death instantly. He was brought to Lone Pine for burial.

Casuality.

Mr. John A. Rittgers, living near Lone Pine, received an ugly fall on the 3d instant, caused by his horse stumbling and going down with him. He came up the next day to Dr. White's hospital, where he now is. We learn that he has no bones broken, though the shoulder joint on the left side is severely injured, and some of its ligatures probably ruptured. He is expected to be well in a few days.

San Luis.

We note, from matter contained in The San Luis Obispo Tribune, that Judge Reed goes to that place to sit in a case involving a valuable water right in which A. M. Loomis, late of Lone Pine, is a party in interest. Mr Loomis appears to be doing quite an extensive business as a real estate agent. F. K. Miller's card as attorney at law also appears in The Tribune.

Resigned—List of Patents.

Elsewhere will be found a card from Mr. Earl announcing the fact that he has tendered his resignation of Land Office Register, and further that the parties whose names are published in the same connection can obtain their land patents by forwarding the Receiver's receipts to him. This is good news. Es todos.

On Appeal.

Belshaw et als. have filed an appeal in the Union-San Felipe mining suit. The bonds required, according to the statement in The Bulletin, amount to $50,000. Next week we shall publish The Bulletin's synopsis of Judge Belden's opinion in this highly important case.

Decoration Day at Bishop Creek.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Decoration Day began lowering and unauspicious, raining most of the forenoon and until near 12 M. But our citizens, the sons and daughters of a brave ancestry, were not to be scared or cheated out of their coveted opportunity to honor the memory of the departed ones, who periled their lives in defense of the principles they deemed right.

Soon after 12 M a goodly number of ex soldiers, of both Federal and Confederate armies, a fair representation of Oasis Lodge, I. O. G. T., and others, with the Star Spangled Banner gracefully floating in the breeze at their front, marched to the resting place of those whose memory they designed to honor. Here the grave of Comrade Wm. Clark was first surrounded in hollow square; very appropriate and impressive remarks were made by ex-soldiers C. H. Walcott, Geo. Collins, ——James and C. Moore. Next a cordial shaking of hands and fraternal greeting by the late opponents in arms, but now brothers. An appropriate song was sung, and a prayer offered by Chaplain Pratt. The grave was then beautifully decorated with bright flowers. As Good Templars, appropriate remarks were made by Brothers Thos. McLeod and D. E. Hunter Next an appropriate song was effectively rendered by the young ladies, followed by a second decoration.

The assemblage then formed in hollow square around the grave of the late Frank Moore, where they listened attentively to interesting remarks by ex-soldiers Andrew Clark and C. H. Walcott. This grave was then beautifully decorated with flowers. Benediction by Rev. A. Clark followed, after which the assemblage returned to place of starting, much pleased and gratified with the manner in which the ceremonies were conducted.

BISHOP CREEK.

Tuolumne Reunion.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary invitation to attend the Seventh Annual Tuolumne County Reunion, to take place at Badger's Park, Oakland, on the 17th of this month. Our thanks are due all the same, but we fear what little celebrating we do on that day will have to be attended to nearer home. For the information of Tuolumnites resident in this county, we make the following quotations from the accompanying circular:

No special invitations can be expected by any one from Tuolumne, as it is the right and privilege of all (proper persons) now resident, or who have been residents of Tuolumne county, to attend and invite their friends.

A book has been prepared, and will be placed in a conspicuous place on the grounds, for registering the names of all present and former residents of the county, date of arrival in it, and of departure, if residing elsewhere, present address, occupation, etc.

—The San Joaquin and Tulare Narrow Gauge Railroad Company has been gathered to its fathers. It is dead—dead as old Morley who was as dead as a door nail; the Treasurer has been directed to pay off all indebtedness and divide the surplus pro rata among the stockholders.

Aurora.

Judging from the following, taken from The Borax Miner, May 30. Aurora is not so very dead after all:

From Mr. Jas. S. Jameson, who came in from Aurora by Thursday's stage, we learn that the prospects of that camp are materially brightening The Greeley Bros. are putting up a five-stamp mill, which is expected to be running in a couple of weeks on ore from their own mines. Horace Marden has leased the old Poor mill from Meredith & Kimball and Buckley The "coasters" around Aurora have accumulated large quantities of high grade ore and will now have an opportunity to realize. The latter mill steamed up during the week, and everything found in good working order. It will commence crushing ore on next Monday Mr. Fred. Begtelle is building a five stamp mill at Sunshine Valley, four miles southwest of Aurora.

Narrow-Gauge Iron.

Among the freight forwarded to the other side of the Sierra yesterday was a large quantity of narrow gauge railroad iron, en route for Palisade, to be used in the construction of Woodruff, Elnor & Pritchard's road to Eureka. Some six miles of track on this road have already been laid, and but for the backwardness of the season much more work would have been performed. During this Summer the track will be extended as rapidly as possibly. The total length of the main road will be about eighty miles, but it will probably have branches extending to various mining localities.—Sacramento Union, May 28.

Col. Howard.

Col. J. G. Howard has returned from Inyo. He had a note book with valuable memoranda on the physical curiosities of Inyo, which he had gathered for us, but it was stolen out of his room, and our readers will lose some interesting facts in regard to the altitude of Mount Whitney and other notable elevations in that region.—Los Angeles Express.

We are sorry about this, particularly on account of the notes relating to "elevations."

Showing Them Up.

An enterprising Granger has bought the famous landaulet that was used by Attorney General Williams. He intends to drive it all through the West, to be drawn by four horses, and to contain liveried servants like those kept by departments in Washington. The object is to show the luxury, dissipation and apeishness of the public men of this day at the National Capital.

A Matter of Years.

The Los Angeles Express says we are mistaken somewhere near about five years in placing the age of the sweet poetess of Los Angeles, Miss Addis, at only 12. We wouldn't have said a word about the young lady's age if we had had any reason to think it was above 12, for after that period up to forty five a girl's age is not a legitimate subject of inquiry.

Salts.

Bakersfield has some reputation abroad for being a "dredfuly sick place." Had a stranger appeared in our town on election day while all the saloons were closed and seen the many persons going in to the drug stores, he would have fled our town and sworn there was an epidemic of the most virulent type raging. We inquired of one physician what was the matter—what they were taking? He said, "Salts! That, and nothing more.—California

The Sufferers.

The Mayor of New Orleans has telegraphed to the Mayor of neighboring cities that the sufferers by the great flood are in urgent need of relief. Up to the present time only $180,000 has been forwarded for relief, while at least $1,000,000 is required.

—The Los Angeles Star boasts of its prosperous city. Four lines of railroad now center there, and another is in course of construction. One street railroad is completed, and immediately another will be put under contract.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celebrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

Important Mining Suit.

[From The S. F. Bulletin, May 28.]

One of the most interesting decisions on record, to miners, was recently made by Judge Belden, of the Sixteenth Judicial District. The property involved is one of, if not the most valuable lead and silver mine in California. Its present market value is estimated at $1,500,000. The trial created great interest, not only in the Southern counties of the State but mine owners of this city watched the result with close attention.

The contested property is located in the town of Cerro Gordo. This settlement is situated about six miles east of the north end, of Owens Lake, in Inyo county. It owes its origin and magnitude to mining interests. Its population numbers between three and four hundred persons, who are entirely dependent upon the mines for support. These mines were discovered in the Fall of 1865, and the first location was made the following year. The most valuable mine yet worked is the Union, which was purchased of the original locators in 1868. Its working shaft is down 500 feet, and the ledge and works of the mine are valued at fully a million and a half of dollars. On the same hill, and running across the Union, is located the San Felipe mine. The Union was discovered by one Beltran and two of his workmen, who were engaged in sinking a shaft on the San Felipe. They went on working apparently harmoniously together, although some of the locators in the San Felipe complained because they were not included in the Union location.

In February, 1873, an action in ejectment was commenced in the Sixteenth District Court by the San Felipe Mining Company, against M. W. Belshaw and others, owners of the Union mine. At the time this suit was instituted Belshaw was in possession of the San Felipe mine under a Sheriff's deed, but the San Felipe Company set up a redemption of the property. The cause came on for trial at Independence in July last, and it lasted ten days. There were thirty-six witnesses examined, and the testimony in the case is contained in about 6,000 folios. The attorneys for plaintiff were B. S. Brooks and John McHenry of this city, and Mr. Freeman of Kern and P. W. Bennett of Inyo county. W. H. Patterson of this city, and Patrick Reddy of Inyo represented the defendants.

J. J. Moore, Recorder of the District at the time the claim was located, testified that he wrote the notice of location, and he was shortly afterward called to measure the claim. He commenced at the south San Felipe shaft, and ran up the hill in a southeasterly direction 1,200 feet. The vein was silver quartz, from eighteen inches to two feet thick. Twelve hundred feet were also laid off in the opposite direction down the hill. There were no croppings to be seen northerly from the shaft.

Ventura Beltran the discoverer and locator of the San Felipe and Union mines, testified that he posted the Recorder's notice above the original shaft on the quartz vein. He could trace the vein some 600 feet up the hill, and did work there in 1866.

Girardo Valenzuelo sunk the first shaft on the San Felipe vein in 1866. He found silver ore with spots of lead; vein varying from two to two and a half feet thick.

Pedro Astorga, one of the locators, said he claimed the vein for silver, and he followed the croppings up the hill a distance of 1,200 feet.

J. M. Byrne swore that he examined the vein in 1867 for a party intending to purchase, and Beltran pointed out his location up the hill in a southeasterly direction.

The other testimony was not material, because the witnesses were late comers at the mines. They all agreed that the San Felipe vein was silver ore while the cross vein, or Union, was galena.

The jury, after an absence of two hours and a half, found a general verdict for plaintiffs, which, under the construction of the Court, gave plaintiff possession of both mines. A stay of proceedings was granted until argument on motion for a new trial could be heard. The motion came up for argument in San Jose on December 27. Judge Belden took the matter under advisement, and a few days ago he filed a voluminous opinion denying the motion. Meanwhile defendants have been in possession of and working the mines.

In his opinion, Judge Belden considered the points set forth in defendant's bill of exceptions, with a brief summary of the case, and of the theory upon which the plaintiff claimed to recover in the following language:

Cerro Gordo hill is the site of the premises in controversy. Through this hill having a southeast and northwest direction, passes a mineral lode generally known as the San Felipe. This vein is of small width and of but little value. Its predominant mineral is silver. The San Felipe was located and recorded in April, 1866. Upon the same hill, and running nearly due north and south, is another mineral vein, here designated as the Union. This vein is very large—from 8 to 20 feet in width. Its walls are irregular and not always very well defined. Its predominating mineral is galena, carrying a percentage of silver that makes the lead a valuable one. This load was located by grantors of defendants in October, 1866, and is the mine in controversy in this action.

There were two propositions asserted by plaintiffs, and upon both they introduced testimony, although the first was virtually abandoned before the case was submitted to the jury.

The first, that the San Felipe was identified with, and was a part of the large lead here deignated as the Union.

The second, that their location, claim, and explorations were actually made upon the lead lode.

It is probably a fact that the San Felipe lode intercepts and crosses the the Union lode at a point near the orignal works of the Union Mining Company. Testimony was offered by plaintiffs, showing that they placed their notice and piled a monument of stones about this point, and as near the ascertained site of the Union as that of the San Felipe lode. A number of witnesses were called to this fact, of the place of their notice and of the monument, as also to various points at which it was claimed plaintiff's grantors extracted ores from the lead vein. Numerous samples of ores were submitted to the witnesses who extracted and worked these ores, for the purpose of showing their identity with or dissimilarity to the Union lode, or to the San Felipe, and the ores taken from these separate veins. Parcels of these ores, thus testified to by witnesses and experts, were submitted to the jury, and explained to them by the respective witnesses.

It was further shown that the quartz rock of Cerro Gordo hill was much fractured, and that it was traversed in every direction by veins, more or less metalliferous in their character and uncertain in their course; and that the direction continuance and connection of these veins was a matter of much difficulty and uncertainty. While the case was in progress more than one exploration and examination was made upon motion of parties, and by order of Court, to explain the character and course of some mineral formation which, it was claimed, tended to explain one or the other side of the case.

To each phase and proposition tending to show that the vein located in April, 1866, and worked thereafter by plaintiffs' grantors, plaintiffs called many witnesses; and if these witnesses were to be credited, they did show that by location, assertion, and exploration they intended to hold the lead lode, and did maintain this theory to the satisfaction of the jury, at least by several independent but converging lines of testimony.

That the defendants made a very formidable attack upon plaintiffs' case; that they did compel the virtual abandonment of the claim that the San Felipe and the Union was one and the same lode, and that they made a strong showing that the original claim and location of plaintiffs was upon the small silver lode, and not upon the Union, must be admitted. But with this contradiction in witnesses, this conflict in testimony, the jury had to deal and decide.

If numbers and positive statements were to be credited, there was enough to justify the finding for the plaintiffs. To interfere with this finding, I must set aside a conclusion supported by very many positive and unimpeached witnesses testifying to the location of the notices and monuments; to their recollection of the comparison of minerals extracted many years since; to the opinions of experts and miners, based upon a personal and careful inspection of the premises, and upon the personal comparisons made by the jury of many of the mineral specimens produced in Court.

If there is one class of cases above another in which the verdict of a jury, fairly obtained, should not be lightly set aside, in my opinion it is a mining case, in which propositions of disputed identity are supported by testimony of this character.

If the fact that I might have reached a different conclusion from the same testimony, or that I would probably have found otherwise, is sufficient to set aside this verdict, then jury trials may well be dispensed with; for in such a case to differ from the Court upon a proposition of fact is to annul the verdict. This is not the rule. The verdict of the jury, when fairly attained, is entitled to some weight, even though it may not be such as the Judge would have found, and it must be something more than a doubt that will justify the Court in disturbing it. I find no warrant in the cases I have examined for saying that a fair construction of the testimony in this case does not sustain the finding of the jury.

The opinion next proceeds to consider the newly discovered evidence. This branch of the case was presented by fifty nine affidavits, filed upon the part of the defendants and of the plaintiffs. The substance of these affidavits are, on the one side, that the examination of the South San Felipe, since the trial, shows a well defined silver lode for a distance of 227 feet in length, and that this lode is wholly distinct from the Union. On the other side it is claimed that a careful examination of the drift shows that no such lode exists. And, for the purpose of throwing discredit upon the testimony of one witness, affidavits with letter of witness, are filed, in which he proposes to negotiate his services as a witness. The Judge considers the newly discovered evidence simply cumulative, and that the testimony of the witness who was in the market was not of sufficient importance to affect the result of the trial. In conclusion Judge Belden says: "I find no warrant for annulling the action or setting aside the verdict of the jury in this case."

Shines Again.

The Sun, the San Francisco paper which went down during the Napthaly-De Young war, now again shines regularly each day, and to all appearances is as respectable sheet as any in the city. Its particular mission seems to be to tan the De Youngs and warm the Woodhull into public favor. The Woodhull's lecture appears in full in a recent number, and The Sun in every issue takes pains to impress the idea that Mrs. W. and Tennie are nice, decent women, too nice to justify people in turning up their noses at them, as is their wont.

Active.

The Vigilantes are very active lately. Last week, at Belmont, Nevada, they hanged McIntyre and Walker, two amatuer shootists. These law preservers call themselves the 301's. Near Los Angeles about the same date a party of men found the Mexican who attempted to murder the Turner family a few days previously, in a brush pile. He showed fight and they filled him pretty full of buckshot; then while taking him to the doctors his necktie caught on the limb of a tree and choked him to death.

The Narrow-Gauge.

The Denver narrow-gauge railroad, now in operation for 118 miles, extends south from Denver along the Rocky Mountain range to Puebla and is bound for New Mexico and "the Halls of the Montezumas." It did a business last year of $500,000, one-half of which was net profit. Its managers report a saving in operating expenses over the broad-gauge of 35 per cent., and a saving in construction and equipment of 37½ per cent on what a broad-gauge would have cost.

Homicide at Tule River.

About the 1st of the month Wm. Brown and Tom Murphy, both roughs and between whom existed an old grudge, got into a row at Tule river which ended in Brown getting himself killed. He made the attack, so Murphy was acquitted on examination. Brown had been shot twice previously, once at White river leaving him with a crooked arm.

Jury Law.

A bill passed in the House prohibiting persons who cannot write English from serving as jurors in the United States court. If it was amended by adding that on one could vote who could not read English, it would help purify the poiltics of the country.

Confirmed.

They have gone and done it. The Senate has confirmed the appointment of the saintly Richardson to the high dignity of Judge of the Court of Claims. To speak "sarkasticol," this is a reward of merit.

A Success.

The Borax Miner is informed that the new-fangled furnace invented by Dr. Marriotte, and lately set up in Sylvania is a success. It goes without a blast.

JUDGE BELDEN'S OPINION.

On the first page of this issue will be found a synopsis of the principal points of the Union-San Felipe mining suit, and in his own language, the main portion of Judge Belden's opinion denying defendants' motion for a new trial. This is a curious document; well worth special examination.

But first we will notice the remarks of the newspapers. They say it is most interesting case to miners, So it is, as involving mining property of very great value, but if it involves any new principle of law we don't know what it is unless it is this: That when original locators of a mine, either themselves or assigns, discover that they have made a mistake—that a subsequent location by other parties in the immediate vicinity proves to be much the most valuable, that then, law, by proper manipulation, perversion or what not, will not only confirm their own original location, but give them the other and more valuable also; that, whether the claims of these original locaters to the property of the others are founded on but a mere pretext or a plausible technical legal right, it is the duty of courts to reverse an acknowledged rule of law and justice by throwing all doubts against the equities of the case, which, in this instance, obviously lay on the side of the defendants. It was their unaided efforts alone that gave this property any tangible or known value, that value which alone made it an object of desire to the others. This value was as much the property of those who produced it as would be the crop planted by a farmer on what he in good faith believed to be his own pre-emption, but which on the eve of his harvest, might be taken from him by some newly sprung floating grant, swamp land grab like one now interesting the Visalia people, or any other possible technical wrong. Though law may be and often is strained to deprive men of a manifest equitable right (like that of Belshaw and Beandry to that value which they alone have established for a property honestly purchased and developed as their own without the slightest prejudice to or alleged fraud upon the rights of others, as also in the supposed case of the farmer's crop), yet it is a manifest violation of the law's intent of justice when such results are thus brought about—when they are not allowed the benefit of any of the doubts always the right of such defendant. It is of interest to miners to know that such rights as these may be ignored; that a general verdict may not only affirm a title not disputed, but at the same time disaffirm a far more valuable one pertaining to others and add it to the other simply because it is valuable.

We deny that any special favors of law should be accorded plaintiff in any action setting up a very doubtful claim to the fruits of other mens' labors. To quote his Honor's words with a slight change or two "if there is one class of cases above another in which a verdict should be set aside it is a mining case where a verdict denies an unquestioned equitable right to him whose honest labors have proved the property worth a contest, and is given in favor of him who stands idly by waiting for it to become of such value before setting up a counter claim, 'supported by testimony of this character.'" But let us take a look at this opinion which affirms a verdict which gives two mines where only one was asked for.

First, as to some matters of facts by which his Honor labors to sustain his conclusions. It is as clear as any self-evident fact can be that he did not read understandingly even the principal points of the evidence contained in those 6,000 folios, or having done so, has so generalized his review as to convey impressions not snstained by facts.

There was no "probability" shown by evidence or in fact that "the San Felipe lode intercepts or crosses the Union near the orignal works of the Union Mining company." It crosses the projected line of the Union some 280 feet from those works, but the Union has never yet been shown to extend south toward the assumed point of intersection nearer than about 70 feet, a fact of some importance of itself.

The Judge says "if numbers and positive statements were to be credited there was enough to justify the finding for the plaintiffs." Here we reproduce all the testimony published with the opinion, which is about the sum of all the important testimony presented in the case on either side, as the Judge himself states in the last paragraph:

J. J. Moore, Recorder of the District at the time the claim was located, testified that he wrote the notice of location, and he was shortly afterward called to measure the claim. He commenced at the south San Felipe shaft, and ran up the hill in a southeasterly direction 1,200 feet. The vein was silver quartz, from eighteen inches to two feet thick. Twelve hundred feet were also laid off in the opposite direction down the hill. There were no croppings to be seen northerly from the shaft.

Ventura Beltran the discoverer and locator of the San Felipe and Union mines, testified that he posted the Recorder's notice above the original shaft on the quartz vein. He could trace the vein some 600 feet up the hill, and did work there in 1866.

Girardo Valenzuello sunk the first shaft on the San Felipe vein in 1866. He found silver ore with spots of lead; vein varying from two to two and a half feet thick.

Pedro Astorga, one of the locators, said he claimed the vein for silver, and he followed the croppings up the hill a distance of 1,200 feet.

J. M. Byrne swore that he examined the vein in 1867 for a party intending to purchase, and Beltran pointed out his location up the hill in a southeasterly direction.

The other testimony was not material, because the witnesses were late comers at the mines. They all agreed that the San Felipe vein was silver ore while the cross vein, or Union, was galena.

It is here positively shown by two of the original locators (being all who testified in the case), and who of all others ought to know what was intended, that they located this as a silver mine and as the San Felipe itself; that its croppings were traceable, and by them and Recorder Moore were traced and measured up the hill southeast from the shaft (South San Felipe, the only one opened by any member or employe of the company till after the location of the Union), a distance of 1,200 feet, and from the same point an equal distance down the hill. They saw no croppings down the hill from the shaft, the debris being sufficient to cover them, but, as will presently be seen, their surnises as to the continuance and course of the vein were correct. The distinct character and direction of this vein from the one in controversy was fully proven and distinctly admitted, as we ourself know, by Brooks, plaintiffs' leading attorney.

It being already established by the best possible authority, the locaters themselves, as a silver lode located as the San Felipe, and its distinct character from the lead lode proved and admitted, it would seem that the whole claim of plaintiffs must fall right there; but it didn't though the Judge says the other party forced them to abandon the important position of the identity of the two lodes. This would have been conclusive, in our opinion, but for an error of fact into which the jury or a portion of them fell into. At least we were so told by one of them a few days after the trial. They considered that the identity of the two lodes had been established, at least this far: That the smaller one if anything at all was a mere feeder or cross lode, intersecting the other at the shaft which they assumed, contrary to any positive testimony whatever, was sunk on the lead or Union lode, which it would hold by right of priority—all this right in the face of or against the declared intentions of the original locaters as shown by their testimony above quoted. Their shaft is a few feet east of the supposed line of the Union; that is, to project the Union by its known line it would pass, running south, a few feet west of this shaft, southeast of which 25 feet distant and directly on the line of the silver croppings, stood the monument and notice of the San Felipe. Besides this the nearest approach of the Union to this shaft or any part of the line of the silver lode is about 60 or 70 feet. No connection between the two was ever proved on the trial or probably ever will be if any credence is to be given the fifty-nine affidavits referred to by his Honor. These are the sworn opinions of some of the best men of Cerro Gordo, and based on explorations made purposely to ascertain the point. Among others who have personally examined the ground other than those making affidavit, was the junior of this paper who pronounces the assumption of a connection as simply absurd, and unsupported by any obvious proot whatever. One of plaintiffs' explorers, however, has told us and we presume, makes affidavit to the same effect, that he traced a connection so near to the Union shaft that he was certain it continued directly into it. But no part of this was offered in evidence, notwithstanding his Honor's remark in relation to explorations made by order of Court lead to a different conclusion.

Not a syllable of testimony was introduced based on any exploration ordered during the trial. But one such was ordered, and no report was received from that until after both sides had closed their testimony. McHenry, of one plaintiffs' attorneys, in his closing argument proceeded to inform the jury that the result of this exploration was to prove a very probable if not an absolute connection, but was stopped and severely reprimanded by the Court for pleading a point not in evidence.

The Judge is just as much mistaken in his statement (shown in the written opinion) that the jury were all at all times under the immediate surveillance of an officer. We have already stated our theory for the verdict rendered and mean to cast no imputation, other than of error, upon any juror, but during the whole trial two, and a portion of the time, three of the jurors passed their nights at home and were at other times beyond the charge of an officer. We mention these facts to show the surprising carelessness with which this highly important case has been disposed of. Yet these obvious errors in the opinion are no greater than all of those which, in general terms, asserts a preponderance of positive evidence to sustain the verdict. Where, upon any material point, was there any "conflict of testimony" either expert or practical?

The locaters swear positively to the identity of the silver lode as the one located as the San Felipe. Plaintiffs admit it to be a separate lode, but assert that their shaft upon that lode is also upon the other at point of intersection with the one they say their grantors intended to hold while the grantors themselves say it was the other; that the lead lode was not known to them or any one for some months after It was not proved, nor is not apparently susceptible of proof that the lead lode is connected with that shaft nearer than 60 feet, or approaches the locality of the original notice nearer than some 75 or 80 feet, this notice being off the line if it was projected south of the shaft on the silver lode. His Honor quotes no part of those "converging but independent lines of testimony satisfactorily" showing that by intent of notice, subsequent workings, etc., that plaintiffs' grantors intended and did locate the lead lode—still he quotes all there was of a positive nature that was adduced that point, but proving the exact opposite.

Without referring to some other discrepancies in this opinion, we conclude with a reference to a point mentioned above (but not put in evidence). This is that recent explorations prove the continuance of the silver lode from the South San Felipe across the projected line of the Union and down the hill 250 feet or more to another, tunnel the Miami, and yet no sign of a connection is any where seen, unless it be by one of those "fractures" his Honor truly says traverses the whole hill, but beyond that fact, proving nothing. Put the plaintiffs say their grantors and others were wrong in taking this silver lode for the San Felipe, so we will have to wait a year or so and see what the Supreme Court has to say about it.

A MENDICANT MONOPOLY.

We see that the Western Union Telegraph Company have thrown out "feelers" to cause the Inyo people to raise $15,000 for them as an inducement to extend their telegraph line to the populous center of that country. This is the old story of subsidy in business disguise to an opulent monopoly, to induce it to do what it ought to do without a subsidy. The Western Union Telegraph Company is earning money by the cart load. It has now the most stupendous monopoly in the United States, and by its extortionate charges is enabled to pay a quarterly dividend of two per cent. on stock that has been watered fifty times. On fair business principles its excessive earnings should be made to supply telegraphic facilities to places like Independence as well as better paying points. This is the rule which underlies the mail service, and should equally apply to the telegraphic service. San Bernardino, San Luis Obispo and now Independence have all been forced by this giant monopoly to advance about enough money to pay for their wire connections before they could have telegrapic facilities.—Los Angeles Express.

In reference to the above we will say this, that the proposition submitted two weeks since by Mr. Earl, for a $15,000 subsidy to this telegraph, has met an indifferent and insufficient response for two reasons: First, and principally, because it was fathered by a man known here to be so identified with monopolizing schemes and schemers as to create a fatal distrust, and second, because in connection with the above fact the proposition was lacking in essential stipulations as to terms, simply binding the subscribers, each to pay the amount of his subscription on demand, to be reimbursed, rates at the option of the company, in telegraphing his own messages. In other words, we were asked to gurantee business to the line to the amount of $15,000; pay the money in advance, and receive back the same amount, but no more, in lightning tolls, quit-claiming all proprietorship in both the direct profits of the line and as well as the line itself mostly if not wholly built by our own money. This section needs and demands a telegraph. It is a matter of little or no consequence who fathers the undertaking to supply this necessity, nor how much its dividends may be, or to whom they go, but it is a matter of some little consequence that the risks may not all be tacked to one side and all the profits postively assigned the other. Does this rich telegraph company need a cash advance, free of interest, at our hands to enable it to build this telegraph? If not that, if not a subsidy gouge worked up by its henchmen, let them agree with us that they will put the line in operation, we, on the other side, guaranteeing to furnish business, at previously understood rates, to the amount in the aggregate of $15,000 or $20,000, to be paid for "on delivery," and all to be taken up in a given time or the unpaid balance paid in cash. If it is legitimate business they want, let them submit a proposition something in that style, and through a man in whom we have some confidence, and we will answer for it it will secure a mutually satisfactory response. We are anxious to have these two per cent. monopolies smile on us, but to secure that desirable end we are not yet slopping over with an anxious desire to very largely subsidize anybody.

LETTER FROM OAKLAND.

What Women Can Do.

OAKLAND, June 3, 1874.

DEAR INDEPENDENT: Shall I tell you something of our election under the Local Option law? Well, we went in, we worked, we conquered, we, the women of Oakland, and its sturdy true men, but to the efforts of the women all parties concede our success. Five hundred women at the polls! Just think of it! And would you have believed it, the lords of creation who have hitherto considered the place sacred to masculinity, seemed to forget their "right divine," and experience a wholesome enjoyment of the presence and co-operation of wives, daughters and sweethearts. The roughest thing said in our precinct was to the effect that we "were not attending to our own business;" but the genus homo who uttered it soon found that we had an aptitude for our adopted calling which portended no increase to his allowance of bread and butter, since he won it by the degradation of his fellows. "Against License" was our ticket, and free lunches, ice water, boquets, reason and prayer were weapons of warfare employed. Perhaps our premises were not always well taken, nor our conclusions strictly logical (you see reasoning with a rumseller in front of his own den is a new experience), but if he did not perceive the weak points in our arguments and could do no better, it didn't matter, did it? It was a novel spectacle. Women in the street, on the sidewalk, in the thickest jams, intercepting men as they stepped from car or vehicle, bringing voters in their own carriages, working in groups or singly, persuading, arguing entreating, but mark you, always ladies in demeanor, speech and voice, always addressing men as strangers of whom nothing was expected but courtesy and—his vote. And the License men, with a few rare exceptions, behaved with wonderful consideration and self control. When too sorely pressed, one of them said, suppressing his rising anger, "Excuse me, ladies, I shall have to say something rough, if I answer your question truly, and I don't want to do that," and he bowed himself off. Others laughingly combatted the ladies all day, but yielded not one jot. Two women of ill-fame were sent over from San Francisco to distribute License tickets, but when Gen. Hennefin, leader of the License party, heard of it he sent them word they were not wanted and could retire, and therefore and so far deserves the gratitude of every true woman. Though he deals out the deadly drink from a gilded palace, I prefer to think this action sprung from a germ of true manhood yet lingering in his heart. I was struck with the simplicity of the ladies' dresses—simple calicoes and plain dark suits being generally worn—and felt proud of the purity of taste and feeling which scorned to employ blandishments in attire. The day was intensely hot, and the wind and dust under ordinary circumstances would have driven them from the streets, but from early morning till the sunset gun boomed across the Bay they toiled faithfully at their at work. There had been a great deal of preliminary work, in which the ladies bore the brunt. Some Adventists had been holding religious meetings in a tent on Broadway, and the Elders generously gave the use of this tent to the use of their temperance folk, and joined in their work with all their power. Though the election occurred on Saturday (their Sabbath) the Elders concluded to vote, believing they could do a greater good than by refraining from it, and thus keep their Sabbath holy, which struck me as practical Christianity. It is said one man publicly offered to give six hundred dollars to any benevolent institution if six respectable young ladies would distribute their "For License" tickets. Need I say that in this city of twenty thousand inhabitants there were no takers? By 9 o'clock P. M. the result was generally known, and an immense crowd gathered at the tent to hold a meeting of congratulation. Bells were rung and bonfires lighted; the jubilant people only finding their beds near midnight. Our majority was 253, and let me whisper it, a step has been unconsciously taken toward woman suffrage.

OAKLANDER.

A Mining Squabble

An English company bought the Eclipse gold mine, near Independence, Inyo county, about a year ago, sent out a Superintendent, and since then has expended $720,000 in working the mine. Seeing no prospect of pay ore, work has been stopped. Mr. Willett, a director charges that there has been gross mismanagement, and an investigation and a new management are among the things expected. He started for London yesterday, intending to return in November. The property includes a thirty-stamp mill and machinery valued at $100,000. A shaft has been sunk 350 feet, and there are 20,000 tons of ore in sight, estimated to yield $20 to the ton.—S. F. Chronicle, May 31.

— The newly-appointed Secretary of the Treasury, General Bristow, has entered upon the duties of the office.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's mother, Lone Pine, June 8, 1874, WM. JAS PHILLIPPAY, of Columbus, Nevada, to Mrs. CATHERINE DONATEAU, of Lone Pine.

The newly wedded pair took their departure immediately for their home in Columbus.

What is home?
Home is not merely four square walls
Hung with pictures nicely gilded.
Home is where affection calls,
Which two hearts enshrined hath builded.
Home; Go watch the faithful dove that hovers o'er us,
The earth beneath, the skies above us;
Home is where there's one to love,
Home is where there's one to love us.

With the above came a bountiful remembrancer to the printers, for which they will accept their thanks.

BORN.

At Bishop Creek, June 5, to the wife of Geo. L. Drake, a daughter.

DIED.

At Benton, Mono Co., June 9, FRANK EDGERLY, aged about 46 years.

Mr. Edgerly was one of the oldest settlers of this country, and leaves numerous friends in this section to mourn his death.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

KEARSARGE MILL AND MINING COMPANY. Principal place of business San Francisco, California. Location of works Kearsarge Mining District, Inyo County, California.—Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Trustees, held on the First day of June, A. D. 1874, an assessment (No. 1) of twenty cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary at the office of the company, southeast corner of Clay and Kearney streets, San Francisco, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the Thirteenth day of July, A. D. 1874, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made before will be sold on MONDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF AUGUST, A. D. 1874, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

Good Books Offered.

Perry Wilkes, of Kern county, is now canvassing this section for subscriptions for a number of very desirable books, and is successful beyond his expectation. Mr. Wilkes is an old resident of Kern, and of course, finds numerous acquaintances in this valley, former residents of that county. He offers one profusely illustrated bible, cantaining its own history and a complete cyclopædia of biblical discoveries, events, etc., which is the most interesting and desirable combined work of the kind we have yet seen. Its price is from $9 to $15 according to style of binding, and is cheap enough. Another very interesting book is, "Scenes of a Wild Life in the Far West," giving, with illustrations, the author's experience during 17 years captivity among the warlike Comanches: price $3. Another book worthy of special mention is McCabe's American history from the earliest period down. It is a splendid work of 1,100 pages, relating to the soil, climate, productions, political and educational matters of every State and Territory It is a pretty good library of itself, all for only $6

Mineral King.

"Hickey" Hood has been spending some time over in the Tulare section, which he says is a slow going community compared to this of Inyo, even these dull times. He drove his team over the Visalia and Inyo road into Mineral King district, and pronounces it a very good mountain road. There are some sixty or seventy persons in the district, including a few families. Very high hopes are entertained of the mines, but as yet the work being done is all of a prospective character; the real working value of the numerous fine looking lodes is yet to be determined. This district is only about 35 miles from the head of the Cottonwood flume, and it would require comparatively but a small outlay to complete the road to that point, from which down to the lake a very good grade can be had to complete a good wagon road clear across the mountains.

Personals.

Mrs. J. Earl and son arrived from Oakland a few days since....Capt. Eudey and family came in by the last stage....Messrs. Belshaw and Beaudry came down from the hill this week to see how we were all getting along..... Mr. Van Arsdale returned from San Francisco a few days since....Mr. Sheppard, formerly foreman of the Belshaw furnace, after "raintafousing" about the Salt Lake regions for several months past, has returned to Cerro Gordo.

Quaatermaster's Supplies.

We would direct attention to the advertisement for Quartermaster supplies, the contracts for which have been ordered re-let, but are not ordered advertised, the cost of which, it is feared by the Chief of Department, would swamp the United States Government, besides making the matter too public, therefore we publish it as a matter of news. It is not the fault of the Post officers that due notice is not given in all such matters.

Horse Thief.

John Hilton came over from Hill's Ferry, on the San Joaquin, recently, having started out on his travels. Arriving at Big Pine he saddled one of Steve Gregg's horses and rode on to Antelope Valley, where he stopped long enough to get himself caught, taken before Justice Campbell and then sent to jail to sojourn till the Grand Jury considers the peculiar circumstances of the case.

Partnerships.

The limit for partnership announcements, under the new law, ends on the 30th of this month. If not made previous to that date, existing partnerships will have to be dissolved, re-organized and then published to secure a legal status—the right to maintain a suit in the firm name. Interested parties will make a note of this.

Mining Patent Received.

By reference to Register Earl's card it will be seen that a United States patent has been granted for the Santa Maria mine (Cerro Gordo). The document was received at the Land Office, by Tuesday's mail and awaits the orders of owners.

Petition.

A petition for county assistance to build a road into Panamint is being generally signed at the lower end of the county, as it probably will be elsewhere when presented. It will be presented to the Board at the July term

The Seventeenth.

The Pioneers are responding to the dinner and ball on the 17th at a rate to make it quite probable that nearly every tabooser in the county will be on hand.

For Bishop.

J. F. Ditsworth, saddler, has gone to Bishop, having sold his shop to A. C Matlack, who continues the business at the old stand.

To Meet.

The Supervisors meet as a Board of Equalization on the 6th of July.

What "Yank" Lost.

Read his "Lost" notice and you'll find out.

Prospecting.

An unusual number of persons are engaged in prospecting in the Inyo and White Mountain ranges east and north of this place, and, we are told, with very encouraging results. A rail road, or the advantages contingent thereon, would, we believe, set 10,000 miners to work in these mountains.

Live Stock Moving.

Mr. Perry Wilkes informs us that an immense amount of live stock is being gathered up in Kern and Tulare counties preparatory for removal to other pastures, some for the contiguous mountain valleys, but the larger portion for Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and even Colorado.

Arastra.

Dr. Griswold and others, are erecting an arastra at Piute district, the material for construction being procured at Bishop. The prospects of this district are very fair, and we hope this arastra may soon develop into a mill.

County Court.

The regular May term of the County Court, which has been adjourned from day to day, was finally adjourned on Wednesday last. The next term begins July 6, when a Grand Jury, now drawn, is to meet.

To Be Built.

We hear that Messrs. Horton and Parsons, of Round Valley, are about to erect a barley mill in that place. This will be a convenience to the farmers of Round Valley.

The Time.

We are requested to state that the Pioneer dinner at the Blaney House next Wednesday, will be served up at 2:30 P. M. exact.

Scout Line.

Capt. MacGowan. with a small detachment, returned yesterday from a ten days' scout out southeast of the Lake.

What Women Can Do.

There is an Oakland letter in this issue on the above subject that is worth reading.

Army Worms.

Those blasting monopolists, the army worms, have made their appearance at Bishop Creek.

Crops, Water.

Crops in the northern end of the county are about average. Water is over abundant, but doing no damage.

For Manache.

Mr. Broder has started his herds for their usual Summer pasturage in Manache Valley.

Will Start Up.

Active work will without doubt begin in a very few days at the Eclipse mine.

Los Angeles and Independence Survey.

While on the survey northward Engineer Crawford wrote from Coyote Holes to The Herald, under date of June 1, as follows:

I arrived here last night from Desert Springs, having been for the past week engaged in reconnoitering the country due north from Cajon Pass, and although it is considered to be a desert region, comparatively unexplored and unbroken by a wagon road, such was the remarkable smoothness of the general surface that I drove a light spring wagon, drawn by a pair of horses, freely in any direction desired, and upon the third day were enabled to make a drive of forty miles without inconvenience.

The general formation of this country is volcanic. Upon all sides I noticed evidences of intense heat, and occasionally struck large deposits of black lava. Studded over the plain and outlying from the mountain spurs are isolated craggy buttes, while the hills nestle in groups encircling large dry lakes, which are only separated by low divides, and have apparently been connected in ages past and segregated at some late date by some tremendous upheaval of nature. The surface of these lakes are as hard and dry as a pavement, so that in driving over them the wheels of our wagon failed to make even an impression. Although upon every side were to be found indications of alkali and borax deposits, still in the vicinity of these very lakes good water can be obtained by digging a few feet. Through this region there are several routes which suggest themselves as being both practicable and advantageous ones upon which to make the final location of the line, which before a final decision is come to must be examined instrumentally, and carefully compared as to cost, length and grades. I will here give you a few arguments in favor of the line via Cajon Pass, but it must be borne in mind that I have not yet examined the projected line through Soledad Pass.

The further east the line is laid the better it will accommodate San Bernardino and Holcomb Valley, the Ord, Ivanpah and Panamint Districts, the borax lakes and the Arizona trade, all of which it will carry as far as the Point of Rocks, on the bend of the Mojave, until the completion of the Southern and Texas Pacific divides it with us. Close upon the line through Cajon Pass from Martin's to Point of Rocks, there is an abundance of pine and cedar timber, and ties and stringers for the entire road can be furnished there at a saving of thirty per cent. upon first cost, with transportation added; while at the bend of the Mohave we tap and open to settlement that fertile valley, with its abundance of clear mountain water, cottonwood timber and rich grazing ranges.

So far the result of my explorations has been eminently satisfactory. I shall push on to Independence, and purpose returning over the line direct from Desert Springs to Soledad Pass. I expect to shorten this part of the line, over the ore road, some thirty miles.

LETTER FROM BENTON.

BENTON, June 10, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Perhaps a scrap from Benton might find room in your paper, which might enlighten the inquiring mind in regard to our prospects for "bisness."

MILLING.

Albert Mack's mill is running as regular as clock-work, and pans out the "Benton bits," which begin to flow through the veins of commerce quite freely

The completion of A. B. Williams mill is fast drawing nigh. Mr. J. Wickland, foreman of the construction, informed me that "the mill in all probability will be ready to commence crushing a week from next Monday." Although there is no very elaborate work about the mill, it is substantial.

Hightower & Sanguinetti contemplate starting their saw mill (which is situated near the Adobe Meadows) soon, and in a short time will be turning out some of the best lumber and shingles on this side of the mountains.

FARMING

is not carried on very extensively in this vicinity. Hightower & Sanguinetti have sown about 40 acres of barley on their ranch near Black Lake. This work is being superintended by Mr. Sanguinnetti, who, we are informed, is a practical farmer, and highly delighted with the prospect of a good "crap."

Mr. Frank Edgerly, of this place, after a brief illness, died yesterday evening about 5 o'clock. The cause of his death is supposed to be dissipation. Mr. Edgerly was one of the oldest settlers of this portion of the country, and among his numerous acquaintances had a goodly number of friends who followed his remains to their last resting place.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

LITERARY.

Prospectus for 1874—Seventh Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of the THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centers of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality, with greater facilty for production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art culture in America, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any decent representations of the productions of great painters.

In addition to designs by members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the refining influences of true art.

The quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thos. Moran and J. D. Woodward.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attraction any of its predecessors.

PREMIUMS FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1874, will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thos. Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives the Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory. The differences in the nature of the scenes themselves is a pleasing contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's scope and coloring. The chromos are each worked from thirty distinct plates, and are in size (12x16) and appearance exact fac-similes of the originals. The presentation of a worthy example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold but peculiarly happy idea, and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonial over the signature of Mr. Moran himself.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 20, 1874.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & Co.,

Gentleman—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos. They are wonderfully successful representations by mechanical process of the original paintings. Very respectfully

(Signed,) THOS. MORAN.

These chromos are in every sense American. They are by an original Amerian process, with material of American manufacture, from designs of American scenery by an American painter, and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journal. If no better because of all this they will certainly possess an interest no foreign production can inspire, and neither are they any worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons of taste will prize these pictures for themselves—not for the price they did or did not cost, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free at New York Office.

For 50 cents extra the chromos will be sent mounted, varnished and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

LEGAL.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY VIRTUE OF AN EXECUTION ISSUED OUT of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, in the suit of Paul W. Bennett and Patrick Reddy, Plaintiffs, against William Watt, William B. Skidmore, Henry Baxter, John H. Ockershausen, Isaac M. Bell, Henry Edwards and Richard C. Edwards, Defendants, upon a judgment rendered in said Court on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1874, for the sum of thirty-one thousand dollars damages, together with $213 75-100 costs, and interest, duly attested the 13th day of May, A. D. 1874, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of $31,213 75-100 in U. S. gold coin, besides interest and all accruing costs, I have levied on all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or either of them, in and to the following described real property, to-wit:

The Omega property, consisting of the Omega No. 1 lode or mine; the Omega No 2 lode or mine, and the Omega tunnel; the Front lode or mine; the Crowning Glory lode or mine; the Franklin lode or mine; the Alpha lode or mine and tunnel, and the Potosi tunnel—all of said property being situated in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, county of Inyo, State of California, and is held by and standing in the name of William H. Van Arsdale on the records of the county of Inyo, State of California.

Also, the Santa Maria lode or mine, and the Friburg No 1 lode or mine, both situate, lying and being in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, county of Inyo, State of California.

Also, all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or either of them, have under and by virtue of a certain sale and certificate of sale made by the Sheriff of the county of Inyo on the 8th day of April A. D. 1874, in and to the Swansea furnace property, situated near the head of Owens Lake in the county of Inyo, State of California, and described in said certificate of sale as follows: The works which have been built or purchased by the Owens Lake Silver Lead Company, in the vicinity of Owens Lake, commonly known as the Swansea Works, with all the furnaces, machinery, buildings, fixtures, tools, implements, water courses and water powers, and all the privileges and franchises thereto incident, appendant and appurtenant, or therewith usually used and enjoyed, together with the appurtenances and any and all rights that said defendants have in any manner in and to said above described property. Also, all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or any of them, in and to all the fractional south-west quarter of the north-east quarter, and the south half of lot number one in the north-west quarter, and north half of lot number one in the south-west quarter, and fractional north west quarter of south west quarter of Section number thirty-one, in Township number seventeen, south of Range number thirty-seven East, Base and Meridian of Mount Diablo, together with all the rights, water privileges, right of way and right to use the waters of the creek known as Cottonwood creek; and also all the rights of way for constructing a flume on said creek; also, all the rights and title to the flume constructed and being constructed on said creek known as the Stevens flume. Also, the saw mill known as Stevens' saw mill, situated in the Sierra Nevada mountains, on the waters of said creek, all of said property situate, lying and being in the county of Inyo, State of California.

Notice is hereby given that on MONDAY, THE FIFTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, A. D. 1874, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 5 o'clock P. M., to-wit: at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House, in the town of Independence, county of Inyo, State of California, I will sell all the right, title and interest of the said defendants, or any of them, in and to the above described real property, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the Plaintiffs' demand, with interest and cost, at public auction, to the highest bidder or bidders, for cash, in United States gold coin, in parcels as follows:

1st. The Omega tunnel property, consisting of the Omega No. 1 lode or mine, the Omega No. 2 lode or mine, and the Omega tunnel.

2d. The Santa Maria lode or mine, and the Friburg No. 1 lode or mine.

3d. The Crowning Glory lode or mine.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1 Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2 If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or places where they are sent they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Where It Rains Once in Five years

We find this in an eastern exchange relating to the southern portion of our county:

The tract of country known as the Slate Range Valleys is probably one of the most curious that Southern California can boast of. It is there the immense deposits of borax were discovered something like a year ago, and at that time the whole lower or central part of the basin was covered with a white deposit, breaking away in some places into large soda reefs, in others resembling the waves of the ocean, and still in others stretching out for miles in one unbroken level, from which the sun reflected its rays with a glare almost unendurable. But one of the most singular features in connection with this section was the absence of rain or moisture; the days were ever sunny and hot, the nights without dew, and generally warm. For more than five years, it is said by those who claim to know, there had been no rain there, until some three months since the spell was broken. Suddenly, and with scarce any warning, rain commenced to fall. For thirty hours the rain came down steadily and unceasingly, unaccompanied by wind, yet a thorough, drenching rain. For two or three days it remained pleasant, when suddenly a water spout was seen wending its way through the valley. It came in a zig zag course across the upper end of the lake, striking the range of hills on the east side and coursing rapidly along them. The canyons and gorges were soon filled with water, which poured from them in fearful volume and spread itself out upon the bottom. In a short time it was over, and the denizens of the place now look for another dry season of five years.

Keep It Up.

The dead-head system is gradually receiving its death-blows. Keep it always in mind that the people must pay because editors must pay—for everything—and the newspapers will find their account in it.

"Whenever a gentleman wants anything published, whether it interests the public or only an individual, he is willing and will propose to pay. Somebody must pay for it, and hereafter it will not be the printer. The fact that the proposed publication would interest the public has nothing to do with the matter in issue. Newspapers are private not public property. They are published to make money for their owners, and if anybody would use them they must pay the cost. Never did we go to a merchant and use his goods for any public purpose without paying, and if we and hundreds of others—the public—employ a lawyer about a street or other highway, we pay the lawyer. The dodge is very tiresome, it is very old, and we hope to hear of it no more forever. If you want some scheme ventilated, whether it interests yourself alone or thousands, you and your thousands, must not expect us to pay the cost."—Memphis Appeal

A Couple of Famous Books.

Among the books that perished during the burning of the Tuilleries was a famous copy of the seventy-volume edition of Voltaire, published at Kehl, in 1781. This copy which had been destined for the Empress of Russia, was on large paper, with proof impressions of one hundred and eight engravings from drawings by Moreau; in addition to which, it had bound up with it the original drawings from which the engravings were taken; altogether a very choice work, and magnificently bound in red morocco. Why it never reached the hands of the Empress Catherine, for whom it was destined, has not been explained. After passing, however, from one possessor to another, at length it came into the hands of a M Double for the sum of 13,500 francs. By that gentleman it was put up at auction, and bought for the Emperor Napoleon for only 9,025 francs. The Empress Eugenie, upon seeing it, was so much struck with the work, its beautiful designs and handsome binding, that she at once besought the Emperor to present it to her for her private library. With some little difficulty she obtained her request, and the rare Voltaire found a place among the six thousand volumes which constituted the Empress' private library. But, alas! all these perished in the conflagration which signalized the close of the reign of the Commune in Paris. This was not, however, the only illustrated copy of Voltaire in existence. A Paris bookseller now announces one, profusely illustrated—Beuchot's edition, Paris, 1834 72 tomes, bound in 77—which may be had for the modest sum of $35,000 francs. This copy, it appears, is enriched with as many as 3,000 portraits and vignettes, all of the choicest kind, which were brought together under the direction of an American gentleman residing in Paris, who is a great admirer of the philosopher of Ferney.

The Crown Point Mine.

The annual election for officers of the Crown Point mine took place recently. There were 91,319 shares represented. The following Trustees were elected: J D Fry (President), B. Peart, J. A. Pritchard, Robert Sherwood and W. S. Hobart. E. Elliott was elected Secretary and S. L. Jones was re-elected Superintendent. On the 1st of May, 1873, the amount of cash in the treasury of the company was $1 873 391. The receipts from bullion during the year have been $7,417,115, and from other sources $16 500. The total disbursements for the year have been $8,816,554 leaving a cash balance on hand of $490,652. There have been twelve dividends to stockholders during the year, aggregating $5 300 000.

The Railroad.

The railroad is progressing finely. It is now within eight miles of Kern river and we are assured it will be completed to our town by the first of August. There appears to be considerable speculation as to where the company will locate their depot and workshops, since it is understood that this point will be the last one in the great San Joaquin valley where any considerable town will be built. We understand that the railroad will have a hand in building an immense hotel in Bakersfield, if the depot is located near our town; all of which gives our people confidence in the future outlook of the place, and none need hesitate to make investments in real estate when a good opportunity is offered them.—Bakersfield Californian

An Unfortunate Mistake.

The London Post says an unfortunate mistake was committed at the civic reception in honor of the Czar, which led to somewhat painful results. When the Corps Diplomatique sought their appointed places at the banquet in the council chamber, Ministers Plenipotentiary were informed they had no right to be in that chamber, and on remonstrating, some intemperate officials threatened them even with expulsion. In consequence representatives of several important nations quitted the banquet, and although explanations were offered while they were waiting for their carriages, they felt too much hurt to return to the scene where they had met with such humiliation. Some other places had been vacated by the English Court functionaries, and this civility alone saved the banquet from being abandoned by the ministers en masse.

Sagacity of Birds.

Certain facts render it probable that birds, in some manner, become aware of cholera infection in the air. Recent European journals state that at Munich, where several cases of cholera have occurred, the rooks and crows, which flew about the steeples and through the trees of the public promenades have all emigrated; and the same thing happened during the cholera seasons of 1836 and 1854 According to Sir Samuel Baker, the same phenomenon occurred at Mauritius, where the martins, which exist in immense numbers the year around, wholly disappeared during the prevalence of the cholera.

The Mormons and the Military.

Hereafter, the arrest of soldiers by the police of Salt Lake City will not be considered legal, unless voluntarily surrendered upon application, the sufficiency of which Gen. Morrow must alone be the judge. In the event of arrest, it will be the duty of Gen. Morrow to liberate and return to his command the soldier so arrested, and in so doing will be sustained by military support. The question hinged on violating known laws of the land, which the Judge-Advocate decides to be laws of States or Territories, not city ordinances. The origin of this case is malicious brutality of the Mormon police upon the most frivolous pretexts towards the United States soldiers on leave from Camp Douglas. But a short time since one of these was arrested, foully abused, and locked up in the calaboose. The soldiers demanded his release, which being insultingly refused, they marched in and took him out by force.

New Papers.

We are in receipt of two new papers, the first to come being The Monterey Herald, which, it is hoped, will be able to wake that sleepy, ancient capital into something of life and vigor. The other is the new daily at Virginia City, Nevada, The Daily Independent. It is a large paper (32 columns), and given to the independent order in politics. Typographically, its "head" is rather unique, but becoming withal; its local page looks well, while the others appear much as if they had been planned by a printer from the Western States—not much on the Pacific coast style, nor distressingly handsome.

Whitewashed.

Senator Mitchell, of Oregon was before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 10th in answer to charges relating to an alleged scandal connected with his early life. He invited and challenged the fullest investigation into all the charges preferred against him. The Committee then privately considered the matter and, as a result of full deliberation, unanimously came to the conclusion that there was not sufficient basis for any further investigation, and directed their Chairman to report to the Senate accordingly.

Crofutt's Western World

Is an excellent paper in its particular line, which is to present special information as to the geography, soil climate industries, etc., of all portions of the western world. The last issue contains a portrait of Hutchings, of pioneer fame, and an account of his unjust treatment in reference to his Yo Semite pre-emption.

Surrendered.

On the 7th the Apache Chief, Quatcheakelo and his band of eighty-four persons surrendered at Camp Verde, Arizona. Lieut. King, of the Fifth Cavalry, has returned to Camp Verde after a successful scout, in which he inflicted severe punishment upon one rancheria of Indians, another only saved itself by flight.

Oregon Election.

The late Oregon election resulted in the success of the entire Democratic State ticket except Treasurer. Reports that the Independents had elected any State officers were premature. The Democracy had a grand blowout at Salem, the capital, over their success, a few days after the election.

More Time.

The President has signed the bill to extend the time for making expenditures in mining claims until next January. The holders of old locations have several months more granted to hold claims without working or improving them.

—The work of constructing the North Pacific Coast Railroad is being actively resumed.

WOOD OR IRON?

It may be rather premature, as some of our Los Angeles contemporaries remark, to very strenuously argue the pros and cons relating to the character of the proposed superstructure of the Los Angeles & Independence railroad until some reliable action is first had assuring a determination to have a road of some kind. Now we look at it in this way: That, before asking the public to help in an enterprise of this kind the nature and important details of such enterprise must also be present to and understood by said public. Otherwise, a party having subscribed to one kind of a road could claim his obligation cancelled if a different and inferior one was to be substituted. Then, it is necessary to first decide for what kind of road we ask help. As all are agreed that an iron rail is decidedly preferable to one of wood, it is only a question which is the easiest obtained. It does not certainly follow that because the relative cost of the wooden to the iron rail may two dollars to five that the two dollars can be had for the wooden rail easier than the five for the iron. The rules that govern in a private enterprise undertaken with limited means will not hold good in one of this kind where the public is asked to take stock as an investment. The private individual may see that the substitute he must accept will be worth its cost for the purpose he has in view and, in accordance with his means, is satisfied to undertake it. But the public don't move as an individual, and having the means, would rather advance five dollars for something certain to answer required purposes than two or even one for a substitute about which there is doubt.

Were subscriptions asked for an iron road to cost two and a half millions and obtained to half that amount, quite sufficient for a wooden one, yet it is by no means certain that amount could be made available for the latter purpose unless subscribed with such a contingency understood. Supposing that and only that amount to be obtained for the iron road, it not being sufficient, then reopen the books for the other to cost only half as much as the first and no more than what had already been offered—the chances are the renewed subscriptions would be proportionately as short as in the first instance. This shows the appreciation of the relative values of the investments, not, necessarily, a lack of available means for a popular undertaking.

If it can be shown that in proportion to cost the wooden rail will answer our purpose quite as well as iron it might be easier to obtain a road of that kind because it is in the power of those to build it who have interests in view beyond the direct returns on the money invested; considering their subscriptions somewhat in the light of donations to a thing moderately promising of itself and sure to develope into something better. But simple donations cannot be counted on in amount sufficient for the purpose, not even from those who have contingent interests involved, unless it is satisfactorily demonstrated that such a road offers superior inducements to what is generally supposed. Therefore it becomes necessary to have its merits better understood and appreciated or it will be more difficult to raise the two dollars for this, even at home, than the five for the other, and hence, unless emphatically condemned at once, now is the time to discuss its merits and demerits.

We claim some general practical knowledge of mechanical operations of this kind, and are satisfied that a wooden road can be cheaply built and operated to fair advantage in view of certainly assuring something better when needed. It is surely better to begin the construction of a road of that kind than none at all, even if satisfied that in operation it would be but a partial success. With twenty or thirty miles in actual operation the road and undertaking has a tangible existance, a status that will command whatever assistance may be first lacking to complete it on any plan that may then be deemed best. If iron is demanded the material and most of the work so far is only that much toward preparing for, and with but a small percentage off is all necessary. But this is supposing that the rail to be a solid stick of good timber like Oregon pine or redwood laid down for use without the expensive and worse than useless strap of iron or hardwood cap. The strap greatly increases the expense and danger in use without any compensation in any manner except to lessen friction, which is, however, offset on the other hand, in reduction of the tractive power of the light engine required in either case for such a road. The hardwood or any other wood cap or strip is only expense for nothing. The solid square rail with light cars and locomotives with broad faced wheels, those for the engine having rubber tyres, will make the cheapest and most effective railway of this kind that can be devised. It has another advantage of no little importance of itself: there is no waste of material in preparing to put down the light T rail, which can be done without additional timbers or much extra labor, except perhaps in reducing gradients. As the tractive power of the broad rubber tyred engine on a wide wooden rail is far in excess of iron and iron together under any conditions, the maximum grade could be double that generally allowed and still answer as well; but in the matter of curves this rule would have to be reversed, and the road made as straight as possible.

We shall defer further remark until the Engineer makes his report, which is to appear soon.

Narrow-Gauge Guidone.

A company has been formed in Merced county, California, to build a saw mill in the extensive timber region in the Sierra Nevadas near the head waters of the Fresno river, with a flume forty miles long to run the timber down to the railroad, reaching this outlet in the center of Merced county near Plainsburg station. The flume is to be formed of two 1½-inch planks, one 30 inches wide and the other 28½ inches; the 30 inch planks lapping over the other, are said to be in the shape of a V, with proper stays. It is also proposed to use the flume for running wood from the mountains. Engineers pronounce it practicable, and, if successful, it will prove of great value to settlers in this valley.

A similar flume has been in operation near Truckee for the past year with perfect success. Lumber and wood can be transported in this way for five per cent of the cost of transportation by wagons. Another one of these flumes, or "V," is now being constructed from the timber lands of the Wahsatch Mountains to intersect the Union Pacific Railroad near Hilliard Station, using the water of Bear river. Mr. James Campbell, late of the Central Pacific Railroad, is one of the proprietors, which means "success."—Crofutt's Western World.

Rich Strike.

The Belmont Courier of May 30 reports the following rich strike: A wonderful strike was made in the Prussian South mine. Prussian Company, Jefferson Canyon, on Wednesday last, which created considerable excitement. In the incline shaft, at a depth of 180 feet, a body of ore was struck that excels in richness anything ever before encountered in any mine in the State. A small quantity of ore was sent over from the mine to this place, an assay of which was made by Samuel McMasters, Superintendent of the Monitor Belmont mine, that yielded at the rate of $20,307 86 per ton. At this rate of yield the ore is considerably more than one-half silver. It is similar in character to the Comstock vein. Although we are not fortunate enough to own any of the property, it is nevertheless gratifying to know that the entire location is owned by two worthy men—Stephen Roberts and George Williams

The Southern Railroad System.

The Santa Barbara Index is running a series of papers reaching, now to No. 19, portraying the future railroad system of Southern California, also conveying a good deal of generally valuable geographical information besides. These are to be published in pamphlet form soon, and if our contemporary will favor us with a copy we shall be pleased to give a synopsis if we can do so in justice to the matter in hand, which is of quite as much interest to this section, in view of possible future events, as to any of the other outside localities.

Its Opinion.

The Santa Barbara Index discourses thusly in reference to the contemplated seduction of Los Angeles at the hands of San Bernardino, regarding the proposed railroad route:

Los Angeles seduced by the wiles of San Bernardino, is inclined to play a desperate game and move Cajon against Soledad—worst Santa Barbara and sacrifice the best interests of the people of Inyo. All her efforts will be futile. There is a checkmate just ahead. Money bags think. Mountains don't move. The miners and furnacemen of Inyo seek the cheapest route for their ores and bullion to aboard ship, and their desire for wealth will lead them to the wharves of Santa Barbara.

Who Shot Him.

It has been pretty well settled that Paschal Coggins, of The Sacramento Union, who made a gallant run for Congress three years ago, but was defeated by the railroad ring, was the man who fired the fatal shot into the side of Col Gonzales, the brutal commandant of San Jose de Guatemala, when that officer attempted to board the steamer Arizona after having inflicted two hundred lashes on the bare back of John Magee, British Consul at that port.—Virginia Independent.

Relating to the Post Contracts.

CAMP INDEPENDENCE, Cal., June 18, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: A report having been put in circulation by designing parties that I have signed a "Lie-Bill," I take this means of correcting said statement. I furnish herewith the original document, which you will please read carefully:

INDEPENDENCE, Cal., May 2, A. D. 1874.

TO GEN. SCHOFIELD, Commanding the Military Division of the Pacific. SIR—The contracts for Q. M. supplies for the troops at Camp Independence, Cal., were let without any advertisement in the county, and parties inquiring for information in regard to time of letting were unable to obtain such information from the officers here. I had my bid ready to deposit for the wood contract at $14 per cord, but could not by the most diligent inquiry find out when or where to deposit. (These contracts heretofore having been let at the Post here.) Yours, very respectfully

M. S. CLARK
Independence, Inyo Co., Cal.

CAMP INDEPENDENCE, Cal., May 15, 1874.

The above statement in regard to officers being unable to give the necessary information was made upon information obtained from citizens (principally old contractors), and not directly from the officers themselves; and also from the fact that the proposals for bids for Quartermaster's stores were not advertised in the local paper here. Respectfully yours.

M. S. CLARK.

FIRST ENDORSEMENT.

FOURTH ENDORSEMENT.

Office A. A. Q. M.,
Camp Independence, Cal., May 15, 1874.

Respectfully returned with the information that when any party applied to me for information the fullest in my possession was given. Much dissatisfaction is exhibited here by interested parties on account of the proposals for bids for Q. M. Stores not being advertised in the local paper here, where they all could have derived the necessary information without any inconvenience to themselves.

Attention is called to Mr. Clark's statement of this date in the body of this communication.

FIFTH ENDORSEMENT.

Headq'r's Dept. of Cal.,
Office Chief Quartermaster
San Francisco, Cal., May 27, 1874.

Respectfully returned to the Chief Quartermaster Military Division of the Pacific, and his attention invited to the 4th endorsement. THE INYO INDEPENDENT was not on the official list of newspapers on file in my office, and is not now on the official list published by the War Department under date of February 10, 1874. Copies of advertisements were sent to the Post Quartermaster, and all facts relative to the time of opening the bids could no doubt have been obtained had application been made to the Post Headquarters.

A. R. EDDY,
Dep. Q. M. Gen., Chief Q. M. Dept. Cal.

SIXTH ENDORSEMENT.

Headquarters Mil. Div. of the Pacific,
Office Chief Quartermaster,
San Francisco, Cal., May 28, 1874.

Respectfully returned to the Assistant Adjutant General Military Division of the Pacific inviting his attention to 4th and 5th endorsements.

R. W. ALLEN,
Asst. Q. M. General.

SEVENTH ENDORSEMENT.

Headq'r's Mil. Div. Pacific,
San Francisco, May 28, 1874.

Respectfully returned to Mr. M. S. Clarke, inviting attention to endorsements hereon. By order of Major Gen. Schofield.

J. C. KELTON,
Lieut. Col., A. A. Gen.

You observe, in the first place, that in my letter I say "parties having," in this manner telling him what others had done, I then tell him what I had done. That I had my bid ready; that I made diligent inquiries, etc., which the editors well know, as with their aid I searched all the papers at their command, and many other parties who were most likely to know were also consulted. Nor was I alone in search for information.

Many more interesting things in this regard I might furnish you, but owing to the absence of some parties I am forced to omit, but if this does not satisfy the interested parties, I will furnish a full statement of my reasons for not applying to the officers of the Post for information, furnishing affidavits and anything required of me.

My note at the bottom of my communication to Gen. Schofield is, as you will perceive, merely an explanation of the above letter (which, by the way, was plain enough of itself).

M. S. CLARK.

[As we have heretofore stated that THE INDEPENDENT was duly appointed an official paper for War Department advertisements we, in reference to a statement in endorsement No. 5 above, deem it but but right to append the following order which explains itself. We will add that this order, to our knowledge, has never been rescinded.—EDS. INDEPENDENT.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, May 19, 1873.

To the Publisher of THE INDEPENDENT, Independence, Cal.—SIR: The Secretary of War has caused to be placed upon the list of official newspapers for the War Department, THE INDEPENDENT, in which you are authorized to publish such advertisements as may be specially sent to you with an order of publication from competent authority.

You are respectfully requested to fill out and return the accompanying blank, giving the customary advertising rates of THE INDEPENDENT, the days on which it is published, etc., for file in the War Department.

Publishers of newspapers are requested to forward to the War Department copies of such issues of their respective papers as contain new advertisements published by officers of the Army. Newspapers thus furnished, however, will not be paid for.

Address as follows: "Secretary of War, Office of Printing Accounts, War Department, Washington, D. C." Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

H. T. CROSBY,
Chief Clerk.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.

The Ball.

We are gratified to be able to state that the ball Wednesday night, was socially at least, a marked success. The Eclipse, George's Creek and other places in the vicinity, and Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo were all, in personel and numbers, handsomely represented, a fact pleasing of itself, as also in giving good promise by reciprocation for the ample success of similar general social efforts elsewhere in the valley. The large court room used for the dancing hall, was by Mr. Thompson's energetic efforts, well arranged and nicely decorated and was filled by as brilliant and joyous an assemblage as ever stepped to music within its walls. Some young men boast that the ladies were unusally pretty and tastefully dressed, but we don't pretend to know much about such matters. But on the grub question we are au fait, and can say that the supper at the Blaney House was super-excellent and everybody was pleased. The music was certainly very good. Mr. Thompson has acquitted himself well in his responsible undertakings in commemoration of this 17th of June.

The Pioneer Dinner.

Some forty or more persons took an active hand in the first annual Pioneer dinner, given at the Blaney House on on the 17th. Though the recipient of a complimentary for the interesting occasion, circumstances imperatively barred our attendance, therefor we can give no particulars of the ceremonies, but we do think a full report of such society doings, being the first, well worth a permanent record in the annals of our county. It is to be hoped every Tabooser in the county or in reach will make it a special point to take an active part in forwarding the laudable interests of this organization, and as an important step toward it, just turn out in full force at the next annual celebration.

Confidential.

Once more we say to correspondents that its is essentially necessary their names should accompany their communications, not for the purpose, on our part, to give them publicity in any manner, but to conform with a rule established by all newspapers, and which is sometimes necessary for their own protection. Except in a possible contingency it is really of little importance on account of the subject matter of such communications, whether the name is given or not, but to provide against these possible exceptions it is made a condition in all cases, and in any event is asking no more of the writer than to sign his name to a private letter.

The Fourth.

As it does not appear that any effort at a general celebration is to be made anywhere in the valley for the coming National Anniversary, or, in fact, a "doin's" of any kind for that day, the Club here will give a ball to which everybody is invited. As something of an innovation on the usual custom of commencing at 10 and running all night, dancing this time, the Fourth coming on Saturday, will begin at 4 and close at 12 P. M. Come along every body. See advertisement, for which a fuller one will appear next week.

Sheriff's Sale.

The Sheriff's sale of the Swansea real estate took place last Monday pursuant to advertisement. Reddy and Bennett, plaintiffs in the suit, were the principal purchasers, taking all but the Cottonwood wood flume property, which was knocked down to Superintendent Knapp. Presumably it will all be redeemed prior to the expiration of the limit allowed by law for that purpose. The price paid in all just equalled the amount of judgment and costs, something over $32,000.

Not the Army Worm.

It turns out that the reported army worm operating on Bishop Creek and elsewhere in the county in places, is not the "regular" army worm at all but is the usual volunteer to be seen on corn and cabbage more or less every season. But no matter by what name, they are making unusual inroads on the crops here and there, nevertheless.

Unwell.

About the 1st of the month Major Egbert left Los Angeles for San Francisco expecting to return here immediately, but after his arrival at the Bay was taken sick, and at last accounts, was still confined to his bed. We hope very much that he may soon be all right again.

Passed.

The regular Wednesday night meeting of the I. P. D. C. was, at the previous meeting in deference to the ball o the 17th, voted passed to the next regular night, Monday next.

Correction.

The name of the man mentioned last week as having been killed, June 1st, on Tule river, was Tom Brannan, not Brown, to whom this correction may make some difference, however it may affect Brannan.

Sick.

All hands (and it is not a very strong force at the best) in this office have been slightly "under the weather" this week, so the paper itself is somewhat attenuated.

Note Lost.

See advertisement under that head.

Piute District.

We have several times referred to this as yet unknown but promising dising district. It is located, as we have before stated, on the western slope of the White Mountains, a little east of north and about 12 miles distant from Sneden's store on Bishop Creek. Good mineral bearing lodes are to be seen in every portion of the district, and from the accounts we have of some of them we readily believe it offers a first-rate field for mining men. John Westerville, Page and others made locations and did some work there 11 years ago, and at that time found notices dating back three years, or to 1860. These parties incorporated a company including two mines known as the Maranthan and Ancho. One E. C. McComb was Secretary, and managed things so well that the company were soon all frozen out, since which time until recently nothing has been done in the district. At that time these parties considered themselves in possession of fortunes, as the ledges were of fair size and prospected splendidly, but for reasons hinted at above everything was allowed to lapse into idleness. Later locators have demonstrated the truth of these legends. They find an abundance of gold ores, which by actual working in the arastra at Fish Springs yielded $63 to the ton. This is from an 18 inch ledge known as the "Golden Era," all of that kind of ore. Another, a silver galena ledge called the "Babe," yields a splendid looking ore of the smelting class; it carries 54 per cent. of lead and $709 in silver, average assay value. This ledge plainly connects with a monster ledge 300 feet distant. The latter, some 12 feet wide, extends for several hundred yards. It shows some galena, but is principally a kind of an iron quartz, of little or no value so far as surface tests will determine. The shaft on the "Babe" is only 12 feet deep, and that is the deepest in the district; it belongs to W. Keplinger, A. Doss, T. M. Brady and James Morris, who are working away on it, satisfied that it is a big thing, as the ore from it, exhibited to us by Mr. Morris certainly indicates. These parties, with others are at work constructing an arastra, which will be ready to run in about three weeks. Should this prove measurably successful, as we doubt not it will, Piute district will begin to attract the attention its very flattering surface indications so strongly invite.

A Query for Ornithologists.

On Owens Lake there are, at all seasons of the year, myriads of small water fowl, considerably smaller than the common diver, but for which it is generally taken by casual observers. This bird is of the diver species doubtless, since it is a good diver and swimmer, but in other physical abilities it is different from any other we have ever heard of, if what we are told about it is true and we believe it is—it can neither walk nor fly! Thousands of them are thrown on the shore by the winds and there perish simply, it is said, because they cannot walk or fly or even work themselves back into the water again. At such times the Indians reap a good harvest in stripping them of feathers and down, these products being finer than the same from geese, and command as ready a market. The feathers can be obtained in any quantity—at a dollar a pound in San Francisco, herwith Indian help ought to be a chance for a profitable business. A specimen of these birds was sent to Washington for classification, but Agassiz being dead, it does not appear that any one there could tell anything about it; at least nothing has been heard from it. Its bill is long, sharp and easily broken, something on the snipe order; the pedal appendages are more like flippers than feet, standing at such an angle to the body they are useless for any purpose except swimming. Of its habits but little is known other than its food consists of the billions of worms, the only other indigenous creature in those acrid waters. Some think it is propagated from spawn like a fish since its breeding places have never yet been discovered.

Lida Valley.

By "McGruder's" letter in this issue we have the gratifying intelligence that the Lida canyons are again to become resonant with the sound of the steam whistle and miner's pick and blast. Matters in litigation have all been settled and the Hiskey & Walker mill and mine property all comes under the management of Gen. Page, a thorough-going miner and mill man. He will have to be an extra mill man though to be any better than Hiskey in that particular. But our correspondent is in error about the property having been actually sold as yet. Due notice of the sale will have to be given, and that has not been done yet.

Fatal Accident in Cerro Gordo.

Last Wednesday about 6 P. M., P. Kenney fell from the ascending bucket in the Union mine, Cerro Gordo, and was instantly killed. There were two other miners on the bucket with him, which, shortly after they got on, left the ways or guides. These two told Kenney to hold on to the bucket while they endeavored to right it, but it seems that he lost his presence of mind and fell. Our informant does not state the distance or other particulars other than that deceased was from the State of New York recently, and had been at work in the mine but six days previous to his death.

Star Brewery.

We notice that this new establishment up near the Post is attracting the attention of those who can spare an hour or two for a nice little ride and room for good lager, etc. It so happens we can't do either, but acknowledge the receipt of a dozen or so of good soda, nevertheless.

Gone to Panamint.

P. Reddy, Esq., is taking a couple-of-weeks' run out to Panamint.

The Distance.

Speaking about distances we are reminded that in mentioning the number of miles to Harry Wright's place, the popular "Taboose Ranch," it has been placed at 18 miles. By actual chaining it is but a few rods over 14 miles, so that excursion parties going there may now consider that in the round trip there is a saving of eight miles.

For Montana.

Ex Sheriff Mulkey and family propose to start in a very few days on their long journey to Montana Territory. Their departure will create a vacancy in social circles not easily filled.

Non-Suit.

Among several other items of local interest that should have found a place last week was that relating to the Jackson Lucas water suit, which, on motion of Reddy, defendant's counsel, ended in a non-suit.

Table of Distances.

We are indebted to Captain A. B. MacGowan for the following general information and table of distances from Camp Independence via Swansea around the eastern side of Owens Lake to Cartago, thence back by the western side to place of starting. The measurements were made with an odometer attached to an army wagon driven at a walk, and may be accepted as correct:

From Camp Independence

	Miles.	Yds.
To Court House, Independence..	2	1,000
" Shepherd's house.....	5	1,220
" Half-way house.....	2	678
" Flag staff, Lone Pine.....	7	1,102
" Swansea road.....	2	94
" Swansea stage stables.....	10	64
" Cerro Gordo Landing.....	5	453
" Coso road.....	1	1,223
" Passmore's house.....	1½	142
" Cartago.....	2	1,037
" Cottonwood (returning).....	6	1,312
" Furguson's Landing.....	8	591
" Flag staff, Lone Pine.....	5	1,662
" Court House, Independence..	1½	1,245
" Camp Independence.....	2	1,030

The following information was received from various sources when on the scout:

Estimating the altitude of Owens Lake at 3,900 feet above sea level we have for

Cerro Gordo.....	8,878
Mt. Williamson.....	14,694
Inyo Dome.....	13,008
Mt. Whitney proper.....	14,506
Sleeping Beauty.....	12,381
Telescope Peak.....	10,242

It will be observed that these altitudes, particularly that of the Dome, are some 300 feet lower than reported by barometrical observations from the summits; that is, not taking the lake as the base of observations.

According to a series of sytematic soundings by the steamer Bessie Brady the deepest place in Owens Lake is 51 feet. This is the uniform depth over about four miles square of the central portion, from which the bottom gradually shoals to the shores. This effectually explodes the legend of there being no bottom in certain portions of the lake.

Following are the names of the freight stations between Cartago and Los Angeles: Cartago, Rose Springs, Nine Mile Canyon, Panamint (station, from which a line of fast freight wagons is soon to be put on to Panamint mining district), Red Rock, Forks of Road, Willow Springs, Coyote Holes, Barrel Springs, Mill Station, Mud Springs and San Fernando, thence by rail to Los Angeles. Of these the Captain observes: "The stations en route to Los Angeles are the most complete I have ever seen; I am only sorry that I did not see them before building the one at the Post."

He further adds: "On the line of our scout every one was anxious to know the distances we measured. I told them I should send them to THE INDEPENDENT with request to publish if deemed of sufficient interest."

In response to this we will state that we are always pleased to give place to data of this character, and are sorry that an untimely recall cut short the Captain's contemplated scout line, otherwise the table of distances would have covered the little known regions further to the southeast. We hope some one will furnish us a statement of distances from station to station on the Los Angeles road.

LETTER FROM LIDA VALLEY.

LIDA, June 11.

MESSRS. EDITORS: The many friendly notices of Lida that have from time to time appeared in your spicy paper precludes an apology for this trespass on your space to say with our ex J. P.

"LIDA VALLEY IS BOOMING."

After weeks spent in negotiating for the large and valuable property of the Lida Mill and Mining Company at this place, it has been sold to Gen. A. L. Page, a thorough millman well and favorably known throughout Nevada. The property consists mainly of a ten stamp mill, eight or ten mining claims and 40 acres of land, embracing "Lida City." Among the mining locations are the each of which has yielded large quantities of bullion. To this section this sale is of vital importance. The mill has been standing idle since January, the result of protracted litigation in which the company has been involved for the past twelve months, which fact had paralized the mining interests, crippled every branch of business and depleted our population 200 per cent. Under the new proprietor the mill will be started up immediately—business in all its branches enlivened, mining operations resumed and a new era for Lida Valley date from the transfer of possessions. The mines fully warrant steady employment for the mill.

Buoyant with confidence of bright future, nearly everybody has a smile ready to bestow upon his neighbor. Of our progress in unearthing the vast treasures concealed beneath these hills we will occasionally speak (with your permission). [Come on.—EDS.]

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celebrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for turbines, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

Dried Potatoes.

Lately, a trade has been developed among some Rochester, N. Y., shippers about which but little is known. It is the trade in dried potatoes. Potatoes are sliced up and dried much in the same manner as dried apples. One firm in that city has an order now on hand for 50,000 pounds of these dried potatoes, as well as 1,500 bushels of onions, which are dried in the same manner. They are intended for the navy. A bushel of potatoes dries away to about ten pounds. When ready they are put into large tin cans, holding 40 pounds each, and sealed up the same as oysters.

—Ministers of the Interior—The cook and the doctor.

—The Senate has passed a bill pensioning all soldiers who have lost an arm at or above the elbow, at $24 a month.

—A Chicago parson, who is also a school teacher, handed a problem to a class in mathematics, the other day The first boy took it, looked at it awhile, and said: "I pass." Second boy stared at it and drawled out: "I can't make it." "Very well, boys," said the parson, "we'll proceed to cut for a new deal," and with this remark, the leather strap danced like lightning over the shoulders of those depraved mathematicians.

Hints for Stacking Hay.

Make your stacks long and narrow. It will cure better and there is less danger of its becoming musty; besides, it will be easier baling. The press can be moved easier than you can pitch from the rear of a wide stack. In building the stack, unload alternately on different sections of the stack; this will allow the air to circulate through each load before it is settled down by another placed upon it. About three gallons of salt thrown into a load of hay will preserve its sweetness. Three quarts are recommended by a hay farmer.

LITERARY.

Prospectus for 1874—Seventh Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality, with greater facility for production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plates, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art culture in America, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any decent representations of the productions of great painters.

In addition to designs by members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the refining influences of true art.

The quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thos. Moran and J. D. Woodward.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attraction any of its predecessors.

PREMIUMS FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1874, will receive a pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thos. Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives the cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory. The difference in the nature of the scenes themselves is a pleasing contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's scope and coloring. The chromos are each worked from thirty distinct plates, and are in size (12x16) and appearance exact facsimiles of the originals. The presentation of a worthy example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold but peculiarly happy idea, and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonial over the signature of Mr. Moran himself.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 20, 1874.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & CO.,

Gentlemen—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos. They are wonderfully successful representations by mechanical process of the original paintings. Very respectfully

(Signed,) THOS. MORAN.

These chromos are in every sense American; they are by an original American process with material of American manufacture, from designs of American scenery by an American painter, and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journal. In no better because of all this, they will certainly possess an interest no foreign production can inspire, and neither are they any worse for by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold for giving or double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons of taste will prize these pictures for themselves—not for the price they did or did not cost, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free at New York Office.

For 50 cents extra the chromos will be sent mounted, varnished and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & CO.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Appearances Against Him.

[From The Graphic.]

The history of English law contains few more startling judicial tragedies than that to which the statute against murder owed such humane amendment as to make the finding and positive identification of the slain person essential to the conviction of the murderer; and as the same remarkable case had a peculiar moral and social significance for the young lovers of all times, who, in their passionate devotion to each other, are too apt to disregard the fortunes of everybody else in the world, it may be recalled appropriately for modern reading.

Upon the death of Mr. George Perkins, a widower of considerable property in London, it was found that his will appointed a brother of his, living near Epping Forest, the sole guardian of his only daughter, and directed that said guardian should inherit the whole fortune devised in case his young ward should die either unmarried or without children. Implicit confidence in his brother, who was a middle aged bachelor of limited means, had, of course, inspired the dying man to make such a will; but a number of family relatives pronounced the document an extraordinary piece of servile fatuity, and darkly hinted that harm would ensue from it. This feeling caused an alienation between the occupants of the Epping Forest residence and the aforesaid prophets, and the latter made the bitterest prosecutors of the dead man's brother in the strange and tragic succeeding events, which have been described as follows:

Uncle and neice were both seen one day walking together in the forest, but the young lady suddenly disappeared, and the uncle declared that he sought her as soon as he missed her, and knew not whither she had gone or what had become of her. This account was considered improbable, and, circumstances being clearly suspicious, he was arrested and taken before a magistrate. Other circumstances, hourly coming to light, rendered his position serious. A young gentleman in the neighborhood had been paying his addresses to Miss Perkins. It was stated and generally believed that he had gone a few days before she was missed on a journey to the North, and that she had declared she would marry him on his return. The uncle had repeatedly expressed his disapprobation of the match, and Miss Perkins had loudly reproached him with his unkindness and abuse of his authority over his ward. A woman named Margaret Oaks was produced, who swore that at about eleven o'clock on the day on which Miss Perkins was missed she was passing through the forest and heard the voice of a young lady earnestly expostulating with a gentleman. On drawing near the spot whence the sound came Margaret Oaks testified that she heard the lady exclaim: "Don't kill me, uncle, don't kill me!" The woman was greatly terrified and ran away from the spot. As she was doing so she heard the report of firearms. On this combination of circumstantial and positive evidence, coupled with the suspicion of interest, the uncle was tried, convicted of murder, and almost immediately afterward—according to the custom of those days—was hanged.

About ten days after the execution of the sentence upon the uncle the neice appeared, and, stranger still, showed by the history she related that all the testimony given on the trial was strictly true. Miss Perkins said that, having resolved to elope with her lover, they had given out that he had gone on a journey to the North, whereas he had merely waited near the outskirts of the forest until the time appointed for the elopement, which was the very day on which she had disappeared. Her lover had horses ready saddled for them, and two servants in attendance on horseback. While walking with her uncle he reproached her with her resolution to marry a man of whom he disapproved, and after some remonstrances she passionately exclaimed:

"I have set my heart upon him. If I don't marry him it willl be death to me; and don't kill me, uncle, don't kill me!"

Just as she proclaimed those words she heard a gun fired, at which she started, and she afterwards saw a man come from among the trees with a wood-pigeon in his hand, which he had shot. On approaching the spot appointed for the meeting with her lover, she formed a pretense to induce her uncle to go on before. She then fled to the arms of her lover, who had been waiting for her, and they both immediately mounted their horses and rode off. Instead, however, of going North, they retired to Windsor, and about a week afterward went on a tour of pleasure to France. There they passed some months so happily that in those days when newspapers were scarce, when there was no regular postal communication and no telegraphs, they never heard of their uncle's sad fate until their return to England.

What is a Good Cow.

The Mirror and Farmer says: Every farmer ought to know just what a good cow is; that is how much a cow ought to yield in order to save her from the butcher. In the large dairies in Vermont they call a cow that will make three 50-pound tubs of butter a year an average cow, and one that will make four tubs a good one. A single cow on good feed ought to do better than this even. One of the employees of The Mirror has a native cow which during the 12 months ending April 1, supplied a family of five with milk, butter and cream, and surplus enough to amount to $67 50, the milk being sold at five cents per quart and the butter at 30 and 34 cents per pound. The cow will give 20 quarts of strained milk per day. When dried, March 10, she was giving four quarts per day, her feed being hay and two quarts of cob meal. She dropped her calf April 1, 1873, and another March 30, 1874. For such a cow a man had better give $150 than to take the gift of a poor one. Our own idea is that a cow from which 200 pounds of butter cannot be made in a year should not be tolerated around any man's barn.

Gilt Edged Butter.

In making fancy butter there are three essentials—color, texture and flavor. "The color must be a rich golden; the texture firm tenacious, waxy; and that nutty flavor and smell which impart so high a degree of pleasure when eating it." Butter of the very highest character will bring $1 a pound readily. A Philadelphia maker who receives this price gave Mr. J. B Lyman these facts as to his management: He feeds on clover or early mown hay; cuts fine, moistens and mixes in corn meal and wheaten shorts, feeds often, and a little at a time; uses no roots except carrots; keeps his pasture free from weeds; keeps the temperature of the milk-room at fifty-eight degrees; skims clean; stirs the cream in the cream pot; churns once a week; just before the butter gathers he puts in a bucketful of ice-cold water in the churn; in working, he works out the butter without the use of the hand, absorbing the drops with a fine linen cloth, and at the second working handles delicately, with fingers as cold as may be; salts nearly an ounce to the pound and packs in one pound rolls.

The Artesian Well.

In the immediate vicinity of the shops of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, workmen commenced two years ago to day to bore an artesian well. The depth now reached is 290 feet. On the descent some water was found at various points. While drawing up the pipe yesterday to test these veins, a flow of water came up at the depth of 180 feet. It was sufficiently powerful to well up through the six-inch pipe, not only to the surface, but some three feet above it. The force would have been greater had the pipe been longer. It flows but about a quarter of an hour at a time, owing to the choking by quicksand. It is firmly believed that when this obstacle is overcome there will be a continuous flow of water in sufficient quantities for all practical purposes. The quality of the water has yet to be thoroughly tested.—Oakland Transcript, June 11.

Our Tobacco Experiment.

The experiment in tobacco culture at the Agricultural Park is succeeding admirably. In the forty acres of the "weed" under cultivation, there are 160,000 plants in hearty growth. The plants vary in size from 12 inches in hight to those of two or three inches, and give abundant evidence of the congeniality of soil and climate. A recent decision of the United States Circuit Court confirms the Gilroy Company's patent, a fact which lends additional interest to the extensive experiment now being made at the Park. The success of this experiment will open up a very large and profitable field of industry in Los Angeles county.—Los Angeles Express.

VOLUME V.

With this issue THE INYO INDEPENDENT begins its Fifth Year and Volume.

All we have to say of the past is just what we will, that far, have to say for the future: That we have worked hard and faithfully in an honest endeavor for the best interests of the people and section we represent; that, in so doing we have never been actuated by policy in its narrow sense; interest, purely personal to ourselves, has never in any instance been allowed to stand in the way of a duty to the public, though obviously at times they have run counter.

In this line of duty we have given offense and made enemies, and we should be sorry if we had not; but we have never at any time purposely tendered offense to any person whomsoever by force of reasons personal to ourselves alone.

We have struggled through four years of incessant labor and very poor pay. We have not grown rich, nor do we owe Inyo county a cent for which we have not rendered a fair equivalent, so far as untiring effort in that direction can make amends for lack of judgment or ability.

But we acknowledge an obligation to many liberal minded friends, and as a class, to our patrons in general. By far the majority of them have been commendably prompt in their payments, but there are others again, not a few, content not only to accept the fruits of our labors all these years, but to do so without even so much as a word of acknowledgement. We are tired of that kind of patronage, and in reference to the same, will call attention to the provisions of the newspaper law published on the first page.

That we have fallen short in our own desires and expectations to present a first class country paper scarcely admits comment, and demands no apology for the simple reason that the emoluments received have never been sufficient to excuse a constant and unremitting attention to the mere mechanical details, making the responsible editorial duties necessarily a mere incident, a condition of affairs as perfectly incompatible to the production of "a good paper," other conditions being equal, as for the preacher to pronounce a good sermon or learned dissertation each Sunday after performing hard manual labor all the other days in the week.

We hope and think the time will soon come when Inyo county can afford a support to its paper sufficient to enable its editor to lay aside his stick and rule at least a part of the time. Then if its paper does not do it justice and credit its editor is not equal to his task, that's all. We don't complain on the one hand nor recognize the justice of any on the other, if any complaints there be—neither the one or the other—as yet.

In these four years, notwithstanding some marked backsets, our county has made good progress every way. Yet we are every day more and more convinced that it has not yet taken more than the first step toward its true and easily attainable greatness. Its goal is but a little ways in the future, and is not less bright than that of the most favored county of its class in this State—or any other. THE INDEPENDENT is now, and and henceforth, ready and anxious to do its whole duty to its county and patrons.

The Mining Laws.

The General Land Office will soon issue a circular containing instructions to Registers and Receivers of subordinate offices with reference to the last mining law amendment. Among other things it will contain: "By this legislation the requirements of the fifth section of the mining Act of May 10, 1872, and the amendatory Act of March 1, 1873, are changed by extending the time for the first annual expenditures upon claims located prior to May 10, 1872, to the 1st day of January, 1875. The requirements in regard to expenditures upon claims located since May 10, 1872, are in no way changed by the above Amendatory Act."

Minor Card Players.

The Penal Code now contains the following section: Section 336. Every owner, lessee or keeper of any house used, in whole or in part, as a saloon or drinking place, who knowingly permit any person under twenty-one years of age to play at any game of chance therein, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

See This.

The law making it a misdemeanor to sell liquor to a habitual drunkard went into effect on the 15th instant.

OUR OLD WASHINGTON NO. 3.

We devote considerable space in this issue to Major Sherman's well, not to say beautifully written, history of the old Washington No. 3 press which still does duty in this office. We call it old because its history covers the whole of that of California under American rule, not because the old veteran is in the least decrepit or scarcely battle scarred; on the contrary, save the grime of ink and oil, it is to-day as bright, good and little worn as the day it turned out the first number of "The Dime Catcher" in Baton Rouge, more than a quarter of century ago. Of its class it is and ever was a superior piece of machinery; never out of repair, its duplicates never yet called upon, always ready for duty, easy to handle, reliable, always in the van of civilization, a veritable old civilizer and historian telling its own story from day to day, and yet not ready to sum up mayhap for a century to come. No less loyal to its country than true to its owners there is nothing in its record to blot out, to expunge or to excite a blush of shame as the ignominious tool of any person or faction. It has seen sorry and long, weary days, and faded hopes, but still more of sunshine and triumph. By river and sea, mountain and plain, desert and flowery vale, earthquake and flood, idle days and busy ones it has written its own lines and yet asks no rest!

But it is not the story of this combination of brass, steel and iron that is being told, or gives the real interest. It is the association of persons and events so intimately blended with the history of our State from a period anterior to the flush times of '49 down and through to the subdued days of '74. Its story uncovers a world of reminiscences of peculiar interest to thousands of old Pacific coasters wherever they now may be. In it, many of our own readers of to-day will find reminders of exciting events of their own later experiences, particularly of Esmeralda Mountain, where, at Aurora, this old "Major Sherman press," as it was called, eloquently recorded the silvery rise and progress and leaden fall of so many of their high hopes—how it happened they changed their minds about "going to the States, this Fall," and concluded to go to "ranching on Owens River" instead.

But a whole newspaper will not suffice to give even a fair outline of the many important and interesting circumstances in which this old press has figured. It was in the hope of supplying or enlarging some missing links of contemporaneous history, especially with reference to the pioneer and later days of our own county, that we have held back the publication of the Major's well told story, intending to present all together, and eventually in book form; but it has been quite beyond our power to spare the time for the undertaking, and for the present at least, we forego every effort in that direction, and present the Major's kind effort alone and as sufficient of itself. With this explanation to him we defer further remark.

We will add, however, that so far as we now know, this is the oldest press in use on the coast, and save one or two the most, is the original pioneer. We would be pleased to hear from any of our contemporaries on that point.

Ducks in a Vineyard.

It is mentioned in The Grape Culturist that a large vineyardist in Illinois keeps each season not less than 100 ducks constantly among the vines. He says it is wonderful with what diligence they dart after all kinds of bugs, thrips, flies and small snails, and he considers them among the best of insect exterminators.

—"Dad, if I were to see a duck on the wing, and were to shoot it, would you lick me?" O, no my son; it would show that you were a good marksman, and I would be proud of you." "Well, then, dad, I peppered our old Muscovy duck as he was flying, over the fence to-day, and it would have done you good to see him drop."

—A Milwaukee man has applied for a patent on a pen which, by the pressure of the thumb on a small rubber ball, projects a stream through the holder into the face of the fellow who is looking over your shoulder while you are writing. It lacks one essential, however, it makes no provision for the after-clap.

—A negro boy was driving a mule in Jamaica, when the animal suddenly stopped and refused to budge. Won't go, hey?" said the boy. "Feel grand, do you? I spose you forget your fadder was nothin' but a jackass."

—Says The Milwaukee Sentinel: There are worse punishments than the the lash. We retain a vivid remembrance of being kept from Sunday School for some childish fault.

—Plaster-of-paris for picture frames is mixed up with weak alum water, or a solution of one ounce gum-arabic to the pint of water. It is applied as usual, and moulded when soft. When dry, it has a hard and smooth surface, ready for bronzing.

—The reported discovery of immense deposits of guano in Southern Peru is is confirmed.

—There are at work in Upper and Lower Egypt nearly 500 steam pumps.

A HISTORICAL PRINTING PRESS.

The Story of Our Old Washington No. 3, the "Major Sherman Press," and the Pioneer of the Coast.

[By way of explanation to the following, additional to remarks elsewhere, we will state that, to the best of our belief, the name of the first paper given, "The Dime Catcher," is in identically the same old long primer used on that paper; we have but a small quantity of that letter now in the office, but of the bourgeois which is nearly as old, and in which the article itself is printed, we have a number of cases—for use when short handed as at present.—EDS. INDEPENDENT.]

CHICAGO, March 22, 1873.

MESSRS. CHALFANT & PARKER, Publishers of INYO INDEPENDENT: In regard to the history of the press referred to, I am compelled to trust to memory solely for the particulars desired, as I am not in possession of even a scrap of either printed or written matter concerning it, everything having been destroyed by fire at Sacramento, which consumed the old files of papers, which had been preserved, that had been issued from that press.

The press was purchased in New York, and taken first to Baton Rouge, Louisiana (the home of Gen. Zachary Taylor), in 1848, where the late Judge Judson Ames issued the first paper ever printed upon it called a political campaign paper devoted to the interests of the Whig party in general and particularly to the elevation of Gen. Taylor to the Presidency, who was perhaps its chief patron.

After the Presidential election was over, and Gen. Taylor elected, the California gold fever raged as intensely throughout the Gulf States as in any other portion of the Union, and thousands left that section for California in 1849 by the way of New Orleans and the Isthmus of Panama, among whom was Judge Ames, who deemed the "art preservative" the best calculated to enhance his fortunes in the new El Dorado. Accordingly he packed up the material of his office, and with his press he started for the golden shores of the Pacific via the Isthmus of Panama. The many difficulties he encountered in transporting his press and material from Chagres to Panama were enough to discourage the efforts of a dozen ordinary men, but Ames had no such word as fail in his lexicon. Being a man of herculean strength and splendid physique, and possessing an indomitable will, with a mind well stored with literary acquirements, a cheerful disposition and generous to a fault, in the prime of his young manhood and with robust health, it was impossible for him to fail.

At Chagres he met with much difficulty in getting his type and press transported across the Isthmus, as the only mode of travel and conveyance was by bungalows and canoes up the Chagres river to Gorgona or Cruces and thence on the backs of mules to Panama. He secured a bungalow and hired the natives to pole him and his freight up the river. The imposing stone and type made good ballast, but the press was the most difficult and awkward to manage. At one time a sudden lurch caused it to fall overboard, when it sank of course to the bottom of the river, and was apparently lost. But Ames managed to make a drag by bending an iron bar and making a hook to it, and fortunately secured the press, which was dragged along the bottom of the stream to a shallow place about four feet deep. He then directed the native boatmen, some half a dozen or more, to jump out and lift it into the bungalow, but they were unequal to the task. They would lift it by their united strength to the surface of the water but could get it no higher. A half a day was spent in this fruitless effort. Finally Ames got mad, and in his impulse of rage jumped into the water himself, and plunging to the bottom gathered hold of the press, and with one mighty effort, lifted it out of its bed of mud and water and put it on board without any assistance whatever, while the natives looked at him with awe and astonishment as if he were a brother to Sampson.

Upon reaching Gorgona it was found necessary to continue on up the river to Cruces, where Ames disembarked with his press and material. After much trouble he managed to get everything packed on mules, paying most exorbitant prices for its transportation to Panama, where a very large number of California bound adventurers had already arrived, and thousands were awaiting the arrival of steamers and sailing vessels for San Francisco. Judge Ames, being compelled to wait, as well as the rest, for several months, immediately set up his press, and soon astonished everyone, both native and foreign, with a newspaper printed half in English and half in Spanish, under the name of and met with considerable success. As soon, however, as the most of the American passengers had left for California, he closed the publication and packed up the press and material and started with it, by steamer, for San Francisco.

Some few months afterward he became editorially connected with a journal which was first started at Sacramento and then removed to San Francisco, and I believe it was issued from this same press. In 1851, Wm. M. Gwin was elected United States Senator, who, with many other politicians, was devoted to the fostering of the interests by the South by the advocacy of the building of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD,

THE PLACER TIMES AND TRANSCRIPT,

with its terminus at San Diego instead of San Francisco. Strong inducements were held out by Senator Gwin and others to Ames, and with flattering promises (which were made to be broken) he removed with his press to San Diego, and there commenced the publication of which he continued to publish for ten years, and durig which time the farfamed and inimiable wit and wag

"JOHN PHŒNIX," THE LAMENTED DERBY, performed those pranks, and perpetrated those jokes upon Ames which have become a part of the comic history and facetious literature of California under the title of which adorns the libraries, both public and private, throughout the country, and which firstappeared in the columns of The San Digo Herald.

In 1860 Judge Ames, seeing no immediate prospect of the fulfillment of his hopes by the commencement of the Southern Pacific Railroad—and having wasted the bet portion of his life at San Diego without remunerative reward—and the futue looking still more discouraging to him, was induced to leave that place, and removed inland to the town of San Bernardino, which had been a Mormon outpost, and abandoned by the Mormons, who had previously sold out everything at a sacrifice at the command of Brigham Young, and returned to Sal Lake to resist the United States forces under Gen. Sidney Johnston. A change in the character of the population at San Bernardino, and the discovery of valuable and extensive gold mines in the vicinity, with a large increase of population pouring into that section of the State, Judge Ames at that place commenced the publication of which he continued to publish until February, 1861, when on account of ill-health and pecuniary embarassment he was compelled to cease its publication, and in the month of August of that year Ames died.

In March 1861, before his decease, the press and material of The Herald came under my control, and I commenced the publication of a new paper called devoted to the cause of the Union, and sustaining the administration of Abraham Lincoln after the firing on Fort Sumpter. It was a critical period and tried tie nerves somewhat to maintain a loyal paper among a population which at that time was either indifferent or lip-loyal, while in truth they heartily but secretly sympathized with the majority who were secessionists. Some there, however, were true blue, and with pecuniary aid sent to me from elsewhere, I continued to publish The Patriot until the month of October, 1861, when it was continued by U. B. Freiner until February, 1862, when its publication ceased.

In the month of March, 1862 the press and material were again packed up, and were hauled by Mr. H. C. Ladd with ox-teams from San Bernardino, through the Cajon Pass, across the Mohave Desert to Walker's Pass and up through the

on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevadas and across the Esmeralda mountains to the town of Aurora, then the county seat of Mono county, California, but now that of Esmeralda county, Nevada, the State boundary having since been run and placing that town within the limits of the lattter State. On the 24th of May, 1862, the first number of

was issued from this press by Sherman & Freaner. In the month of September following it was continued by myself alone under great difficulties and a considerable degree of personal danger. Party feeling ran high and partizan violence was of frequent occurrence. The population was nearly equally divided in sentiment; while nearly all of the county officers were either secessionists, openly or secretly, or nutral. It had been the rendezvous of many partizan leaders of the secessionists, and Showalter's and other parties had fitted out and started from this place to join the rebel forces. During this exciting time I was waylaid, knocked down and shot by one Augustus Quinton, who had been selected with two others to assassinate me. The assassins fled. Quinton joined the rebel army, and was taken prisoner and paroled at Vicksburg. He subsequently returned to the Pacific Coast and, with a number of other rebel desperadoes, committed disturbances at North San Juan, Nevada county, California and was shot while in the act of firing on the Sheriff's posse, in that county, who went to arrest him.

I continued to publish The Esmeralda Star, sometimes alone, and part of the time it was issued under the partnership firm of Sherman & Hatch, until February, 1864, when my connection with it ceased, and the name of the paper was changed to that of and was published by Hatch, Burchfield & Saxton, the latter gentlemen being the Rev. J. B. Saxton, a Baptist clergyman, still in California, who continued to edit the paper when my connection with it ceased.

The mining interests in and around Aurora having waned considerably, and the excitement gone down, the population decreased, and The Esmeralda Union, which had begun very promising as a daily, was changed to a tri-weekly, then a semi-weekly and finally to a weekly, when it passed into the hands of the Hon. J. G. McClinton, who continued its publication until the population had dwidled down until it was no longer possible for him to continue it, and it ceased to exist. Since then I lost all trace of the press until I received your letter asking for a history of it.

It is with feelings of profound gratification that I learn from you that this Old Pioneer, like so many other of still exists, and continues to light up the frontier background of the picture of the Golden Empire of the Pacific, and that it has fallen into such worthy hands. It was never prostituted to ignoble, selfish, or unpatriotic ends; and not a single issue of any of the many journals which have felt the force of its lever, so far as I have been able to learn, but what have been and never subservient to the personal aggrandizement of party politicians who have sought to use it for their own selfish schemes and purposes.

It has braved the seas, the rivers and the floods, and ran the gauntlet of hostile Indian tribes; it has crossed the Continent, deserts and mountains; it has been lost in the slimy, oozy bed of the Chagres in the tropics, and has climbed to the highest elevation of the abode of civilized man on the summit of mountains which bind States together in the temperate zone.

It has sent forth no disloyal sentiment, nor proclaimed

AUGHT BUT UNION LOVING AND PATRIOTIC DEVOTION.

Though often threatened with destruction, it never flinched when the hour of trial in duty came. It has been crowned and wreathed in flowers by the fair daughters of the South and the Pacific. It has been wet and drenched with the rich blood of the vine, and its track has been lubricated with the juice of the olive. It has won the love of its friends and commanded the respect of its enemies, while its spirit of equity and justice has never beet influenced or injured by that of the Bourbon, too often the false friend and secret foe of the printer. It has lit up the pathway of commerce, and pointed the road to fortune for others. It has been the herald of hymen, proclaimed the advent of the new born, and tolled the doleful news of the departed. Rich gems of the mind, of poesy and song, of wit and humor and the more practical prose, have illumed the pages of its journals. The farmer and miner, the mechanic and laborer, the school master and preacher, the physician and lawyer, the people and their servants have all found it to be a faithful register of the events which have marked the varied course of time during the period of its existence, and it is still engaged in the routine of its duty in issuing a journal which it proclaims to be not only progressive but also "Independent."

I cannot close this letter without recalling to mind and passing before my memory those who have been connected with this DEAR OLD PRESS—yes, put it in capitals for it deserves to be.

struggled through long years of patient toil and poverty to maintain it, cheered by the generous aid and sympathy of the lamented Derby, both of whom are gone to their rest. Ames sleeps sweetly beneath the flowers of the vale of San Bernardino, while the marble of Paria encloses the dust of Derby under the shades of Mt. Auburn.

Hatch still clicks by the thousand at the case in the City by the Golden Gate. Burchfield is measuring his work by the "galley" on the shores of the Narragansett. Saxton is preaching the gospel in the balmy vales of Sonoma. McClinton, the son of Vulcan, who rose from the forge to bestride the tripod of the journalist, by the aid of this Press was, ere long, enabled to don the ermine of the Bench, which was to become the stepping stone to the Senate hall of the Silver State. Freaner sought the sunny land of Sonora and choosing a fair senorita for a companion through life, has become a ranchero mejicano. May joy and success attend them all through life's weary journey, and no thorns pierce their hands while plucking its roses.

May like happiness and success crown all your efforts in life, and especially while you are connected with the OLD PRESS.

In conclusion permit me to say that I trust you will never be forced to act upon the "defensive," when fighting for THE INDEPENDENT, to the extent of adopting the tactics of John Phœnix when attacked by the Judge for changing the politics of The Herald during his absence—that is, "in order to make an impression on the enemy to hold him back down on the form by forcibly inserting your nose between his teeth!"

Trusting that the foregoing will be acceptable, I have the pleasure to remain,

Truly and respectfully yours,

[MAJOR] EDWIN A. SHERMAN.

NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Board of Equalization of Assessments for Inyo County will meet on MONDAY, JULY SIXTH, A. D. 1874, and will at the same time, in special meeting as a Board of Supervisors of Inyo County, take action in the payment of balance due to contractor E. Chaquette for the building of county bridges; in the appointment of Justices of the Peace and Constables for 6th Township, including Panamint Mining District; the renewing of the insurance of County Court House; in the laying out and opening up of a County or Toll road to open communication with Panamint Mining District, and also take under consideration, and ordering if found proper, a survey of the boundary lines of said Inyo County:

M. W. HAMMARSTRAND, Clerk.

Independence, June 23, 1874. n21012

C. B. WHITE, M. D.,

RESPECTFULLY ANNOUNCES THAT HIS office hours at Camp Independence will be, as heretofore, from 9 to 10 A. M. That the private hospital at Camp Independence is still open for the reception of cases coming from a distance. That he will attend, as far as his other business will permit upon patients in the surrounding country. Further, that he will attend daily at his new office in Independence (front room of Masanic Hall, up stairs) between 3 and 4 o'clock P. M. Requests for calls to be made in town can be left with Mr. J. B. Rowley, at the Postoffice, or at the office during office hours.

Narrow Escape.

Tuesday last T. J. Goodale, wife and child had a most narrow escape from a severe if not fatal accident. While driving slowly along at a pomt near Vagt's ranch the buggy dropped suddenly into a deep irrigating ditch crossing the road, and with such force as to throw them all on to the tongue braces and partially against the horses, the stout dash board breaking square off as they came against it. The child lay on the dash board, while Mr. and Mrs. Goodale each had one foot immovably caught in the iron braces, leaving them both in such a helpless position that no power of theirs could have saved them had the horses started to run. As it fortuneately happened the powerful horses, in which T. J. takes pride for their size and spirit, did not become frightened not even when he had to use the hock of one of them as a hand holt in extricating himself from his perilous position. This, after some little time, he succeeded in doing both for himself and lady, and in rescuing the little boy, the latter somewhat bruised, which, with the broken buggy, was happily about the sum of the actual physical damage, which, however, is not always the worst.

Medical Aid.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the new card of Dr. White, the well known and reliable surgeon at the Post, in which he offers new facilities for the people to be benefitted by his professional services. A report was spread last year that Dr. White was forbidden from attending on cases outside of Camp, but such is not the case. Common humanity dictates that in emergencies he should go where summoned, provided that he does not have to leave at home patients liable to suffer or die in his absence. To our knowledge the present Post Commander adopts the same liberal rule as his predecessors abided by, of not restraining the Post Surgeon, unless he felt in duty bound to remain to wait upon very important results at or near Camp.

The Sweat-Box.

The above is the appropriate title of the cells in the Court House used as a county jail--they are fearfullywarm and ill-ventilated. To keep his prisoners from dying under the deleterious effects of the bad air, especially when chained down to the floor, the Sheriff has to keep the doors open as much as possible, which involves a good deal of extra watchfulness on his part. But for this it is thought Welch, the murderer, would cheat the gallows by dying from the effects of his confinement. These cells ought to be looked to by the Grand Jury. They need to be improved somehow. It is not Christianlike to kill prisoners before their time comes by means of such a sweat-box.

Gone and to Go.

Wednesday last ex-Sheriff Mulkey and family rolled out on their long journey for Montana. They were accompanied to the Taboose Ranch, 14 miles, by a number of lady and gentleman friends, who gave them a genial and social but regretful send-off....On Monday next, per Northern stage, Mrs. P. W. Bennett, and Mrs. S. Slater, the latter the aged mother of our better half, start for extended visits "away down to Maine," and to Idaho, respectively. These departures, each and all, occasion heartfelt regret.

Presentation.

A few days prior to his departure Mr. Mulkey was the recipient, at the hands of a few of his numerous friends, of a most magnificent Spencer hunting and target rifle; except the appropriately inscribed silver plate on the stock, back of the lock, the gun was totally without ornamental mounting, but handsome enough without and just the thing to take the fancy of the most fastidious grizzly hunter in the State.

School Census.

Geo. M. Gill, School Census Marshal for this district, makes the following report: Number of children between 5 and 17 (school age), 39; under age, 26; total, 65. Three of these were of foreign birth; 23 had both parents of native birth; 11 had parents one of each pair of whom was foreign; 29 were of parents both foreign.

Deed Filed.

On the 23d instant a deed signed by J. Frank was filed in the Clerk's office here, conveying all of the said Frank's right, title and interest in the Kearsarge mill and mine to the Kearsarge Mill and Mining Company. The consideration was $30,000 coin.

Prisoners.

There are but two prisoners in the county sweat-box now—E. P. Welch, under sentence of death July 10, and John Hilton, the traveling gentlemen who borrowed Steve Gregg's horse.

San Luis Obispo.

In the water suit between J. P. Andrews vs. A. M. Loomis, at San Luis Obispo, judgment by consent was ordered for plaintiff in the sum of $20 and costs of suit.

For a Grand Jury.

Sheriff Moore ii out trying to rodeo Grand Jurors for the July term.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow at 7:30 P. M.

Personals.

Last week we had the pleasure of a call from Mr. and Mrs. John Belshaw, of Cerro Gordo, who, for once in very long period, find time to get down off that smoky hill to see we lowlanders manage things. As they were here at the ball of the 17th, their verdict was that we do pretty well.....J. M. Meredith, ye Jeemes of Aurora, arrived here Thursday evening and scooted right along to get a fill of lead and arsenic smoke at Cerro Gordo. He has heard it makes people feel weighty if not important....F. Cluggage, the stage man, also took a trip up that way preparatory to taking possession of the stage lines July 1....Connelly and Lake got off on their proposed trip to the eastern mining districts....P. Reddy is yet out at Panamint....W. L. Hunter of Cerro Gordo was in town during the week, and some of our young men think he is incurring as much risk of getting "leaded" down here as on the Hill. These young men are burnishing up their shot-guns—but it isn't of much use, they scatter too much.....W. H. Van Arsdale was also in town....Isaac Hitchcock, the well known old pioneer, is reported dangerously sick....The Big Granger, Past Master J. W. A. Wright, arrived here on the 20th, and after organizing three Granges, as mentioned elsewhere, contined on his way to Kern.

The White Mountains.

From all accounts the White Mountains, or Deep Spring district is going to take a big place in public estimation ere long. John Chastine, just in from there, confirms previous stories of the extremely flattering prospects obtained there. We have not definite details sufficient to attempt more than a reference to the developments being made. Some twenty men are at work, a portion of them on three different mines under the management of the Messrs. Broders and S. P. Moffatt. The ores are of the smelting class. At 30 feet the ledge is 10 feet wide and all mineral. The others are but little, if at all, inferior in any respect. Should the prospects hold out to the contract depth, 50 feet, as Chastine is confident they must do, they will be considered sufficiently prospected to justify at once the erection of smelting works. The gentlemen who have the matter in hand have abundant means and energy to put the undertaking through in the best possible shape, and will certainly do it if the chances seem to reasonably justify, about which there appears to be no fears.

Cause for Complaint.

It is said the road from this place to the bridge above Bishop Creek is dangerously cut up by irrigating ditches It is the duty of Road Masters to see that the public road is not thus obstructed to the annoyance and danger of travelers, particularly in the stage. But whether the Road Master does his duty or not in trying to put a stop to such annoyances, parties themselves are liable for every cent of damage, and the cost of collecting the same, arising from or caused by any obstruction carelessly or purposely placed by them in any recognized or established public highway. It does not need to be a serious damage to give grounds for prosecution; a suit may be instituted and costs and damages recovered as well by the teamster who gets "stuck" for an hour as by him who gets his vehicle smashed or suffers personal injury or other damage by reason of such obstruction, and the pecuniarily responsible party is he who caused the obstruction; but it is also the road overseers business to see that such are not permitted in his district.

The Northern Line.

For some time past, owing to the lightness of travel and the necessities arising from the proceedings in bankruptcy, the Northern Stage Line has been running open vehicles and light teams, but Agent B. L. Brown informs us that after Monday next the four-horse coaches will be put on again, and immediately after the 1st of July will be run on fast time. At that time Mr. Cluggage, the new contractor, and who is now here, takes possession of the line. He informs us that about the 1st of August, or just as soon as the Carson and Columbus wagon road is finished around Esmeralda Mountain, there will be a change from a portion of the present route to that one. It will save materially in distance and avoid the lofty climb over the mountain by Aurora, the nearest point reached to that place being the Nine Mile House, from which a side line will be run into it.

Closed.

Though we have received no notification to that effect, the Land Office here must now be closed for the reason that there is no qualified Register. Mr. Earl was an appointed officer whose commission and time of service must expire at the date of the sine die adjournment of the Congress succeeding the date of appointment, unless said Congress, or the Senate rather, confirmed the appointment, which it did not do in this case. The 3d clause of Section 11 of the Constitution of the United States reads this way: "The President shall have power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of the next session."

To Kill Bugs.

G. W. Todd gives us the following bit of information that may be of value to farmers: Make a strong solution of saltpetre with hot water, and after cooling sprinkle well your vines and vegetables of any kind troubled with the "squash bug." It will certainly kill or drive off every one of these pests.

Balls.

Monday next Mrs. Petra Romero is to give a grand ball in Cerro Gordo, and in the same place, July Fourth, Prospero Calli is give another. Here every prepartion possible is being made to make the one for the Fourth equal to any that has preceded it. We presume every other place is to have a celebration of the same kind.

Stay of Proceedings.

Judge Niles, of the Supreme Court, has notified Sheriff Moore to stay the execution of the sentence of death against E. P. Welch (sentenced to be hanged July 10), until the notice of appeal filed by his attorney can be examined.

Confirmed.

Through private sources we learn that the Senate, June 17, confirmed the nomination of George H. McCallum as Register of this Land Office, vice Earl. Mr. McCallum is represented to be an efficient officer and gentleman.

Granges Organized.

Following are the full list of the officers of two of our recently organized Granges, presented by their respective Secretaries. That for this place has not been received:

BISHOP CREEK GRANGE, P. OF H.

was organized June 22. The officers are: T. J. Furbee, Master; J. L. Garretson, Overseer; B. H. Roberts, Lecturer; John Clark, Chaplain; Jos. W. Inman, Steward; Andrew Dell, Assistant Steward; E. D. Powers, Treasurer; W. T. Wiswall, Secretary; D. Watson, Gate Keeper; Mrs. M. A. Clark, Ceres; Mrs. A. Powers, Pomona; Mrs. A. R. McLaren, Flora; Mrs. M Inman, Stewardess.

LONE PINE GRANGE, P. OF H.

was organized June 23 with the following officers: C. L. Jackson, Master; J. J. McCall, Overseer; J. Seeley, Lecturer; A. H. Johnson, Chaplain; I. P. Rittgers, Steward; G. W. Betz, Assistant Steward; J. G. Dodge, Treasurer; R. A. Loomis, Secretary; C. W. Johnson, Gate Keeper; Mrs. M. Dodge, Ceres; Mrs. M. McCall, Pomona; Mrs. D. Johnson, Flora; Mrs. A. B. Rittgers, Stewardess.

To the Farmers.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Mr. J. W. A. Wright, Past Master of the State Grange of California, arrived here on the 20th instant, came for the purpose of organizing Granges. On his way, organized one at Linn's Valley with 34 members; one here at Independence of 30 members; at Bishop Creek with 31 members. The farmers at Round Valley and Big Pine desired an organization, but previous arrangements made it impossible for him to remain above longer. He organized at Lone Pine with 19 members. From there he goes to Weldon, Walker's Basin and Tehechepi. Some one will be sent or an appointment be made to finish the work here. It is well known the objects of this organization is for mutual instruction and protection, to lighten labor by diffusing knowledge.

Farmers, remember that successful results can be secured only by unity.

—Put on your right glove first, stupid, then you have your left hand ungloved to button your right. If you put on your left glove first, you have to button your right glove under double disadvantage.

—The Syracuse (N. Y.) police authorities are dealing severely with those little boys who in their anxiety for fun play such games as "stump the leader" and "follow the leader." The games themselves are harmless when properly played, but the Syracuse youths in following their leader pull down fences, tear the roofs off houses trip pedestrians, etc., which is carrying the game too far.

BORN.

At Aurora, June 20, to the wife of W. A. Culberson, a daughter.

At Lone Pine, June 22, to the wife of Dr. P. G. Gelcich, a son.

[A newspaper prophecy is better than no prophecy at all when its fullfilment causes as much happiness as the above realization of our prognostication of a year or so ago. The second Miss Gelcich wasn't a boy, and the Doctor was proud but not wholly satisfied. We said, "just wait, it will be all right next time—and he may become President." The Doctor waited, and is now full of pride and satisfaction both, and as a prophet we are satisfied to rest on our laurels.—Eds.]

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

One day you will be pleased with a friend and the next day disappointed in him. It will be so to the end, and you must make up your mind to it, and not quarrel unless for very grave cause. Your friend, you have found out, is not perfect; nor are you, and you cannot expect to get much more than you give. You must look for much weakness, foolishness and vanity in human nature; it is unhappy if you are too sharp in seeing them.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

KEARSARGE MILL AND MINING COMPANY. Principal place of business San Francisco, California. Location of works Kearsarge Mining District, Inyo County, California.—Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Trustees, held on the First day of June, A. D. 1874, an assessment (No. 1) of twenty cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin to the Secretary at the office of the company, southeast corner of Clay and Kearney streets, San Francisco, California. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the Thirteenth day of July, A. D. 1874, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction, and unless payment is made before will be sold on MONDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF AUGUST, A. D. 1874, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

LITERARY.

Prospectus for 1874—Seventh Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of the THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centers of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality, with greater facilty for production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art culture in America, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any decent representations of the productions of great painters.

In addition to designs by members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the refining influences of true art.

The quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thos. Moran and J. D. Woodward.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attraction any of its predecessors.

PREMIUMS FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1874, will receive pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thos. Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives the Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory. The differences in the nature of the scenes themselves is a pleasing contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's scope and coloring. The chromos are each worked from thirty distinct plates, and are in size (12x16) and appearance exact fac-similes of the originals. The presentation of a worthy example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold but peculiarly happy idea, and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonial over the signature of Mr. Moran himself.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 20, 1874.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & Co.,

Gentleman—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos. They are wonderfully successful representations by mechanical process of the original paintings. Very respectfully

(Signed,) THOS. MORAN.

These chromos are in every sense American. They are by an original American process, with material of American manufacture, from designs of American scenery by an American painter, and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journal. If no better because of all this they will certainly possess an interest no foreign production can inspire, and neither are they any worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons of taste will prize these pictures for themselves—not for the price they did or did not cost, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free at New York Office.

For 50 cents extra the chromos will be sent mounted, varnished and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

"A Terrible Situation."

[From Scribners' for April.]

The following passage from Jules Verne's new wonder book, "The Mysterious Island," now appearing serially in Scribner's Monthly, gives an idea of the apparently hopeless plight in which this author delights in placing his heroes:

A terrible situation, that of these unfortunates! They were evidently no longer masters of the balloon. Their endeavors were fruitless; the envelope of the air-ship decreased more and more. The fluid escaped without possibility of retaining it. The descent was visibly accelerated, and an hour after noon the car was suspended not more than six hundred feet above the ocean.

It was, in fact, impossible to prevent the flight of the gas, which escaped freely through a large rent in the back of the balloon.

By lightening the car of all the objects it contained, the passengers had been able to prolong their suspension in the air for some hours. But the inevitable catastrophe could only be delayed, and if some land did not disclose itself ere nighfall, passengers, car and balloon would have finally disappeared beneath the waves.

The only manœuvre still left to perform was accomplished at that moment. The balloon passengers were evidently energetic people who knew how to look death in the face. Not a single murmur had been heard to escape their lips. The car was only a kind of wicker case, unfit to float and there was no possibility of maintaining it on the surface of the sea if it fell there.

At two o'clock the balloon was scarcely two hundred above the water.

At that moment a manly voice, that of one who was inaccessible to fear, made itself heard. To that voice responded no less energetic voices.

"Is everything thrown out?"

"No, there is still ten thousand francs in gold."

A heavy sack fell at the same instant into the sea.

"Is the balloon rising again?"

"A little; but it will not be long in falling back."

"What is there left to throw away?"

"Nothing."

"But there is! The car!"

"Let us cling to the net and into the sea with the car."

It was indeed the last and only means of lightening the air-ship. The cords which held the car were cut, and after its fall the balloon ascended two thousand feet.

The five passengers had hoisted themselves into the net, above the ring, and supported themselves in the labyrinth of meshes, looking down into the abyss.

Every one knows with what static sensibility balloons are endowed. To throw out the lightest object is sufficient to provoke a toppling from a vertical line. The apparatus, floating in the air, is like a balance, of mathematical precision. One comprehends, then, how, when it is lightened of a relatively considerable weight, the toppling will be important and abrupt. That is what happened on this occasion.

But, after having poised itself an instant in the upper zones, the balloon began to redescend. The gas continued escaping from the rent, which it was impossible to repair.

The passengers had done all that they could. Henceforth no human means could save them. They had nothing more save the aid of God to count on.

At four o'clock the balloon was only five hundred feet above the surface of the water.

A sonorous barking was heard. A dog accompanied the passengers, and held himself imbedded near his master in the meshes of the net.

"Top sees something," cried one of the passengers.

Then at the same instant a strong voice was heard:

"Land! Land!"

The Carson Road.

[From The Borax Miner.]

The Carson Appeal of June 11, says: The Columbus wagon road comes up again. This time she goes. No more delays; no more croakings; no more chance of failure. Sure pop now. Jule Holmes, the best road-builder in Nevada, has undertaken the job. Day before yesterday he sent out eight white men and thirty Chinese to go to work forthwith. To-day he goes out himself. He says he can put her through in two months. He knows what he is talking about, and never talks too much. He tells us that the the Indians in that region are excellent workers. Farmers along there employ them at the plow and in the harvest field. Holmes proposes to muster a force of these working savages. Before the 1st of September the weary teamster may bid good bye to the desert wastes and parching sands of the Wadsworth route, for the Columbus wagon road will not only resound to the cheerful voice of the mule-driver and bull-whacker, but a scoffing press will no longer jeer at the undertaking and mock our 'umble efforts, at bushing it ahead and writing it up." Mighels waxeth jolly and indulges in many words of congratulation on the prospective completion of this Summer road. The picture of the weary teamster bidding farewell to the desert wastes and parching sands of the Wadsworth route ere he tackles the snow-capped peaks of the White Mountains, and the desert and things Carson-ward, is too touching. The poetic thought and one stout lick of the blacksnake, applied at the same moment, would start a tear from the blindest mule on both roads. But the road is to be built sure enough—Sharon has said it—and the old scheme of running a wagon road over the White Mountains, to benefit Carson and the V. & T. Railroad, which had about fallen through on its demerits, is to be finished in the interest of politics. Bully for politics! Bully for Harry Mighels! Bully for the thirty Chinamen (they can't vote)! Bully for Sharon and the long road—to the U. S. Senate! And bully for The Appeal, which it is Sharon's profit.

Something About Etiquette.

Half the world appears boorish and uncouth to the other half, simply because people are not taught manners. Parents, to whom alone children must look, often neglect manners entirely, and leave them to come up any end first. I have carefully prepared a few general hints on etiquette, applicable to both children and adults, and if any one is benefited by them, my labor will be amply repaid:

Never pass your plate for mashed potatoes more than six times, especially if there is company at the table.

Never reach across the table for butter. Wait until it is passed, and then take only a small bit, as butter at 30 cents per pound, and the banks charging two per cent. on A 1 paper, are apt to discourage the head of the family.

Don't wipe the back of your neck with your napkin, no matter how hot the day is.

Never take more than ten good-sized biscuits, no matter if the plate is passed twenty times.

Don't use your finger to stir your coffee. The handle of your knife is more fashionable, and if you want to be real aristocratic take a spoon.

Refrain from wiping your mouth on the table-cloth, if possible. Some ancient writers favor the practice, and I believe a few kings persist in it, but your coat-sleeve is much more handy.

If there is a watermelon on the table for desert, and if you have eaten five or six pieces, and the plate is passed again, you should shake your head and reply, "No, thank you, I never did care much about watermelon."

An evening call on a young lady should never be made in the forenoon.

The length of a call at the house of a young lady depends somewhat on circumstances. If the old man comes in with a shot-gun the call shouldn't be prolonged over an hour.

It is not good taste to ask a lady how much her set of jewelry cost. It used to be until they got to patronizing dollar stores so extensively; but now it is considered the hight of ill-breeding.

Children should never be whipped in the presence of company. Call them your little darlings until your callers go way, and then hunt up the ax-handle and remark, "Now then, you sassy brats, come here!"

It is not proper to bow to a lady four blocks off; but the right way is to run through the alley and head her off.

If you are at a party and a friend of yours desires an introduction to a young lady, the proper way is to first ask her consent. Tell her that his father owns a brick house, 5,000 acres of pine land, fifty shares in a gas company and a paving contract, and she'll consent with such alacrity as will astonish you.

In church never rest your feet on the back of the pew in front, and don't stare at the minister through an opera glass.

If you are one of a party making an evening visit, and fruits and nuts are passed around, don't fill your pockets until some else had a chance. One must be self-sacrificing about such things.

Ice and Water Erosion.

[John Muir in Overland for July.]

The gorge of Niagara River, below the falls, is perhaps the grandest example of a valley eroded by water in compact rock; yet, comparing equal lengths, the glacier-eroded valley of the Yosemite is a hundred times as large, reckoning the average width of the former at 900 feet, and depth 200. But the erosion of Yosemite Valley, besides being a hundred times greater, was accomplished in hard granite, while the Niagara was in shales and limestone. Moreover, the Niagara canyon, as it now exists, expresses nearly the whole amount of the erosion effected by the river; but the present Yosemite is by no means an adequate expression of the whole quantity of glacial erosion effected there since the beginning of the glacial epoch, or even from that point in the period when its principal features began to be developed, because the walls were being cut down on the top simultaneously with the deepening of its bottom. We may fairly ascribe the formation of the Niagara gorge to the river, because we find it at the upper end engaged in the work of its further extension toward Lake Erie; and for the same reason we may regard glaciers as the workmen that excavated Yosemite, for at the heads of some of its branches we find small glaciers engaged in the same kind of excavation. Merced canyons may be compared to mortises in the ends of which we still find the chisels that cut them, though now rusted and worn out. If Niagaria river should vanish or be represented by a small brook, the evidence of the erosion of its gorge would still remain in a thousand water-worn monuments on its walls. Nor, since Yosemite glaciers have been burned off by the sun, is the proof less conclusive that in their greater extension they excavated Yosemite, for, both in shape and sculpture, every Yosemite rock is a glacier monument.

The Reproduction of Past States of Consciousness.

Dr. Carpenter, of The Contemporary Review, gives some interesting illustrations of physiological influences on the habits of thought. The reproduction of past states of consciousness is described to be an automatic action. The theory is that the chemical action of the blood in the brain is a sort of a registering process, which, if it is properly pursued, leaves an indelible impression that can always be reproduced under the proper influences. A case of forgetting and recovering a language is a peculiar illustration of a sudden change in the action of the blood. Dr. Abercrombie tells of a man who had been placed in a state of stupor by an injury, and in this state began to talk as though he had been thirty years absent from Wales, and had apparently forgotten the language altogether. Upon the recovery of his health, the man began to talk the English language and completely forgot the Welch again. A curious fact within the knowledge of the writer was the case of a student in Germany who was exceeding anxious to acquire the German language as soon as possible. He had some knowledge of it, but was unable to use it in conversation. Yet in his sleep, his mind evidently engrossed with the study, he could hold a conversation, understand perfectly and talk fluently.

Royal Endorsement.

It is said that Queen Victoria has sent an autograph letter to President Grant fully endorsing Mr. Sartoris as one every way worthy the hand and heart of the daughter of a President of the United States. It is also hinted that the royal heart will probably be moved to give some special mark of approbation of this union, by inviting the couple to visit Windsor Castle and conferring some title of nobility on the bridegroom. It is also said that this action has been prompted from the sincere personal attachment which the Queen formed for Miss Grant during the brief visit that young lady made to the palace on her former visit to Europe, and also for the esteem she feels for the President of this republic in his official capacity.

—A Wisconsin minister has been dismissed from an orthodox pulpit because he built a fire under a balky horse. His case is almost as bad as that of the Eau Claire preacher, in the same State, who was dismissed by the congregation for counting a nine spot "ten for game."

A Wooden Railway in Wisconsin.

A Wisconsin paper says that D. H. W. Williams is driving work on the Tomah and Chicago Narrow-Gauge Railroad from Wauzeka to Reedstown, and it is expected that trains will be running over that portion of the road by the middle of September. The rails used are maple, which are sawed out 3½ by 5 inches; these are gained into the ties, and fastened at the ends with dowel-pins, the gains in the ties being made a trifle larger than will admit the rails, and on either side of the rail are driven wedges in the opposite direction. These maple rails are obtained at a cost of $15 per thousand feet. It is estimated that the maple rail will last over one year without repairs, and that the interest on capital invested in iron rail would relay a track every twelve months. Last Fall, on the Elkader road, in Iowa, a portion of the track was laid with maple rails, and an examination made of them this Spring shows that they have not been injured by use.

Grows Interesting.

The railroad war in Wisconsin grows interesting. A special dispatch to a Chicago paper from Madison, Wisconsin, says that the Railroad Commissioners have received a letter from Hamilton Station, complaining that a West Wisconsin railroad conductor having been arrested for charging illegal passenger rates, the railroad company to take revenge upon the place—which is a village of 1,500 people, shipping and receiving a large amount of freight—have got up a new time table and run by it without stopping, and threaten to do worse. A reply was made by the Commissioners that they had no power in the premises, but the Government and Attorney General had, who would undoubtedly take the proper measures in the case if the facts were verified and the violation of the law persisted in.

Sheppard.

President Grant renominated the above named individual, the boss thief of the United States, as President of the Washington City Board of Public Works, right in the face of the proven fact that he had sunk and stolen millions of public money. But six Senators of the entire lot had the temerity to vote in favor of his confirmation; among the six were Sargent and Jones. To be in keeping with his Casey and Corbyn, Richardson and similar acts, Grant by all means must give the Boss Thief a place in the Treasury. Between the two they might manage to secure enough for permanent retirement in a year or two; at least the retirement is very well assured for both.

Guilty.

John J. Marks, late Harbor Commissioner, and his son, who were charged with conspiracy to rob the State, were tried in San Francisco recently. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. The penalty is a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment in the county jail one year. Motion for a new trial was made.

In the Banking Interest.

We have received the first number of "The Banker and Depositor," a paper in the interest of banks and depositors. It contains much interesting statistical matter of general character. It is published monthly at San Francisco, at $1 per annum.

The Visalia Delta.

This paper, which, by the way, is among the best local papers that comes to this office, is now the joint property of Dewey, Barton & Majors, the last two gentlemen having recently become interested.

The Tilton-Beecher Scandal.

And now comes Henry Ward and admits that there was quite as much truth as poetry in the scandalous charges against himself and Mrs. Tilton. He abjectly asks Tilton to forgive him and wishes he were dead.

Resigned.

Postmaster-General Cresswell, in deference to private interests (straw bids), has resigned his office. Hale, of Maine, is his successor.

Enlarged.

Our esteemed contemporary, The Eureka Sentinel, is now greatly enlarged.

—Artaxerxes Marrowhar, who is always sneaking about the pantry, says if he ever joins a secret society at college, it will be the Pi Eta.

—China has streets paved with granite blocks laid over three hundred years ago, and as good as new. The contractors are dead.

STRAW BIDS.

The House recently passed a bill to check in some degree the notorious swindles in mail contracts, which have generally been perpetrated through the agency of straw bids; people began to congratulate themselves that now the professional harpies who gather in at every mail letting would have to go to stealing from each other, or from decent people and thus bring themselves within the purviews of the law like the common run or thieves—but people overlooked the fact that the Senate, the chief reliance of the thieves, yet had a say in the matter. That honorable body deliberately tinkered the straw bid clause out of existence, and the most flagrant thieving still goes bravely on. The Postmaster-General declares that the law gave him no power to choke off the cormorants, no matter how transparent the swindle, so long as certain formalities were complied with. It was to give him this power that this bill was framed by Congressman Luttrell, and spite of a powerful lobby influence in favor of the plunder ring, by him, mainly, forced through the House only to have its best feature destroyed at the last moment in the Senate.

The story of these unchecked mail contract swindles almost surpasses belief. One might think that our Government, "the best the world ever saw," was a veritable goose, born to be plucked, with neither the sense nor power to help itself. It can squawk and hiss, and occasionally frighten off the little thieves, and that is all; there is the more left for the big ones.

There is but one instance on record, so far as we know, where one of these thieving straw bids failed of its ultimate object except when two or more of the same kind came in conflict, which don't often happen, the ring conferences fixing those things in advance. This is one in which our own highly respected Josiah is presumed to be a party, and elsewhere referred to under the head of "Mail Contract Affirmed." Some think that accounts for Postmaster General Cresswell's sudden resignation. He didn't consider, till too late, the weight of Washington influence and wrath of the great Josiah and the ring of which the latter is a most humble member, so Cresswell, in fear of the wrath to come retired with precipitation, despite President Grant's saltiest tears. Grant was really sorry to lose his best Cabinet officer, but neither dared face the inevitable wrath to arise from that mistake, and which wrath could not be assauged short of $40 in cash and a retraction. If this don't account for that resignation then we have to attribute it to the action of the Senate in leaving him to still wrestle with the rascals unaided by any law to relieve him of more than a nominal responsibility for countenancing the most nefarious gouges, which, however patent, without such amendment to the postal law, he was left powerless to prevent.

Burnt Out.

We are in receipt of a small "Arizona Miner—Extra," giving this account of its late misfortune, for which it has our sympathy:

A little before noon to day, fire was discovered issuing out of the roof of Dan Hatz's immense wooden building, a little south of The Miner office. The fire soon leaped northward and blazed forth on the roof of The Miner office, which concern was only saved by the most daring deeds of Prescott's dauntless citizens, to whom the undersigned feels deeply indebted. Our loss is considerable, and it may be a month before we are able to issue a paper. But we shall try. It is only through the courtesy of the military authorities that we are enabled to issue this circular, as the old Miner office—presses, type, etc.—is damaged and "out of sorts."

Los Angeles News.

Late Los Angeles dates say: Capt. Clark, with Mr. Hibbie, Dr. Hays and several others making up a surveying party, have returned to the city from a trip to the El Paso Mining District. The object of the expedition was to survey some old silver mining claims which were worked a number of years ago and abandoned on account of the Indians becoming troublesome. Two ledges were surveyed—one the Mansello and the other the northeastern extension of the Ophir mine. In 1865 the men working these claims, under the ownership of the Yarborough Gold and Silver Mining Company, were driven off by the Indians and the Superintendent of the works killed. About $34,000 had been expended by the company on the mines, and 42 tons of ore were left on the dumps when abandoned. The miners were so closely pressed that they could not make their way out of the county by way of Los Angeles, but fled to Visalia. The El Paso regions lie south of Cerro Gordo, and on the line of the proposed line of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad. With increased facilities for working and excellent indications, there is little doubt but there is untold wealth in the El Paso mines. Capt. Clark has been instructed by the company, of which he is a member, to let the contracts at once for the working of the claims, and operations will doubtless be commenced upon them before long.

—Mr. Roderick shot Mr. Graves in Nashville last week because he would not pay Roderick his Dbn.

THE GAG LAW.

Senator Carpenter publishes a defense of the so-called "Carpenter gag-law." He says an accurate statement in regard to the matter will satisfy every journalist who respects truth, and will diminish the force of vituperation, uttered by those who do not. In a course of a review of the law and its several sections, the Senator writes: Why the general laws should not apply to the District of Columbia as well as to the Territories, is not perceived, or why any capitalist of New York or Boston, carrying on business by an agent in the district, should have greater objections to coming here for trial than to going to Idaho or Wyoming, is not very apparent, but the great objection is that it applies to publishers as well as merchants, mechanics, manufacturers and other business men. Now to this I reply that the bill has not special reference to publishers. It deals with all men alike, and they who make this objection ought to show on what ground publishers can claim exemption from a law which binds everybody else. They seem to think that they may be sued in Washington for libel. Well, why should they not be, if they commit injury by an agent? In this District the law of libel is no more unfavorable to the press than the statute against larceny is unfriendly to honest people. One perplexes thieves, the other bars, but neither is a terror to honest people and this bill is no more injurious to publishers than every law which looks to the impartial administraton of justice." He declares that all opposition to the bill was from Democrtic Senators, who were influenced by the fact that it would take away the opportunity for a Democratic press to malign the Republican party. He argues at length in favor of the justice of the provision, as applied to business men, and declares there is no reason for exempting newspapers from the same law.

St. Nicholas for July

Is unusually brilliant. There is a story by Bret Harte, about a wonderful little grizzly bear, in which the varied and curious fortunes of the animal "Baby Sylvester" by name, are told with all the author's accustomed quaintness and humor. "Baby" must have been a charming bear. "Your caressing hand," says the author, "sank away in his fur with dreamy langor. To look at him long was an intoxication of the senses; to pat him was a wild delirium; to embrace him, an utter demoralization of the intellectual faculties." The story is finely illustrated by Sheppard and James C. Beard, one of the engravings being a capital picture of the author disturbed in his sleep by the infant grizzly. William Cullen Bryant contributes a beautiful little poem from the Spanish, and there is a very well told story of the war of 1812, called "Rebecca, the Drummer," by Charles Barnard, which will stir up the patriotism in girls as well as boys. Then we have an article on "Fire Crackers and the Fourth of July," by Wm. C. Rideing, in which the mysterious inscriptions on packs of crackers are explained, and the whole subject of fireworks is discussed. This article is well illustrated, and the last picture, by Thomas Moran, shows a pack of fire crackers flashing and banging away as they will on the glorious Fourth. There is one of the favorite "Peterkin" sketches by Lucretia P. Hale, and L. G. Warner has a charming poem "Four Years Old," illustrated by eight of Miss Ledyard's pictures. There are also poems by Celia Thaxter, Elizabeth Akers Allen and others. Prof. Rattray contributes a useful article on the microscope, and Fanny Roper Feudge tells about some miniature vessels built by great men. That excellent story, "Nimpo's Troubles," comes to a conclusion; J. T. Trowbridge's "Fast Friends" have some interesting literary and mercantile experiences in New York, while the hero of "What Might Have Been Expected," Frank R. Stockton's story, becomes an involuntary sailor. "Jack-in-the Pulpit" is full of information, and "The Letter Box," evidently a great favorite with the boys and girls, is larger than usual this month. Of course the number is full of good pictures, and one article contains five "Magic Pictures," which are sure to create a sensation.

Progressing.

The narrow-gauge railroad from Palisade to Eureka is progressing at a rapid rate. The Eurekans are anxiously awaiting its completion, which will materially increase the supply of cheap fuel.

The New Coin.

The bill authorizing the issuance of twenty-cent silver pieces has become a law, and a very good one it is. It is Sargent's work principally.

—Richardson says that those Senators who oppose his comfirmation, are mad because he wouldn't put their photographs on the new fifty-cents stamp.

Theodore Tilton Rises to Explain

A New York dispatch, dated June 24, gives the following in relation to the Beecher-Tilton scandal:

Theodore Tilton publishes in The Golden Age this afternoon a seven-column article touching the Beecher scandal, and in defense of himself (Tilton) from the charges of Rev. Leonard Bacon, mediator of the late Brooklyn Council, that Tilton had been a cowardly slanderer, whose magnanimity alone saved him from disgraceful exposure. He says: "Having suffered in silence for four years from these and similar misrepresentations, adroitly put before the public by Plymouth Church, that neither patience nor delay will permit him to conceal the actual facts from the public." He then goes on to say that he has never slandered Beecher but, on the contrary, has sacrificed his own reputation to suppress the truth about him, and that he never has refused to appear before the church and answer all questions regarding the scandal that might be put to him. Tilton gives his reason for severing his connection with the church, as follows: "After I had been for fifteen years a member of Plymouth Church, and become meanwhile an intimate friend of the pastor, knowledge came to me in 1870 that he had committed against me an offense which I forbear to name or characterize. Prompted by my self respect, I immediately and forever ceased my attendance on his ministry." He publishes the following as an extract from a document signed by Beecher:

BROOKLYN, January 1, 1871.

I ask Theodore Tilton's forgiveness, and humble myself before him as I am before my God. He would have been a better man in my circumstances than I have been. I can ask nothing, except that he will remember all the other breasts that would ache. I will not plead for myself—even wish that I were dead.

(Signed) H. W. BEECHER.

Foreign News.

Turkey and Persia are at a serious and warlike misunderstanding.

Cologne, Treves and Posen are represented at the Fulda Catholic Council by deputies, the Bishops of those sees being now in German prisons for the violation of the civil law.

Prof. Greist, of Berlin, is coming to the United States for the purpose of compiling a complete history of the Constitution of the United States.

Estella has been surrounded by intrenched lines—one of them fifteen miles from the city—by the Carlists.

Another Carlist success is telegrahed from the north of Spain.

It is proposed to make Serrano Consul of Spain for five years, on condition that he appoint his ministry from the coalition.

It is said that a movement has been put afloat to force the present eccentric King of Bavaria to abdicate, so that a King more subservient to centralization may be enthroned.

Benefactors.

It is now settled that Senator Pendegast is not the author of the Local Option Law. It is said that the real authors of the original draft of the bill, were Judge Lamar and R. McGarvey of Ukiah City, Mendocino county. Mr Pendegast introduced the bill at their request. He should not have denied being the author, or one of the authors, of Local Option. Their names will go down to posterity as benefactors of mankind. Their worth will be more fully appreciated when we mention the fact that this is our "off year" in politics, and to pass a season without an election is almost unbearable with the people of California. It has been as a special dispensation (and compensation) in favor of newspaper men—giving them something to write about and election proclamations to publish, and the people an opportunity to pay for it all. By Local Option our State is kept at fever heat, therefore beneficial Local Option is the thing for our "off year."—Bakersfield Californian.

Congress adjourned sine die June 22.

The State Normal School opened with 165 students, and will be increased to about 225.

Some of the citizens of San Buenaventura desire to change the name of the town to Ventura, which would be a very sensible thing to do.

Sargent and Jones voted to confirm Boss Shepherd in the management of Washington City affairs. Fetch up the next thief and crown him likewise.

A festival was being held in a church in Syracuse, New York, June 22, when the building fell, killing and wounding a large number of persons. Sixteen dead bodies were taken from the ruins on the following morning.

Los Angeles is to have another military company.

A Montana Grand Jury has declared the work of the Surveyor General and his deputies in that Territory a nuisance.

The Oregon Legislature.

The next Oregon Legislature, as near as can be ascertained from the returns so far received, will be about thus: Senate—Republicans, 11; Democrats, 9; Independents, 10. House—Republicans, 16; Democrats, 22; Independents, 22. The entire Democratic State ticket was elected with the exception of Superintendent of Public Instruction, who is a Republican.

Quartz Mill for Belmont.

All the framework for a large 20-stamp quartz mill is now being constructed at the lumber yard of the Truckee Lumber Company. The mill is for the Prussian Gold and Silver Mining Company, at Belmont, Nevada. Mr. Keys is the builder. The timbers, when properly mortised and prepared for the framework, will be shipped to Wadsworth by railroad and from thence to Belmont by teams.—Truckee Republican.

What "Snob" Says About Benton

BENTON, July 2, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: We are again the recipient of your valuable little paper, which is always instructive and entertaining, and never fails to speak a good word for its neighbors, or not speak at all.

BENTON AND VICINITY

is gradually improving. One dwelling and a bath house is being constructed, the latter of which is highly necessary, and if this little enterprise is patronized more and the "rum-gums" less, we opine that mortality report of Benton will be very small.

MILL MATTERS.

The new mill is completed, and commenced operations a few days ago. Mr. A. B. Williams, the proprietor, is a practical millman, and is no doubt aware of what he is doing. He has previously shipped his ore to Reno and Columbus for reduction, and if it will not pay to work the same ore here at Benton we will believe that "there is a hole in the settler."

Mr. Wetherill's mill, which is situated about 14 miles northeast of this place, has been running some time on low grade ore, but is now working ore that will mill from $250 to $350 per ton.

Mr. Aaron, of Montgomery Canyon, intends to start his mill soon, and judging from the present appearance the shipment of bullion from Benton this year will exceed that of last by at least $100,000.

Albert Mack has just arrived from the East hale and hearty as could be expected, and, we believe, received a unanimous welcome.

GRAND BALL.

We anticipate having a good time at the ball, which is to explode at "Pap" Kelty's on the evening of the 3d of this month. Bridgeport, Columbus and Bishop Creek have each promised us a delegation to attend the above mentioned explosion, and we are quite sure that Bishop Creek will turn out as respectable and a delegation (especially of ladies) as the sage brush country can afford.

Mr. Thomas Edwards' little boy died on Monday last about 2 P. M., and was buried on Tuesday about 3 P. M. The nature of its case is not known, for the child never enjoyed good health.

SNOB.

How It Was Done.

When enough was known of the returns from the Oregon election to determine the result, it was charged that the Democrats had proved faithless to the bargain between them and the Republicans, whereby the offices were to be divided between the two, and thus secure the certain discomfiture of the Independents. The official returns fully confirm the charge. Democratic treachery was too much for Republican credulity. The returns show that the Republicans in good measure kept their part of the bargain by voting for the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, expecting the Democrats to help them elect Williams to Congress, but they leaned on a broken reed. The Democrats stood by their nominees and swept the whole State. The Independents were last in the race.—S. F. Sun.

BELL'S MILL.

AS THE HARVEST IS NOW APPROACHING I earnestly ask the farmers to look well to the cleaning of their wheat, especially to keeping it

Clear of Sand and Gravel,

as it is impossible to clean it out by any machinery that has ever been invented, and I cannot make good flour out of wheat that has sand and gravel in it

Having clothed my bolt reel with a

Mail Contract Affirmed.

A few days since M. S. Clark received notice from the Department that the mail contract between this place and Lida had been awarded to him. It will be remembered that this same award was announced with others at the time of the general letting, but was subsequently rescinded in favor of a straw bid by one J. Blackmore, alias our own Josiah. This straw bid was for $1,550, $100 less than Clark's, the lowest legitimate bidder. It seems that Mr. Blackmore's bid had, at the time of the first examination and announcement of awards, got down in the corner of the box out of sight some way, and never would have been heard of more but for our Master Granger's good feeling toward Mr. Blackmore and his extensive personal influence in Washington—we say "personal influence" advisedly, because in those days this good man was not a Granger, and scorned the help of railroad people and grasping monopolies of all kind—even unto the land grabbers—which is how he since came to be a Granger and to take up the farmers' fights against those institutions and the storekeepers and the money changers and middle-men of all sorts. He used his personal influence—which, as he says himself, equals that of the combined petitioners of Inyo county, hospital paupers included—and the next thing we hear Mr. Blackmore gets the award. So confidant was this philanthropical Granger that Mr. Blackmore was all right and needed a good business agent, he proceeded at once to sub let the contract, say at $1,280 per annum, McNab to hold himself ready to start at a moment's warning, so as not to keep the United States mails waiting, you know. We don't know whether Mac has sold his new wagon or not. But as soon as Postmaster-General Cresswell found out his own error as to the proper identity of Mr. Blackmore, or rather as to the party who was eventually to take his place by default, he saw that it was all day with him as soon as Darrah & Co. in Inyo could be heard from so he went right away out of the Cabinet. Grant fell to weeping (on account of his Boss Sheppard defeat), and—Clark puts the wagons on in August. How it was done, and who vouched for Blackmore's sureties, we leave for another time.

Completed.

The toll road through the canyon into Panamint is now completed, and is said to be a good one. Its owners are Samuel Tait, D. W. Fellows, John Burchatt, Barton McGee and W. Y. Dameron. These men deserve a fortune for their pluck and energy displayed in this undertaking, which was begun at a time when there were but few persons in the camp to be benefitted, and but few anywhere that even knew where Panamint was. It involved a great amount of heavy work, most of which the owners, with the limited means at their disposal, had to do with their own hands. They have completed the work, save additional improvements constantly being made, in a remarkably short space of time. The rates of toll are in part as follows: Wagon and 2 animals $2; each additional horse 50 cents; horseman 25 cents; unloaded teams either way, half price.

Bishop Creek.

A Bishop Creek correspondent says: I am happy to report that our very destructive visitants, the army worms, have "ordered an armistice," have ceased depredations. Much of the corn that was supposed ruined is coming out fairly. Many have replanted. Potatoes and other vegetables are some injured... I heard that about the 3d instant frost killed many of the vegetables in Round Valley....The members of Oasis Lodge, I.O. G. T., are distributing a plentiful supply of able publications in favor of "No License" and the temperance cause, preparatory to meeting the question rightly at a future election.

A Benedict Sure Enough.

The event of the week was the marriage of B. L. Brown, whom everybody knows, to Miss Annie Wallace, which took place on Monday evening. The bride was the most finely arrayed and as fine-looking as any we have seen for many a day, while B. L. himself both looked and felt grand. The ceremony was brief, after which came the greatest abundance of cake, wine and sociability, enough to make any newly married couple feel proud. N. Rhine in toasting the happy pair gave some good general and special advice, both witty and good, the which we endorse but can't now repeat.

Benton.

A Benton friend writing under date of June 29, gives us the following items from his locality: Williams' mill has run steady to-day, everything working to a charm....A Mack, wife and niece arrived last night from the East looking hearty....E. C. Kelty's new building is receiving its finishing touches. All comers can now find ample accommodations in the shape of good rooms and board. He will give a supper and dance on Friday evening, July 3. He invites everybody to attend.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow at 7:30 P. M.

Panamint.

The prospects for a great future for this camp seem to be as well assured as it is possible for ledges of monstrous size and wonderful richness to insure such a result; it is only a question of time, and very brief at that, unless some unforeseen or unusual difficulties should be encountered when it comes to reducing the ores on a scale commensurate with the size and number of the ledges now exposed. But the best informed and those most interested have have no fears whatever on this head; the ores are of the same character as those of Benton, which by mill process, are being worked all the time with splendid results. Quantities of those from Panamint are being packed to Cerro Gordo and put through the furnaces, yielding magnificently by that process. The machinery for the Jacobs mill is now at Los Angeles, and will be in camp in a few days. By the time this is ready to steam up another of four times its capacity will be well under way. The latter belongs to the Panamint Mining Co., in which Senator J. P. Jones is largely interested. These a success and scores more will follow, because the ores are there to supply them and there is an abundance of fuel and water and trees suitable for mining timbers. But passing the mines and mills for the present, we will refer to other matters of interest to travelers. Elsewhere will be found a statement of distances. The grade across Slate Range is now completed; it was for this Mr. Kennedy asked and received Los Angeles aid. The toll road is also finished; Mr. Reddy, just returned, took the first buggy, and the second vehicle of any kind, over it. There are no hotels, saloons, stores or stables or similar accommodations for man or beast, except for the latter, an abundance of bunch grass, and six miles distant a horse ranch; for the former a big tent known as the Hotel de Bum, having a good cook, plenty of grub and welcome for the stranger, no charges or known owner unless it is E. P. Rains, now absent; plenty of material for stockade houses, but no lumber obtainable except imported, costing about $120 per M.; beef market well supplied; population rapidly increasing; something over a hundred there now.

Is Happy.

That surprisingly good man, Register Earl, is as easily made happy as Mark Tapley. See his notice of patents he is happy to offer for delivery. It is real good of him to be willing to give them up without any fee. Many of these are Agricultural Scrip locations, the which have given him much discomfort, as in his wisdom and knowledge of the land laws, he was sure they wouldn't be allowed at all; were only a bit of a grab game inaugurated by his predecessor for his own benefit in a small percentage of profit to himself, but loss to the locaters thus misused, and on whose account Register Earl's benevolent spirit has grieved extensively; but seeing his error on this point he takes renewed comfort and is happy. He finds still further provocation to this Tapley kind of happiness in the knowledge that he is able to present U. S. patents on some of these identical lands, in lieu of the State patents, which, a few months since, he was persuaded would be decidedly preferable. The Legislature took some pains to point out the error of his first conclusions on this point, and seeing these also, the good man's happiness is still further enlarged. On page 37, Report of Investigating Committee, Mr. Hardenberg was asked: "Then what is your opinion as to the result in case you had made this appointment [of surveyor] for Mr. Earl?" to which he answered: "It would have ousted the settlers and they would have had NO REDRESS," which danger being happily brought to our public spirited fellow citizen's attention in time gave grounds for his present serene degree of happiness.

Independence Grange.

Following is the list of officers and members of the above Grange, organized June 23: Master, J. Earl ["wait till I faint"]; Overseer, J. Shepherd; Lecturer, J. W. Symmes; Chaplain, A. Wayland; Steward, D. D. Gunnison; Assistant Steward, M. Garretson; Treasurer, J. Vagt; Secretary, J. B. White; Gate Keeper; J. W. Martin; Pomona, Mrs. M. Shepherd; Flora, Mrs. K. Gunnison; Ceres, Mrs. H. N. Vagt. Members: C. A. Walters, B. Aguerre, F. Schabbell, E. Chaquette, Owen Murphy, Jas. Malone, John Baxter, Lewis McClure, Chas. Kanady, M. M. Boyd, S. A. Dunsmore. Lady members: Mrs. E. Chaquette, Mrs. A. S. Earl, Mrs. L. Walters, Mrs. R. Schabbell, Miss L. Wayland.

The Comet.

This new visitor from illimitable space is beginning to attract some attention, it being now quite visible to the naked eye. At 9 P. M. it is found under the Great Dipper and the North Star, the three being about equi-distant and forming almost a perfect triangle. It nucleus is now as bright as the north star, its tail being quite thin and vapory. It will, according to Prof. L. Smith, reach its perigree, or nearest point to the earth, about the 1st of August. In a few weeks it will make a grand display. We don't know whether this is one of Mother Earth's old acquaintances or an entire stranger, without name or pedigree.

Bullion.

Since January last 65,000 bars of bullion have been shipped on teams from Cartago. The teams take 400 bars every day, which is about the number turned out by the two Cerro Gordo furnaces. There are now 5,000 bars on hands.

Still Sick.

At last accounts Major Egbert was still in San Francisco and confined to his bed with sickness. He had suffered a severe relapse.

The Searles Borax Works, Etc.

From P. Reddy, Esq., we have the following:. Messrs. Searles & Co. have now about two miles of pipe laid through which water is conveyed from Providential Springs. This is a very great convenience to travelers, to whom the water is free; the pipes are to be extended five miles further to supply the station and the borax works at the lake, the objective point. The new borax works are now almost ready for work, their capacity being greatly increased. The daily product of the merchantable article will be about six tons. The Searles brothers and their partners are the most hospitable men in the country. They do not keep a station for the accomodation of the public, that being out of their line and desires, yet they will turn themselves out of their own beds to accommodate the weary traveler, none of whom are ever turned away. John Searles is one of the remarkable men of the coast. For daring and courage, if not for a wandering spirit, he is the equal of the famous Kit Carson or any other pioneer and Indian fighter. At one time he, armed with a Henry rifle and accompanied by but one man, followed a band of Indians, who had driven away his stock, away out east of the Panamint range, and not only recovered his stock, but single-handed cleaned out the entire gang, killing four outright and wounding and driving off several others, notwithstanding they had been "laying" for him. It was him, also, a few years since, who fought a grizzly hand to paw, and "slewed" him too, though he himself was most terribly mangled and used up. These are but bare references to two of a number of similar adventures worthy to take rank with the best of those of the most noted pioneer heroes. These are the men, also, who for six years run the Slate Range quartz mill, near where they now are, all the time using sage brush for fuel, and yet at fair profit to themselves, only finally to have their property destroyed by the Indians during their temporary absence. But, for thirteen years they have fought it out on their present line and locality, and are deserving a fortune, which in their present undertaking seems to be well assured.

Should be Done.

It is to be hoped the Board of Supervisors at their next session will do all they consistently can towards assisting in building the road from Passmore's, via Darvin Canyon, into Panamint. The expenditure required will be but small, there being only about 300 yards (through the canyon) where any work of any material cost has to be done. Panamint is in this county, and though we may not expect but a portion of its business benefits as from others more advantageously located, yet it must inevitably soon be a place of great importance, and will always furnish business of general benefit to the whole county well worth this trifling effort to secure. This proposed road will materially shorten the distance, as compared with the present traveled route. Now, the road is from Passmore's to Indian Wells, 52 miles; thence to Searles' borax works and station, 35, from which to Panamint is 40 miles further; in all 127 miles, while the proposed route is about 50 miles shorter. To say nothing about Panamint as a market for farm produce, such as hay and vegetables, all of which can probably be taken over the shorter road at a profit, the difference in the cost of mileage to officers, jurors, etc., will soon compensate the outlay, if it is no greater than we anticipate. Besides this we need a mail route over this route.

The Assessment.

Assessor Dillon has just finished his work of preparing the Assessment Roll for the present year. It foots up to the nice sum of $1,447,215; which, contrary to general expectation, is some thousands in excess of the roll of last year. There was a material falling off in the live stock assessment, but which was compensated in other property, principally in solvent debts and mines assessable this year. Panamint also figures in this return for the first time. Assessor Dillon and his deputies are entitled to credit for their thorough work, growl as people may.

Ready for Business.

Mr. A. N. Bell again gives notice that his mill is now ready for business, being thoroughly refitted and prepared to do as good work as can be done anywhere. The attention of farmers is called especially to what he has to say in reference to keeping their wheat clear of sand, which ruins the flour spite of any machinery yet invented.

Not Much Business.

It does not appear that Judge Hannah will have much business to occupy his attention at this term of Court, beginning on Monday. There are no civil cases on the docket, and but one person under charges awaiting the action of the Grand Jury, but that honorable body may find plenty for the Court to attend to.

Celebrations.

Both Bishop Creek and Lone Pine expect to celebrate this day in true Fourth of July style—reading Declaration, oration, procession (at Lone Pine) and grand balls. Here we are content to have the latter alone.

Waked 'Em Up.

Capt. Parker's anvil brigade, under the immediate command of Leftenant Matlack, opened fire at an early hour this morning, and with splendid effect, as many drowsy individuals can testify.

—A bit of orange peel sat a good Iowa deacon flat on his back while passing the contribution box. Orange peel is very popular there now.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celebrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

—"Wedding presents to hire," is a St. Louis advertisement.

—A Boston clergymen defines hell as "a place of eternal uneasiness."

—"He fell dead and expired in two minutes," says a Georgia paper on the death of a negro.

—A Chicago paper touchingly alluded to a man who was "killed and otherwise injured."

—At Buda, Ill., twenty-two persons were recently poisoned by eating cake at a Sunday-School pic-nic.

"Kissing your sweetheart," says a trifling young man, "is like eating soup with a fork; it takes a long time to get enough."

—A New York banker has a new set of china containing 1,100 pieces of fifty differemt shades. His table will have a kaleidoscopic aspect.

—A Baltimore bride, according to a reporter, wore calla lilies in her hair. Seven calla lilies in a neat cluster on the top of a lady's head would look well.

—Quiz believes in cremation for the benefit of the soap trade. He knows lots of people whose ashes would make splendid lye.

—The Senate Public Lands Committee, by a vote of five against four, decided to recommend that Pratt's mining patent bill be indefinitely postponed.

—A hunting party in Southern Utah has discovered the remains of five white persons in a cave near Parowan. No clue to the mystery was obtained.

—The Sacramento Record says the total number of emigrants that have arrived in this State since the 1st of April has been ten thousand.

—An amatuer farmer wonders, "why on all this fair earth the ground is spread bottom side up, so that it must be turned over with a plow before crops can be raised."

—Capt. Steve, the noted Piute warrior, says The Austin Reveille, has weakened on prognosticating abont the weather. He says: "Mebbe so no snow six seven months; mebbe so two three days heap dam hot. Injun heap no savy."

—It is a beautiful sight to attend an Arizona wedding. The bride in white, the happy groom, the solemn minister, the smiling parents and from twenty-five to forty shot-guns standing against the wall ready for use, make up a panorama not soon forgotten.

—The Los Angeles Express says: A quantity of water in casks is at the depot for shipment to San Francisco. It was taken from Owens Lake, and is so highly impregnated with alkalies and borax that it is believed successful experiments can be made with it in cleansing wools.

—Three little New Hampshire girls, not long since, lost their mother by death. Hearing that a lady friend of the family was dying, these three little children went to their grandmother, called her aside and whispered in her ear, "Mrs. ——is dying, and we want you to go to her and tell her to give our best love to our mother."

LITERARY.

Prospectus for 1874—Seventh Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of the THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centers of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality, with greater facility for production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art culture in America, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any decent representations of the productions of great painters.

In addition to designs by members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the refining influences of true art.

The quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thos. Moran and J.D. Woodward.

The Christmas isue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will supass in attraction any of its predecessors.

PREMIUMS FOR 1874.

Every subscriber o THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1874, will receive pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thos. Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives the Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory. The differences in the nature of the scenes themselves is a pleasing contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's scope and coloring. The chromos are each worked from thirty distinct plates, and are in size (12x16) and appearance exact facsimiles of the originals. The presentation of a worty example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold but peculiarly happy idea, and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonia over the signature of Mr. Moran himself.

NEWARK N. J., Sept. 20, 1874.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & Co.,

Gentleman—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos. They are wonderfully successful representation by mechanical process of the original paintings. Very respectfully

(Signed,) THOS. MORAN.

These chromos are in every sense American They are by an origina Amerian process, with material of American manufacture, from designs of American scenery by an American painter, and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journl. If no better because of all this they will cerainly possess an interest no foreign production an inspire, and neither are they any worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons of taste will prize these pictures for themselves—not for the price they did or did not cost, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free at New York Office. For 50 cents extra the chromos will be sent mounted, varnished and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscription must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTON & Co.

AGENTS WANTED.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, } County of Inyo. } ss.

On the Ninth day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, before me, Daniel P. Macarter, a Notary Public in and for the said County of Inyo, residing therein, duly commissioned and sworn, personally appeared Victor Hoff and Elias Peiser, known to me to be the persons described in, whose names are subscribed to and who executed the within instrument, and they each and severally duly acknowledged to me that they executed the same.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal at my office in the said County of Inyo the day and year first above written.

Ten Thousand Feet Above the Level of the Sea.

[From The Belmont Courier, June 27.]

The altitude of Belmont, Nevada, is 8,400 feet above the level of the sea, being 2,000 feet higher than the city of Austin. Twelve or fifteen miles north of Belmont is a high mountain, the altitude of which is estimated at 11,000 feet, and at the base of which are located those flourishing rich mines known as the Jefferson mines, so recently discovered, and upon which work is now being vigorously prosecuted.

One thousand feet from the top of Mount Jefferson, and 10,000 feet above the sea, is a plateau or piece of table land, from which a bird's eye view can be had of the thriving little town of Belmont, with its mines, mills and hoisting works; and beyond, as far as the eye can reach, to the south, east and west, is a vast expanse of mineral wealth that lies slumbering, as it were, in rocky beds that line range after range of mountains, stretching far to the southward in sinuous indulating lines, until lost in the dimness of space.

What would our friends that live down by the tidal waves think and say could they look directly up overhead to a given point a mile and a half or two miles into the sky, and tell them that there, on a level with that point, 500 miles eastward, was Belmont, Nevada, and many other towns that are more than a mile above them?

In most of the larger valleys water is found in abundance flowing from the mountain sides; arable land suitable for the agriculturalists and grass for graziers is plentiful. Here, as civilization advances into the interior, farms and stock ranches are located in the valleys and canyons and wood ranches in the mountains. Salt marshes exist in many places, from which large quantities of salt are gathered to be used in the extraction of ores in the mills and furnaces. Borax mines are also found, besides copper, lead and iron. Notwithstanding the bleak and barren aspect which the country first presents to the beholder when traveling over the alkali flats and through the rocky canyons, Providence seems to have ordained that it shall not be the least valued in point of wealth and natural resources, having so arranged and adapted the products of the country as to produce in one place what it lacks in another toward supplying the wants of the hardy pioneers, upon whose shoulders devolves the arduous task of unearthing and bringing to light those precious metals that are so quickly changed into that circulating medium so much coveted by the outside world, and which so naturally finds it way into the coffers of the monopolist.

One of the many features of this country is that here and there, covering an area of hundreds of miles, can be seen those high peaks and mountains towering up above the rest like sentinels, as it were, guarding hidden treasures that lie beneath, and protect those that are folded in their rocky embrace. It is a noticeable fact that wherever these large peaks or mountains are found, so also is silver ore, in more or less quantities, and some proving very rich; and yet it is not to be argued that all the silver lodes exist near these places, for many ledges of silver-bearing quartz have been discovered in lower ranges of mountains that have proven quite rich; but we may very well believe that these high points only serve as outposts, showing, in their silent way, the boundaries of mineral belts; and it is to these landmarks that the prospector directs his course, when visions of grander discoveries to be made in other localities persuades him to shoulder his pick and shovel and travel.

It is very evident that at some anterior date, probably centuries ago, this whole country comprising the Pacific slope has been thrown into terrible convulsions, at different times, by the natural workings of the internal fires and gases which exist in all mineral countries; consequently there was bound to be more or less of the mineral quartz left uncovered on and around the highest peaks. This, then, is undoubtedly the reason why float rock and ledges happen to be the first discovered in and around these places.

That the entire southwestern portion of Nevada is equally as rich in mineral resources as the rest of the State there can be no doubt. Does not the finger of destiny point in this direction, indicating that it will not be many years before this section will be teeming with life and activity from the overflowed population of the Eastern States and Europe, who are forced to leave their fatherland and seek a foothold and home in the far West! Ledges now unthought of will be discovered, towns and cities will spring up, year after year, as the magic wand of industry and enterprise waves over the land in its onward course. Even now many old districts that were discovered several years ago and neglected or abandoned on account of richer fields, are beginning to attract renewed attention from capital, which, through hard experience, is discovering new characteristics in those long neglected ores that promise safer investments, with greater percentages on the money invested, than can be found in the older localities. And so it will be as the age of science and metallurgy advances. In order to show what sudden transitions are liable to to take place in localities, we will take the mines of Eureka District for example: A few years ago these mines were discovered, and work was done on a great many, but all seemingly to no purpose, and finally the original locators had to abandon them, discouraged and disheartened at their failure. But now, presto! look at the change. Those same mines are worth their millions, and a city has risen second to none but one in the State. But will this story of wondrous enchantments end here? May not Morey, Hot Creek, Reveille, Ione, San Antonio, Ellsworth and Twin River Districts do likewise when their turn comes in the dim future? Austin still asserts her mining dignity in the catalogue of mines, although she has been frequently down to the bed-rock during the last ten years; but, like a cork in the water, she will come up again and swim on top. Tybo is just beginning to make itself heard through a silver trumpet, to let us know that it is sleeping no more. The mines of Jefferson, Spanish Belt and Belmont speak for themselves every day. Alida Valley and Gold Mountain, slumbering so long near the shades of Death Valley, far to the south of here, have tumbled out of their cradles at last, and though still in infancy, have shown a decided inclination to walk in the silvery girdle; and now, as Gen. Page has extended a helping hand, we may soon hear favorable news from that remote district. Montezuma, Silver Peak, Cerro Gordo and Columbus are still on picket duty, awaiting the vanguard of progress to come up and reward them for their long and faithful watching.

The People Corrupt as Well as the Tweeds.

In expounding the Bible injunction to "judge not," recently, Mr. Beecher deplored what he called a tendency to indiscriminately criticise public men. His reason for this view was that those in official positions generally represent the average moral status of those who put them there, and if they prove recreant to their trusts it is mainly the fault of wrong precedent and training. Mr. Beecher said that for twenty-eight years he had watched the drift of politics in New York City, and had seen the system of municipal government utterly subverted. Men were put into office not to serve the public, but to openly further personal interests. At last the evil culminated and a scapegoat was sent to Blackwell's Island, bearing the sins of years of corruption. If entire justice had been done, 500,000 people, who had helped Tweed in his crimes, would have been sent to the penitentiary with him. Men are sent to Congress by some rich railroad or other interest, and in the service of their masters they practice bribery and corruption. Finally, a member greater than the others of his kind, goes further in crime, is caught and exposed and shot out to the four corners of the world from the cannon of an investigating committee. He suffered from a system which he was not responsible for, but which was responsible for him. The people had been the alphabet, and he the only word which they had they had spelled.

Improved Hog Trap.

This invention has for its object to furnish an improved device for catching hogs and holding them securely while being ringed, marked, etc. The hog, in seeking to escape through a gap in the top, steps upon a tilted board, the tilting of which pitches him forward so that his neck may be between levers. The levers, by suitable mechanism, then close and clasp the hog around his neck, and around his body in the rear of his fore-legs, where he may be held securely by hooking the straps upon pins.

An Interesting Discovery.

[From The S. F. Bulletin.]

Several weeks ago we mentioned the departure of Mr. Arthur Robottom on a search for borax in the southern part of the State. He has now returned, and brings news of an interesting and valuable discovery. Beyond the Sierra Nevada, in the Enclosed Basin of North America, about 140 miles in a northwestard direction from Bakersfield, there is a bed of a dry lake filled over an area of fifteen miles long by six wide, with saline crystals to the depth of six or eight feet. The appearance of the surrounding country clearly indicates that water once stood sixty feet here over a large area, the ancient beach being distinctly traceable. The most remarkable fact about this saline deposit is that in its middle there is a tract of five miles long and two wide of common salt, while on the outside there is a deposit of borate of soda three feet thick, and under this is a lower stratum composed of sulphate of soda and tincal mixed together from one foot to three feet thick. These minerals are all in crystals, the sulphate of soda and tincal forming a solid mass, almost like stone in its hardness. The borate of soda is of a dirty hue, but the salt, which lies above the level of the entire deposit, in some places, to the depth of seven feet, is white as snow.

The report of natural deposits thus situated will appear very improbabe to scientific men, for there is nothing to account for the separation of the salt from the borates, or for the accumulation of salt above the level of other crystaline deposits. We have Mr. Robottom for authority, and the country is open to those who wish to examine it for themselves. The place can easily be found. It is known as the Borax Fields in the Slate Range, and will be examined carefully by many competent men, since the tincal—a crude borate of soda—is a valuable mineral, and can be separated at little expense from the sulphate of soda. Mr. Robottom brought samples of the minerals along, and has shipped some of the tincal to England, believing that it can be obtained at less price than from Thibet, of equal quality. It is the most valuable borate mineral yet found on our coast, preferable for shipment to any of the borates obtained in Nevada, where the deposits are mainly bonates of lime and soda. The Californian tincal can probably be used without refining, for glazing fine pottery, and, if so, may drive the Thibetan tincal out of the market. Other shipments of it have also been made by others. Only time can determine which of California, Nevada, Thibet, Tuscany, Peru and Chile—the principal producers of brax—can undersell the other. Tinca has not yet been found in Nevada, but it probably exists in several of the dry lake beds in the southeastern pat of the State. The deposits of lime and the borate of soda are numerous.

Mathematical Problem.

A gentleman yesterday handed u the following problem, and though seeing at first glance to be quite simple our readers will find the correct solutin to be far more difficult than they imgine. It as follows: Two men purchase 100 acres of land in company for $100, each paying an equal share of the purhase money; they afterward wish to dvide the land, and, on inspection, it is found that one part is worth 50 cents per acre more than the other, and they agree to divide the land so that one's land shall be worth 50 cents per acre more than the other's. How much land will each have after divisio so that each shall have $50 worth and the part that one has be worth 50 cents per acre more than the other, and 100 acres to be total.—Eureka Sentinel.

Beecher and Tilton.

This lamentable scandal continues to attract a great deal of remark, but there are no new developments, unless it is the shallow, and wicked, excuses set up by some of the leading religious and secular papers and persons for the great preacher's great crime against morals—and decency, if a distinction may be drawn. For instance, it is an extenuation sufficient for such a really great and useful man, that unfortunately in his youthful days he married a Hannah Jane, and in his later days his mental and physical strength demanded a more equal companionship, and this he might seek and secure among the silky lambs of his beloved flock; but if some undeceived husband demurred ever so mildly at that sort of Brighamage wasn't he a liar and a scoundrel for telling people he didn't think it was just the way to carry on church matters? Of course he was. In effect, these apologists for sin maintain that their pastor must avail himself of every opportunity to sustain his powers so as to successfully wrestle with the devil, and to that end what is the blackest of crimes in a poor preacher is to a great one an excusable necessity; anyhow, because of his immense wrestling abilities he must not be dragged from his high pedestal though he casts a polluting shadow over the whole moral world! These apologists are meaner than Beecher, though he were proven guilty, as he is not; and we sincerely hope his innocence may be unequivocably established for his own and the christian world's sake.

The Central Pacific.

It appears to be settled now that Charles Crocker is to succeed Stanford as President of the Central Pacific Corporation. Then the railroad company is to drop politics, turn over a new leaf in the general management and devote its means and energies to legitimate railroading. The proposition is to extend the road 30 miles south from Bakersfield in order to control the Inyo freight and passenger traffic and choke off the L. A. & I. road—this last a consummation equivalent to a lasting misfortune to both Inyo and Los Angeles, since, to the former it means high freights always, to the latter a fatal diminishment or total extinguishment of all its back country resources. There is no room for a shadow of doubt on either proposition.

A Grand Enterprise.

It is settled now that San Francisco is to have by far the largest, strongest and most magnificent hotel in the United States if not in the world. It is to be called the "Palace Hotel," and will occupy the ground bounded by New Montgomery, Market, Annie and Jessie streets, covering an area of 96,250 feet, very nearly double that of the Grand Pacific at Chicago, the present largest hotel in the United States There are to be 700 rooms in the house, scarcely one less than 20 feet square, with one 150x55, and the greater number 40x40 and larger. It is to cost $2,700,000—more than a first class railroad from here to Los Angeles!! W. C. Ralston and Sharon are the owners.

Cachise Dead.

This noted old Apache chief died June 8. His entire command has always been much less than was supposed, at no time numbering over 300 warriors; but no equal number ever murdered more whites. Cachise, however, with his dying breath enjoined upon his little band, now not exceeding 75 warriors, always to be friends to the whites, and especially to obey Agent Jefferds, who is their friend. Cachise's oldest son was elected Chief.

'Tis Well.

D. W. Voorhees positively declines to be a candidate for Congress, saying, "I could not accept the position, even if I were elected and a commission tendered me without any effort or agency on my part." It is just as well. When men like Voorhees drop out of politics there will be an end to old and injurious prejudices.

Played Out.

At one time it looked as though the Protestant missionaries who were sent to Spain were going to secure a foothold; but the Government tide has recently set strong against them. At Saville the Protestants secured a church, but the Mayor forbid the opening of it for worship.

DULL TIMES AND THE REMEDY.

We believe it is an acknowledged fact that times in Inyo just now are as dull or duller than they have been for years. Outside of Cerro Gordo nothing is going on calculated to cause any material or immediate improvement. Yet, in some very important respects, the future outlook for the county was never more encouraging. From various localities come well authenticated accounts of splendid mining discoveries; it is proved beyond shadow of a reasonable doubt that we have an extent of mineral wealth here to support ten, aye twenty times our present population. One can scarcely go amiss for mines of various minerals, all of which, under favorable circumstances, could and would be worked to fair profit. Many are very rich and very large, large enough and rich enough to justify the attention of heavy companies. Still a greater number are none the less rich, but too small of themselves to attract heavy companies, but amply sufficient for that of individual miners. These some day will be counted by the thousand, and the heavy companies by the scores. The Inyo range for a hundred miles or more in length is literally seamed, every mile, with rich veins of gold and silver quartz and lead. It is not only a district here and there, but all along. But with the exception of Cerro Gordo, all this mountain of wealth lies securely locked. What matters it if prospectors here and there and all along, open big ledges and expose vast bodies of ore of great value? Under present circumstances it is not available. It cannot be made available without capital, a thing these prospectors do not possess, nor perhaps ever can command until something is done to practically bring their ledges nearer the commercial center of the coast.

There is but one way, and only one, to do this, but one thing to give the least hope of any material improvement in times; dull they are and dull they will remain, until the railroad—nothing else will do it—gives everything a new impetus. That will do it; that will give every mineral bearing vein in the county a tangible value. Capitalists will then come and see for themselves, and gladly take hold in hundreds of instances, where now they cannot possibly be induced to do one thing or the other. They argue fairly enough that it is an idle investment to attempt to work any mine, however enticing in size and richness, when situated hundred of miles inland, when the transportation of its supplies and products must necessarily come so high as to leave but a small margin or no margin at all for profits. They say, "You have plenty of big mines, rich mines worth millions, if their wealth was available; but they are too far away, we can't spare time even to go and see them, much less to pay a large price, or any price at all, for them until they are brought nearer to us. With cheap freights and quick means of travel at hand, we could afford to and would give thousands to develop and work these mines, when as it is we cannot and will not invest a cent."

These are almost the identical words used by the wealthy men of San Francisco and New York who, by various means, are quite well informed as to the intrinsic value of Inyo as a mining region. While acknowledging this value, and even placing it higher than almost any other on the coast, they shake their heads and hang back because dearly bought experience has satisfied them that a very few dollars extra cost per ton in reducing ores and freighting bullion is sufficient either to gain or lose a fortune. If freights are reduced one-half or more, as they can only be through a railroad, then the margin for profits is enhanced just that much. Supposing the cost now to be equal to the returns, as it probably will be in most cases, this saving of itself, with one mine in fifty being worked, would amount to vast sums, and of itself be sufficient to command the loose capital of the world almost.

There is but one hope for good times in this county, either for the farmers, miners, laborers, merchants or business men of any kind taken together, and that is a railroad from here to tide water. Without that, we are bound to continue to drag along with fully an equal chance for times to grow worse instead of better. Our every interest is contingent upon our mineral wealth, and that mineral wealth will remain locked up for all time to come, comparatively speaking, or until the locomotive is brought here to assist in unlocking it. The iron horse is the key of the whole, and the sooner that key is put in our hands the sooner may we each and all feel assured of prosperous times for which otherwise it is perfectly idle to ever expect. It is far easier to make a railroad develop our mines than to make our mines develop a railroad. It will cost us as a people or individuals less money and far less time to do the former, which is the same as both in the end, than to do the latter alone. Supposing the latter done, what, in the light of previous experience, will it avail? Nothing to the owners, nothing to the country without the railroad to make it available. As it is we have an abundance of mines developed, now showing rich ores in unlimited quantities. There is no end to mines that are that far developed, but of what use are they or will they ever be without the next step toward the harvest? It is no use to pile up tons of ores except some way be provided to reduce them or make the processes available, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred there is scarcely a hope of obtaining such means except through the aid of the locomotive. It is useless for us to languish and wear out in hope of something turning up in our favor; to wait for some one else to turn it up for us, while we do nothing. We must take hold and help ourselves, or the sage-brush will ere long bloom over the graves of our hopes.

ENGINEER CRAWFORD'S REPORT.

We have seen a copy, a neatly printed pamphlet of some nineteen pages, of Engineer Crawford's report of his preliminary surveys of the two routes proposed for the Los Angeles & Independence railroad; but, for some reason not very obvious, neither THE INDEPENDENT nor its senior, who is one of the franchise holders, have been favored with a copy. From a hurried examination of it we take it to be a comprehensive though brief document, and very encouraging withal.

The first survey, Route No. 1 in the report, is that via San Bernardino, or within 6 or 12 miles as may be deemed best of that place, to the Mohave, thence northerly over the line given by us on a former occasion, along the west side of the Lake to Lone Pine and Independence. From Spadra, the present terminus of the Southern Pacific from Los Angeles, the whole length of road to build to reach this place is 222 miles. Except in crossing the Sierra and about Owens Lake there is no grading of moment to be done anywhere; in fact, with those exceptions there is but little else to do than grub the track and lay down the rails. This route is subdivided into three divisions of about 70 miles each. The graduation of the first, from Spadra to the Mohave, which includes all the heavy work, is estimated at $2,300 per mile; the middle division to Little Lake, 76 miles, at $600; third, same distance to Independence, at $800—average, $1,448, and total, including 5 miles of sidings, wood, water and freight stations, engineering and superintendence, track ready for the rails, $321,400. The maximum grade ascending north on this route is for a short distance about Cajon Summit 150 feet to the mile, and going in the same direction on Route No. 2, is 125 feet. Going south in the direction of the heaviest tonnage, it is 100 feet on both routes.

From San Fernando, Route No. 2, the distance to Independence is 209 miles, and the aggregate rise is less than that of No. 1; but in the matter of cost and connections the general showing is materially in favor of Route No. 1.

Mr. Crawford submits tables showing the respective cost of three kinds of road complete. The 4-foot 8½ inch gauge, with 45-pound iron, will cost $11,400 per mile; 3-foot gauge, 35-pound iron, $10,000; strap rail on wooden stringers, broad gauge, $5,400, while the wooden road as proposed is estimated at $4,233 per mile, giving a total for the whole of but $939,400. This is for the broad gauge wooden track.

His plan of superstructure meets our views exactly. It is to lay down ties six feet apart; these are gained deeply at the ends to receive a 6x8, 30 foot Oregon pine stringer laid flat wise, giving an 8-inch face for the wheels. No iron is used in the fastenings. Ties and stringers are nearly buried with the back filling, which method not only supports the track well under every possible pressure, but neutralizes the warping effects of the sun. The plan is feasible and practical. Other matters of detail we shall set forth hereafter.

Commissioners.

Ex Governor Dennison, of Ohio, and Henry T. Blow, of Missouri, have accepted the appointment of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Ex-Senator Cattel, of New Jersey, who was also appointed, has declined. This leaves a vacancy which must be filled by President Grant. We do not believe he will appoint Boss Sheppard.

—"Little Rhody," or rather her Legislature, give it up. After balloting for about a month for U. S. Senator, the Legislature then adjourned until next January. The last ballot stood: Burnside, 42; Dixon, 26; Barston, 19; scattering' 16.

The Inyo Trade.

[From The Los Angeles Express, July 2]

The Kern Courier lays great stress on the assumption that the road from Cerro Gordo to Bakersfield is forty miles shorter than the road to Los Angeles and that therefore, as soon as the Southern Pacific shall have extended is track to that city, the bullion and other trade of Inyo will find it an economical necessity to go that way. Unfortunately for Bakersfield there are two vey material difficulties in the way of such a consummation. One is that the wagon road grades from Inyo are altogether in favor of Los Angeles, and the assumed forty miles of advantage, in point of nearness, is more than lost in the difficulties of reaching Bakersfield with the heavy bullion teams. The other is, that after reaching Bakersfield there are nearly three hundred miles of railroad required to reach the objective point of bullion shipment. Now, time is no great object to the bullion men, and it is utterly impossible for railroads to compete in rates with steamers in the transportation of this kind of freight, they are not blind to the water advantages which they secure here on reaching the terminus of their land route. But The Courier fails to candidly consider this subject with reference to the new condition which a railroad from here to Independence will inaugurate. It is all very well to call that railroad as yet a paper project. We think that for the time elapsed since it was first broached it has shown as much solid vitality as any similar project ever undertaken. The company has only had its franchise three months, and already a large amount of the stock has been subscribed to and an engineer has surveyed two possible routes in the direction of Inyo, and made his report. We think this showing ought to give the project at least a respectable standing, and take out of the range of visionary paper enterprises. While we admit that in the permanent absence of this railroad, Bakersfield might ultimately induce the bulion that way, we can see no possible hope for such a result with the certainty of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad staring it in the face. This railroad, coming by Cajon Pass cuts off all possibility of Bakersfield ever receiving the trade of Cerro Gordo, Panamint, etc. This road will bind the trade to Los Angeles forever, and as we have in this and the adjoining counties all the supplies that are needed in that region, the road will inaugurate an era of mutual benefit in trade which nothing hereafter can affect. For our own part we do not view this road in the narrow light of its mere local usefulness. We have always insisted that it will be the first link of a system of internal railroads which will not only make Los Angeles the natural outlet of Inyo, Mono, Southern Nevada and Northern Arizona, but the terminal point on the Pacific Ocean of an overland railway which will be independent of all other roads on this coast in its connections. It is to speed the time when our city will have the commercial focus of all this vast territory that we are willing to make great sacrifices in inaugurating the work at the earliest day possible. We have often declared that the logic of railroads is extension, and we are throughly assured that this railroad could not, even if its managers would, stop short of connecting with Southern Utah.

An Extraordinary Scene.

Major G. W. McGee, of the United States Ordnance Corps, has just returned to St. Louis from arming several forts on and around the Mississippi. During the recent great flood the Major and his party, in the performance of their duties, were sailing between Hene and Round Islands, of Pascagola, en route for Fort Morgan, where they encountered a most remarkable scene. Here for miles were seen logs, driftwood and patches of turf and soil floating out into the gulf filled with live animals, who clung to their frail barks with the tenacity of shipwrecked marines, an account of which will be forwarded to the War Department. Among the animals seen were rats, racoons, opossums, rabbits, alligators and moccasin snakes in uncounted numbers, all brought down from the swamps and marshes, perhaps from fifty to one hundred miles. To the gentlemen witnessing this remarkable scene, the facts had a scientific interest. They were reminded of the geological periods when animal life was transported, doubtless by similar floods, from regions far inland to the mouth of estuaries, and their bones being entombed in the silt and soft mud furnished the organic remains which are preserved for ages in the hardened strata. It was by similar means that the fossils now found in the solid limestone were doubtless engulfed and preserved during the past geological periods. In this way also the islands along the gulf coast receive accessions of new animal types, not before known to inhabit them.

Panamint Mines.

We are, on good authority, informed that a brother of J. P. Jones, United States Senator from Nevada, lately visited the Panamint district, ninety miles from Cerro Gordo, and found the mineral discoveries there all and more than is represented in character, width of veins, and in richness. He purchased five claims for the sum of $113,000, and has gone up to San Francisco to make preparations for the thorough working of his mines. We further learn that there are already over one hundred persons in the Panamint camp, and that many more are going in from Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Bakersfield, Havilh, Cerro Gordo and Independence. The indications are that Panamint is the richest strike ever made in quartz on the Pacific coast.—Santa Barbra Index, June 18.

—Experiments with a single track elevated railway have been made in Philadelphia, and pronounced successful by a number of railway officials present.

The New Furnace—Lida.

LIDA, June 30.

MESSRS. EDITORS: By your permission, for the benefit of the readers of your excellent paper, I will give you an account of the result of the experimental furnace built by the Marrotte Bros. at Sylvania. The furnace is built on the principal of a Mexican "basso," and is so constructed as to receive the lead when melted in a basin, the slag floating on top, and is removed through a side tap; the lead is also drawn from a tap-hole in the side; the ore is laid on a sole or hearth, and is reduced by the heat from a wood fire (no coal being used); the slag is perfectly clear of any globules of lead; the ore smelted was of second-class lead ore, being only an experiment; the result was that from five tons of this ore one ton of silver lead was produced; the bullion was .12 fine, value per ounce $.0155; value per ton of 2,000 pounds, $457 98. This proves beyond a doubt that the ores of this district are good, this being second-class ore. You when they make a run on first-class ore, which will be soon.

In Lida District all the mines that are being worked look exceedingly well. There are eleven men at work on the Death Valley Mine, commonly known as the "Frenchman's Mine." They have a four foot vein of good ore; they have out on the dump about two hundred tons of ore that will mill over $200 per ton. This bids fair to be the FINEST MINE IN THIS COUNTRY.

Three men are at work on the Sewando, taking out sulphuret ore (the only mine in this camp in which sulphuret ore has been found) of very high grade, assaying $1,000 and upwards Active operations have been commenced on the Benet mine, and also on the Simon Pure. The three latter having been leased to different parties.

We are to have an opposition butcher shop opened next week, where we will have cheap and good beef. After the 1st of July we are to have a weekly

MAIL TO COLUMBUS,

Mr. Earl having sub-let the route to an enterprising Canadian, who is well adapted to carrying mail on long routes from the fact that he can sleep on his wagon as snugly and soundly as he would on an improved spring mattrass. And no matter whether he has forgotten the mail bag or lost it, he is bound to make the trip, and does it.

When the new wagon road is built to Carson our freights will be materially reduced. We are informed that an extensive stock of general merchandise will soon arrive here in charge of some San Francisco gentleman, who propose to sell goods at reasonable prices, which has never heretofore been done in this camp.

PROSPECTOR.

About Comets.

Among the many comets that have been observed from time to time in the heavens, the following are the most noted: Donati's comet, that of 1858, had a tail of about 50,000,000 miles in length, while that of 1843, one of the most brilliant ever observed, was three times as long. Haley's comet, which appeared in 1835, was also a very large one. More than two hundred comets have been observed up to the present time. That of 1843 approached nearer to the sun than any that have yet been noticed. The great comet of 1811 had a head 1,270,000 miles in diameter, and a tail 100,000,000 miles in length. The great comet of 1811 was only 465,000 miles distant from the sun at its perihelion, and is considered to have been exposed to a heat more than two thousand times hotter than that of red hot iron.

Murder in Los Angeles.

On the afternoon of the 29th ultimo, a man by the name of McDonald killed his wife in Los Angeles. She was sitting nursing her infant, when her brutal husband threw a large butcher knife at her, which struck her on the side inflicting a fatal wound. Before throwing the knife her husband struck her several times with his fist. The knife was eighteen inches in length, and it made such a fearful wound that she had but time to draw the fatal blade from her side, lay down the child and run from the room, when she sank down and expired. McDonald was arrested and lodged in jail. It was found necessary to guard the jail.

"The Resources of California."

Carmany & Co., San Francisco, will accept our thanks for a late copy of the above particularly excellent paper. It contains a number of engravings, one a very large one, and shows up all parts of the Golden State in a favorable and useful light. It is just the paper to send to your friends in the East.

Within One of It.

Robert Gibbons, who was tried so promptly and convicted of murder in the first degree at Portland, Oregon, recently, was granted a new trial, withdrew his plea of not guilty and plead guilty of homicide. He was sentenced to 99 years in the State Prison.

Sentenced to Death.

John Baker, who killed a mail carrier named Klein last Spring, and Charles Crouch, a half breed who killed a Mrs. Radler, were both sentenced in the District Court at Shasta a few days since to be hanged August 26, 1874.

A New Disease.

A news dispatch from Mexico says: A terrible disease of an unknown character has broken out in Blaconta and become an epidemic. The Government is assisting the inhabitants and taken measures to prevent the spreading of the malady.

Railroad Prospects.

It is authoratively stated that work on the Truxton Railroad was to be commenced the present week. The prospects for the success of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad are very flattering.

France.

It is reported that the French National Assembly, apprehending its own dissolution, will vote for the monarchy under Count de Chambord, he waiving the white flag difficulty.

Correct.

At Buffalo, New York, an architect named Sigwall has been found guilty of manslaughter in a case where fourteen persons were killed by the falling of a building of which he was builder.

Chance for a Muss.

On account of the positive demands made upon Spain by our Minister for indemnity in the Virginius affair, we are likely to have a rupture with the Spanish Government.

What They Made

When the thrifty German Government confiscated the property of the Archbishop of Posen, who is now in the Penitentiary, they got hold of $123,000 in cash.

New Paper.

Frank Kenyon has started The Lyon County Times, at Silver City, Nevada. It is a tri-weekly, and looks well.

—The Czar has sentenced his nephew, Grand Duke Nicholas, who stole his mother's diamonds, to banishment for life in the Caucasus, and has deprived him of the Cross of St. George, bestowed for achievements in the Khivan campaign.

—A Scotch gentlemen named Fleming is examining the lands and resources of Oregon and Washington Territory with a view to taking thither a large body of immigrants from Scotland.

—A voter praising a favorite candidate at a late Irish election, said, "He is as fine a fellow as ever lifted his hat to a lady or a boot to a blackguard.

—Captain Frey's widow has started a wood yard in New Orleans. She numbers her friends in that city by the cords.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To the Honorable County Court of Inyo County:

We the Grand Jury impanelled to inquire into the offenses committed in this county, and other matters, beg leave to submit the following report:

We have found one true bill for grand larceny

We have examined into the condition of the County Jail and find that the prisoners confined therein are well treated, as regards food and attention. We consider that the ventilation of the cells is insufficient, and would recommend that the same should immediately be remedied. We also recommend that a water-closet should be built for the use of the prisoners confined in said Jail. We also find that the fastenings on the cell doors are not secure.

We have inquired into the condition of the patients under the charge of the County Physician and find that they are well cared for.

We also find that the condition of the county roads are deplorable, but we as a body can do nothing in the premises, but would recommend that any citizen knowing any one to turn water on the public highway and thereby injuring the public roads, should lodge a complaint with the District Attorney, and prosecute before a Justice's Court for redress.

Having completed our labors, we respectfully ask to be discharged.

Barnes, Robert Love, Charles Whiting, John Shepherd, Charles B. White.

The Fourth at Lone Pine.

From all accounts the Lone Piners had the grandest time of anybody on the Fourth. Though undertaken at very short notice, the celebration was quite elaborate and highly satisfactory. Six nationalities were represented in the procession, each under its own flag, full uniformed Marshal and Aids mounted on gaily caprisoned steeds, all under the command of Marshal W. L. Moore, and headed by a brass band from Los Angeles, which also furnished music for the crowded ball room in the evening. The flags were the French, Mexican, German, Chili, Swiss and American. The exercises at the stand were opened and closed by some very happy remarks by Dr. Gelcich, the Declaration was well read by Mr. Palmer, while the Orator of the Day, Jas. Turner, astonished everybody with the success of his effort. The ball supper was served at the Orleans and was excellent. It had been in contemplation, we are told, to march a grand cavalcade and join in a celebration here, but as no out door ceremonies were to be held here, they bent their energies to make it a local success and succeeded. But, 'rah for the Centennial and a general blowout then!

The Ball.

The ball here on the Fourth, gotten up by the Dancing Club, was a very pleasant affair indeed. The music was really first rate—as good as we have ever had if not the best; it was by our local musicians. Under the tasty hands of the committee appointed for purpose, chief of whom was Mrs. Reddy, the Court room, used for the dancing hall, was splendidly decorated, but we shall attempt no description. Supper was given at the Blaney House, and a very good one it was. Though this celebration was not of the usual Fourth of July elaborateness it afforded quite as much real enjoyment, if not a little more. R. W. Woolard, Secretary of the Club, is deserving of credit for a great deal of responsible work in this affair.

A Question of Law.

It is asserted by some of the legal fraternity and newspapers that publication of partnership notices must, to conform to the law's intent, be made not in June, but in July. While we are satisfied that June was the final limit for the publication of previously existing partnerships and fulfilled all legal requirements, yet to set at rest any possible quibble that may arise on this point, we now propose to give all extra publications in July, and free of charge.

The Roads.

The Grand Jury, in their report published by authority, make a sensible suggestion or two in reference to roads, or rather as to the right mode to make certain persons have a proper regard for the rights of the traveling public. It is to be hoped the remedy may be applied until a permanent cure is effected.

All Right Yet.

Yesterday was the time set for Welch to expiate his great crime upon the gallows, but thanks to Judge Niles' perspicuity and keen sense of justice, Welch's tight rope exhibition will now necessarily be postponed for several months, with a pretty even chance that he utterly fails to give one at all—at least with a Sheriff to help.

County Court.

This Court had no business other than that of the Grand Jury and the case of John Hilton, indicted for grand larceny. Hilton plead guilty, and was yesterday sentenced by Judge Hannah to one year in the State Prison—equivalent to two weeks in the county sweat-box with doors closed.

Camp Meeting.

A camp-meeting and general wrestling with sin is to begin at Bishop Creek on the 16th.

Boundary Survey.

It will be noticed that the Board of Supervisors have petitioned the Surveyor-General for a survey of our western boundary line. The object sought to be gained is well worth the effort, but is argued from false premises, and will hardly be attained, though the survey be ordered as it probably will be. The object as argued is to so define the line to enable the several Assessors to determine their respective rights of jurisdiction with respect to immense numbers of stock Summer-pastured near the summit. The argument fails as to any existing difficulty on this point because the dividing line between Inyo and Tulare is one about which there can be no mistake, crooked as it is. This line is specifically laid down in the statutes as the summit line of the Sierras, or the "divide" between the waters of the San Joaquin and the Great Basin. There is and can be but one divide or summit proper, and by that and the law both the Surveyor-General must shape his lines, without a special act of the Legislature giving him discretionary powers to cut across interlaced streams running parallel to each other for long distances, but exactly opposite destinations. Without such Legislation it is scarcely probable the Surveyor-General will feel at liberty to depart materially from a natural boundary line plainly specified as such in the statutes; and, unless he does so depart from the plain letter of the law, we will have to pay some $2,500 to have a natural crooked line made a little more visible by a croooked line of stakes set to correspond; and the animal that grazes around the spring whose waters incline to the San Joaquin will continue to be taxed to that side just the same, and vice versa. But it won't do any harm to have the line run.

District School Moneys.

Superintendent Symmes favors us with his views of the new school law as follows: "By reference to page 346, California Teacher, Sec. 1858 Political Code, you will see that, unless a school district has fifty census children, such district is entitled to but $500 of State and county school money. Also, same page and Code, Sec. 1859 requires that six months' school must be maintained during the present school year in each district to entitle it to its apportionment of State and county school money the next school year. In short a district with less than fifty census children will get but $500 State and county school money and no more, all told, with which to maintain a school the required term of six months." Mr. Symmes is undoubtedly right in the above, and as the amount allowed is not sufficient to maintain a school six months in this county, allowing teachers living wages, we will now have to devise some plan of making up the deficit or forfeit all the public money next year. The fairest, cheapest and best way, probably, is by means of rate bills, or pro rata assessments fixed by the Trustees of each district; but such assessments are wholly dependent upon voluntary payment.

Attempt to Break Jail.

Saturday last John Hilton, under arrest for horse-stealing, was very nearly successful in an attempt to break jail. The cells being very warm, Sheriff Moore kept him locked up during the day in the old calaboose in the rear of the Court House. On taking him out Saturday evening to lock him up in the cell for the night as usual, the Sheriff noticed that something was wrong with the heavy iron plated door of the calaboose, but instituted no examination until after he returned the prisoners to the calaboose on the following morning. Then he discovered that both hinges were almost completely severed, an operation the prisoner had performed by means of an old pocket-knife he had been allowed to keep to cut his tobacco. Hilton perspires freely now in the regular sweat-box.

Personals.

Presiding Elder Warren Nyms and lady are expected to-day....Miss Nettie Thompson, daughter of mine host and hostess of the Blaney, has started to Oakland to attend school. ....Mr. Van Arsdale of Swansea was here yesterday; thinks those works will not steam up till the weather gets a little cooler....Mr. Beaudry reports Cerro Gordo still on the hill and things in statu quo; may move it down some some day—when the sign gets right.... Wm. Barrows, Martin Mee and Supervisor Hughes were also down here taking a sniff of fresh air; pronounced it good but not natural, and went back again.

Warm.

If ink-rollers were the only means of determining exact degrees of weather heat, the fate of at least a dozen in this office the past ten days would have demonstrated it as immeasurable. They have melted down repeatedly, and the weather is getting warmer and warmer—which is not encouraging to the boss Satan who makes the rollers.

For Washington.

E. Chaquette starts Monday or Tuesday next for Washington. The object in view, in part at least, is to see about a patent on a very valuable machine of his own invention, and one that is likely to prove of great benefit to farmers, but we do not feel at liberty to say more about it at present.

More Prospecting.

V. A. Gregg, Esq., Judge Hanson, and we know not who besides, are off on a general prospect down and around Panamint. If they get safely through that hot region, while the thermometer here is above a hundred, they need feel no great fears of their hereafter.

At Bishop.

Our National Anniversary was duly observed at Bishop—fine oration, picnic dinner and ball, but not having received any particulars, we can't give any.

At Fish Lake.

Instead of being several hundeed miles advanced on his journey to Montana, Mr. Mulkey at the beginning of the present week was delayed at Fish Lake by sickness in his family, Miss Mattie having a severe attack of mountain fever.

Thanks.

The chances are that the days of George Clark, of Bishop, will be long in the land—he knows how to remember the printer, and if any man is entitled to special favors for good deeds that sort guarantees a preference.

Religious Services.

Quarterly meeting will be held at the school-house this afternoon. Love Feast at half-past 10 A. M. to-morrow, and preaching by Elder Nyms immediately after, also in the evening.

Proceedings of the Special Meeting.

Pursuant to call the Board of Supervisors met on Monday, July 6, as a Board of Equalization and for other purposes. Present John R. Hughes and A. N. Bell, President.

W. C. Smith was appointed a Justice of the Peace for the 6th (Panamint) township.

Franchise granted to Panamint Toll Road Company; rates of toll, wagon and 1 pair animals, $2; each additional span, 50 cents; horse and rider, 25 cents; pack animals and loose stock, 12½ cents; hogs and sheep, 5 cents; unloaded teams half toll either way.

Deputy County Surveyor J. Seely, J. D. Sears and Thomas Passmore were appointed to view out and report at the August meeting the feasibilty of and probable cost of constructing a county road from Lone Pine to Panamint.

Tuesday, July 7. Board framed and ordered forwarded a petition to Surveyor-General Stratton asking him to order a survey of the western boundary of Inyo county.

Ordered, that the insurance policy upon the Court House, in the London, Liverpool and Globe, which policy expired June 27, be renewed in the sum of $15,000, and a warrant for $565, the amount of the yearly premium, be drawn in favor of Harris & Rhine, agents of said company.

Ordered, that warrants to the amount of $5,300 be drawn on Bridge Debt Fund (created by act of last Legislature) in favor of E. Chaquette, to pay balance due on bridge contracts.

As a Board of Equalization the following action was had:

E. Chaquette, for reduction on his land assessment. Bell was for, Hughes against; no decision. Same in regard to application of Henry Premer. Upon the application of J. W. McMurry for reduction on property assessed to John Bell, and it appearing by testimony of Assessor that said property had been given in much too high, it was ordered reduced from $2 800 to $600. Application of Harris & Rnine for a reduction of $15,000 on the $40,000 at which their goods and real estate were assessed, was debated at length, and testimony taken. Ordered reduced $6,500.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.
San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday.....July 11, 1874.

—Collins Graves, who rode so fast down the Mill River Valley to warn the people of approaching danger, is said to be the first milkman who ever ran away from water.

—By the way, for a man who affects such a supreme contempt for newspapers, Mr. Butler keeps remarkably well posted relative to what they say.

—A gentleman late one evening met his servant. "Hello, where are you going at this time of night? For no good, I warrant." "I was going for you sir," was the reply.

—In addition to Gov. Moses' suit for grand larceny, it appears from his bankruptcy schedule that he has several other new suits on hand, and what's more, they are not paid for either.

—Punch's receipt for the preservation of furs is excellent: Pull out all the hairs with tweezers, and varnish the skin. In the Spring remove the varnish and carefully stick all the hairs in their old places.

—St. Louis papers record the death of a young child, "who ate some concentrated lie." It was very culpable in the child's mother to leave the city journals around in so careless a manner.

—Hair-cutter (who has been eating onions)—S'moil on your hair, sir (blowing fiercely down customer's neck)?" Customer—"Phew! what's that?" Hair-cutter—"S'moil sir." Customer—"Then I won't have any."

—Time is constantly rolling on and producing innovations, but in Missouri, after a lapse of sixty years, the old, familiar potatoe-masher is still woman's favorite weapon when a family jar occurs.

—"Don't fee the servants at the Summer hotels," says an exchange. All very well that advice; but the only way to avoid feeing them, that we can see, is to stay away from the hotels altogether.—N. Y. Com. Advertiser.

—Thirty-two members of a Polish congregation at Winona, Minn., refused to pay their pew rents because their minister had referred to them in his pulpit as "empty heads." They are now defendants in a suit in which the preacher is plaintiff.

The Sun.

According to Kirchhoff, the sun consist of a solid or partially liquid nucleus in the highest state of incandesence, which emits, like all solids or liquids raised to a white heat, every possible kind of light, and therefore would of itself give a continuous spectrum without any dark lines. The incandesent central nucleus is surrounded by an atmosphere of lower temperature, containing, on account of the extreme heat of the nucleus, the vapors of many of the substances of which this body is composed. The rays of light therefore emitted by the nucleus must pass through this atmosphere before reaching the earth, and each vapor extinguishes from the white light those rays which it would itself emit in a glowing state.

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

How to Paint. For mechanics, merchants, farmers, and a guide to the professional painter. Methods in plain and fancy painting. Including gilding, bronzing, staining, graining, marbling, varnishing, polishing, kalsomining, paper hanging, striping, lettering, copying and ornamenting, mixing paint, tools required, etc. $1.

Life at Home; or The Family and its Members. Husbands, wives, parents, children, brothers, sisters. Rev. Wm. Aikman, D. D. $1 50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of Both Sexes. Formation of character, choice of avocation, health, amusement, music, conversation, cultivation of intellect, moral sentiment, social affection, courtship and marriage. $1 50.

Wedlock; or The Right Relations of the Sexes. Laws of conjugal selection; showing who may and who may not marry. Wells. $1 50.

Oratory--Sacred and Secular. Or the extemporaneous speaker. Including a chairman's guide for conducting public meetings. Pittenger. $1 50

The Temperance Reformation; its history from the first temperance society in the United States to the adoption of the Maine Liquor Law. By Rev. J. Armstrong. $1 50.

Gems of Goldsmith. "The Traveler," "The Deserted Village," "The Hermit." With notes and original illustrations, and biographical sketch of the great author. One vol. 14mo; tinted paper, fancy cloth. Price $1.

Family Physician. A ready prescriber and hygenic adviser. With reference to the nature, causes, prevention and treatment of diseases, accidents, and casualities of every kind. By Joel Shew, M. D. $4.

Hydropathic Encyclopædia. A system of Hydropathy and Hygiene. Embracing outlines of anatomy and physiology; the preservation of health; special pathology, including the nature, causes, treatment and symptoms of all known diseasas. Designed as a guide to families and students, and text book for physicians. By Trall. $4 50.

Children; Their Management in Health and Disease. A descriptive practical work. $1 75.

Family Gymnasium. Containing the most approved methods of applying gymnastic, calisthenic, kinespathic, and vocal exercises to the development of the bodily organs. By Dr. Trall. $1 75.

The Alcoholic Controversy. A review of The Westminster Review on the Pysiological Errors of Teetotalism. By R. T. Trall, M. D. 50 cents.

Annuals of Phrenology and Physiognomy. One yearly 12mo volume. Price 25 cents for the current year. For 1865, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, nine, containing over 350 illustrations, many portraits and biographies of distinguished personages, together, with articles on "How to Study Phrenology," "Bashfulness," "Diffidence," "Stammering," "The Marriage of Cousins," "Jealousy; its cause and cure," etc., the nine in one volume. $2.

Indispensible Hand Book; "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave" and "How to do Business." $2 25.

Right Word in the Right Place. A pocket dictionary of Synonyms, technical terms, abbreviations, foreign phrases, etc. 50 cents. n199*

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY VIRTUE OF AN EXECUTION ISSUED OUT of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, in the suit of Isaac M. Bull, William Watt and John Ockershausen, plaintiffs, against the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Mining Company, a corporation, defendant, for the foreclosure of a certain mortgage and sale of the mortgaged premises, wherein the said Isaac M. Bull, William Watt and John Ockershausen recovered judgment against the said Owens Lake Silver-Lead Mining Company, a corporation, on the Tenth day of July, A. D. 1873, for the sum of One Hundred and Two Thousand Three Hundred and Eleven and Thirty-Eight One Hundreths Dollars, with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, which judgment was docketed in the Clerk's office of said Court, in said Inyo County, on the Eighth day of April, A. D. 1874, for a balance or deficiency due after foreclosure and sale, against the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company, a corporation, for the sum of Ninety-Eight Thousand Seven Hundred and Sixteen and Sixty-Three One Hundreth Dollars, duly attested the Eighteeth day of June, A. D. 1874, and to me directed and delivered, by which I am required to make the amount of $98,716 63-100, with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum and accruing costs, I have levied on all the right, title and interest of the said defendant (the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company, a corporation), in and to the following described real property, to wit: The Crowning Glory lode or mine situated in the Cerro Gordo Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California, together with the appurtenances. Notice is hereby given that on MONDAY, THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF JULY, A. D. 1874, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, I will sell all the right, title and interest of the said defendant in and to the above described real property, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy said judgment and costs, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash in hand.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers wish their papprs discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Ullman's Educated Dog.

There are few travelers on the Harlem railroad who have not heard of the educated dog at Scarsdale depot. His name is Knapp. He is the property of George Ullman, the station-master. Knapp is a shepherd dog, about two feet high, and is covered with a dark brown shaggy coat of fine hair. He was born in the Scotch Highlands nearly four years ago. In his infancy Knapp was imported at considerable trouble by a gentleman of Scarsdale, who, being suddenly called to Europe shortly afterwards, gave him to Mr. Ullman. Noticing genius and intelligence in Knapp, Mr. Ullman began to train him. Now Knapp can perform many wonderful feats. He has been taught to assist his master in the performance of his duties around the depot. Knapp has learned to tell by the clock when a train is due, and at night when the hands point to the proper hour, he takes a lantern and stands on the platform with it, guiding the engineer to the stopping place. Knapp knows an express train from a mail train, and a mail train from a way train. In the daytime, when an express train approaches the station and the track is clear, Knapp shows a white flag, which signifies all is well.

Not many days ago Knapp appeared with a white flag as an express train hove in sight, but seeing two small children going down the wagon road, ignorant of the approach of any train, he saw that the children would reach the crossing simultaneously with the train. Knapp dropped the white and seizing the red flag in his mouth darted toward the crossing. The engineer saw the red flag and shut off the steam before the animal reached the children. When he arrived at the crossing he stood there and prevented the train from passing until the children were safely over the track, then he laid the flag down and the train went on.

On another occasion, as a way train was stopping at the depot, Knapp snatched a child from in front of it. The child's clothing was torn by the wheels of the locomotive, so narrowly had it escaped death.

Knapp consults a clock every day for the arrival of the mail trains. A few minutes before the train is due Knapp stations himself at the mail rack, and when the bag is thrown from the car he carries it to the postoffice, and if it contains any letters for his master he takes them back to him.

When the freight trains begin to switch cars at the depot, Knapp always takes a red flag and trots up or down the track, as the case may be, and flags any train that heaves in sight. Knapp always keeps his position faithfully until called in by signals, just as any other flagman is. The engineers all know Knapp and faithfully act upon his signals. After the departure of freight trains, Knapp often walks down the track and carefully examines the switches to see that the brakesmen have left them all right. Satisfied that no blunders have been made, he walks back to the depot, and if the clock shows him he has a few leisure moments he signifies to his master a desire for a pipe. Mr. Ullman has taught him to smoke, and he always keeps Knapp's pipe ready for lighting when he calls for it. The pipe being lighted, he sits on a chair and smokes with as much apparent ease and comfort as his master.

Mr. Ullman is a good musician. He has a piano in the ladies' room of the depot, and often performs on it. Knapp has been taught to sing or whine the tunes which Mr. Ullman plays. The dog often perches himself on a chair beside his master, with his fore feet on the piano frame, and accurately turns the sheets of music with his tongue. Knapp can waltz, dance a schottische or a polka as well as any one can on four legs.

Many other tricks are related of Knapp equally as smart as these.

A Study for Bret Harte.

[From Travels in Utah by John Codman.]

Passing over one of the elevations, my companion pointed out on our left a narrow valley, through which ran a sluggish stream among the thick willow brush.

"That is a place," said he, "I shall never never forget, for there it was we fit the Indians in the biggest kind of a fight. They ambushed us in them willows. Every shot of 'em told on some of us, and we couldn't get 'em, they was stowed away so close in the brush. We lost twenty men, but we finally drove 'em. I tell you 'twas worse than fightin' with bars! Just as the scrimmage was about over, poor Gus Mellish was shot down close by me. I knowed Gus well. We'd been pards in California. He was one of the best fellers I ever knowed, and we was always gettin' sells on one another; but Gus got the heaviest thing on me when he died! As soon as he was shot I see he was a goner. I helped up on the bank, and eased him off all I could, sayin' over all the Bible I knowed and promisin' to give his watch and gun to his folks. But Gus wanted me to agree to send him to Frisco, where all his folks lived. So I promised, and he died happy. Well, I buried him on the spot temporary. Three years after, when I calculated he was about eat up, I went for his bones. Now what do you think Gus had been and gone and done? Why, as he was buried in alkali, he'd gone and turned himself into solid stone, and then he expected me to pay freight on him all the way to Frisco! I did it, too, but that was the last load Gus ever got on me."

When Jeff had concluded this touching reminiscence of his departed friend he stopped his horse and took a drink to his memory.

Statistics of Intemperance.

[From Harper's Monthly.]

The testimony of competent judges is decided in the opinion that the use of ardent spirits is hurtful to health and long life, and the old-fashioned calculations of Nelson, in his "Vital Statistics," are confirmed by the researches of the General Life Office. According to these estimates, the probability of death among drinkers between 21 and 40 years is ten times as much as among the whole population; between 41 and 60 years, four times as much; and among habitual tipplers over 60 years of age, twice as much as among the people at large. In England, 1850–59, more than 8,000 cases were reported of men who literally drank themselves to death. Nelson has given us his investigations of 6,111 tipplers, that out of 1,000 58.4 die annually, while out of 1,000 inhabitants only three die. Thus the mortality among drinkers is three times as great as among the community at large. He has carried out his calculations in all ages, and shown how this chronic self-murder marvelously diminishes the expectation of life. The highest point as to numbers is found in the years 1851–60, which report 192 men and 44 women intemperate out of 10,000 in England and Wales, and which reckon the diminution in the expectation of life accordingly. This last statement is startling, and shows a falling off in the probable term of life for each ten years, from 20 to 60 and upward, of respectively 28, 22, 17, 10 and five years, with fractions, and amounting to the fearful percentage respectively of 35, 38, 40, 51, and 63 per cent. of probable life as compared with the population. Surely strong drink is slow fire, and intemperance is voluntary madness and chronic suicide.

The Congressman from Oregon.

The election of La Dow will be a surprise to that gentleman, and may throw him into another fit of wretched illness. It is stated as a fact that he failed to canvass for the double reason that he was afraid of the ordeal of the stump and that he couldn't see how he could stand the expense. "Why," he said to a friend, "I went to Pendleton and made a speech thar, and it cost $10! Ef I shud go down thar to the Williamette and go to speechifyin', it ud probably cost a hundred and fifty dollars!" La Dow will never see how he is to pay the expenses of going to Washington, and doubtless wishes the Democracy hadn't went and gone and done it.—[Salem (Oregon) Statesmen.

Tale of Sentiment.

A story in one chapter as told by The Norwalk Sentinel:

There are faces that come to us in our dreams, which go with us while we work or wander—faces that haunt us long after the slumbering hours the people have slipped away forever. Sad faces sometimes—faces with sorrowful eyes which keep us hushed and quiet, invoking a cloud of shadowy memories which chase away the light and brightness of our being. Then again comes faces in the night air fair and fresh—of people we owe and can't pay just now, or—sadder yet—of folks who owe us that we can't collect a cent of."

These "dog days" are very warm. We haven't seen a mad dog, but we hear the reverse of it frequently.

What They are Entitled To.

Mr. Carpenter, from the Committee on Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred the whole subject of supplying stationery to the reporters, made a report some four or five columns long, in which the history of Congressional appropriations was thoroughly overhauled to prove that by all the precedents Senators were entitled not only to stationary, penknives, gold pens and gold toothpicks, but to Madeira wine, Cognac brandy, aimonds, raisins and pound cake. The amount expended for stationary for reporters averages $50 per annum; but since the reporters have been so much exercised about the contingent expenses of the Senate, it is recommended that the distribution hereafter should be made with discrimination.—Ex.

Andre's Pocket Book.

The pocket book taken from Major John Andre by his captors, September 23, 1779, has been presented to the Connecticut Historical Society by Rev. A. L. Whitman, of Groton, Connecticut. The Hartford Courant says that it was for many years in the possession of Mr. Joshua Barrell, of Bridgewater, Massachusetts, a soldier of the revolution, from whom it passed more than forty years ago to his grandson, Rev. Mr. Whitman. It will hereafter be preserved by the side of Arnold's watch, which has for many years been in the cabinet of the Historical Society.

MORE CONFLAGRATIONS.

A fire broke out in Chicago on the 14th which for a time bid fair to be as disastrous as the great fire of 1871. It occurred at the time of a very strong gale, causing the flames to catch whole blocks away, and for many hours rendering the efforts of the firemen perfectly nugatory. It was finally checked and subdued by the free use of powder in blowing up blocks of buildings. It started in the delectable locality known as "Hell's Half-Acre," and, although over a thousand houses were destroyed, but very few are considered any loss to the city or the world. The losses were first reported at seven or eight millions, but are now fixed at about $2,500,000, with an insurance of $800,000. The ground burnt over was mostly new territory, but a very small portion being the same as that of the big fire.

On the same day, and hour nearly, three other extensive fires were raging. One at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, destroyed 400 houses in the heart of the town, and proportionately, was a far greater disaster than that of Chicago. Taylor, City Treasurer, died from over work during the fire, and Policeman Fox will die from the same cause.

The second took place at the town of Iowa Falls, the whole business portion of which was wiped out. The third resulted in the utter destruction of the Joliet (Illinois) woolen mills.

The Scandal.

It is gratifying to know that Beecher is likely to be able to vindicate himself wholly from the charge of any criminal intimacy with Mrs. Tilton. In his statement to the committee he denies the charges unequivocably, except this far: That, at her earnest solicitation for counsel in her troubles with her husband, he did tell Mrs. Tilton he thought she had better leave her husband and thenceforth live separate. It was for this and only this he wrote the letter acknowledging that he had wronged Tilton, and asking his forgiveness. Whether these statements will be fully sustained, however, remains to be seen. The committee are about to close their investigations and submit their report to the church. It is now charged that Tilton is either crazy or a deliberate blackmailer. He and his wife have signed articles of separation, which saves the "scandal of a divorce."

Panamint Incorporations.

The following companies, all for mining in Panamint district, this county, were incorporated in San Francisco on the 15th instant:

Alabama Silver Mining Company; capital stock, $6,000,000, shares, $100; Directors: John Copely and J. N. Parker, Inyo; J. A. Pritchard, S. A. Raymond and W. E. Hale, San Francisco

Hudson River Silver Mining Company; capital and shares same as above; Directors: John Copely, D. G. Tipton, J. A. Pritchard, S. A. Raymond and W. E. Hale.

Dempsey Silver Mining Company; capital same as above; Directors: John Copely, J. A. Pritchard, Henry Gibbons, S. A. Raymond and W. E. Hale.

Harrison Silver Mining Company; Directors: W. S. Hobart, J. A. Pritchard, S. A. Raymond, W. E. Hale and John Copely.

Trouble in the Treasury Department.

A serious quarrel has arisen between Treasurer Spinner and Acting Secretary Conant. Spinner claims the right, under the written orders of the President, to waive the civil service rules in appointments to his bureau. Conant holds that the order does not override the rules promulgated by the Civil Service Board. Since the order was issued, the matter has been referred to Secretary Bristow, who decided in favor of Conant, and now Spinner appeals to the President.

In a Nutshell.

Here's an illustration in a nut-shell: There lies a large body of land. The owner holds it at $25 an acre. A man of small means buys 40 acres to-day To-morrow he fences it. Next day the officer comes along and assesses the large tract at four dollars and the small one at ten. Comment is superfluous.

THE BAKERSFIELD ROUTE.

The last Courier has something to say in reference to the superiority of the Bakersfield route for the Inyo freight and passenger traffic, now that the railroad is completed to that point, as compared to the Los Angeles route. It says in conclusion:

If THE INDEPENDENT is the intelligent newspaper it claims to be, it will cease to ignore the one and only direction by which cheap freights and quick means of transit can be furnished. Every man of practical experience believes the wooden railway a fallacy, and capital can be induced to invest in no such enterprise. For just so long after the railroad reaches this place as the Los Angeles route is patronized may they expect dull times. When that event takes place, the transportation by wagons will be forty miles less, and, we repeat it, over a far better road, and the price of freight by the railroad at least $2 per ton less than it now is from San Fernando to San Francisco. These are facts THE INDEPENDENT should hold up to the people of Inyo, instead of distracting them with absurd projects and occupying its space with mendacious articles from the Los Angeles papers calculated to lead them still farther astray. We leave the matter of quick delivery, the time not averaging more than a fourth of what it does now, out of the question.

We will remark that the people of this county, and this paper as well, care nothing which or what route gives the advantage we require to help us on to a greater degree of prosperity. If Bakersfield and the Southern Pacific can do it, Bakersfield and the Southern Pacific are quite good enough for us. But there are two or three things which lead us to think the hopes held out in that direction are scarcely to be relied on. First, as we understand it, the distance by team to reach the end of the railroad at Bakersfield, allowing for heavier grades, is not materially less than to the anchorage at Wilmington, including the portion by rail. Second, in the matter of freights it then becomes a square issue between water and railroad transportation, that by wagon being about the same in either case. The difference in favor of freight by water is, we suppose, as $10 are to $25, the latter the cost by rail. Between 600 miles by steamer and 400 miles by rail the saving of time by freight trains will probably not exceed 24 hours if so much. This is not an equivalent for the extra cost on any kind of freight, scarcely, much less on our staple production. As we have stated heretofore, a few dollars more or less cost per ton in reducing and freighting ores from almost any mine is of itself sufficient to give the business a great value or no value at all. In the very best mining region (and ours is just as good as the best) the margin for profits is but a few dollars per ton, taking the average together, and this margin may all be embraced in the matter of transportation alone. But The Courier insists that freights by that route must be at least $2 less per ton than by the present one. When that fact is demonstrated, it of itself will be quite sufficient to determine every pound of freight to that route, unless the contemplated Los Angeles & Independence railroad is completed, when the conditions will be entirely changed.

We look upon the prosecution and completion of that enterprise as of the very first importance to this section—and certainly no less to Los Angeles. In the first place it gives us a competitive line, which we can never hope to have otherwise. It will give us a railroad directly to our doors, which we can never hope to have otherwise, for, so long as the Southern Pacific, at Bakersfield or Tehechepi, or any other place as far away, can command our freights we may ever expect to haul it there by wagon. That company has never built a mile of branch road yet, either for an accession of business or to develope a country, and most likely never will. Should we ourselves build the connecting line, what then? It would be virtually or wholly swallowed up by the other; with or without this branch line, whether built by ourselves or that company, our freights would inevitably continue at the present maximum rate, and then farewell to every hope of material advancement for our section. It would take it twenty years or more to reach that degree of prosperity the Los Angeles railroad would give it in a single month. That road, if built and managed as proposed by those who are interested in both it and the terminal sections it is intended to benefit, can never be "run off the track" by the whole power of the Central Pacific, and will at all times be able to maintain itself, though the big company started in to take its freight at $5 per ton. It can and would effect a saving of not less than 50 per cent. on any possible rates the Southern Pacific can or would afford, unless it would be in deference to some such competitive line.

Admitting the Bakersfield route to offer superior inducements under the present condition of affairs, The Courier, if as intelligent as it claims to be, is bound to admit that this, a competitive line, such as we are trying to have built, is and always must be of vital importance to the best interests of this section. Such a road, whether wood or iron, means cheap freights and the development of our country; the Southern Pacific alone means high freights for all time, and wagons and stages for two hundred miles for many years to come. There is no gainsaying either one of these propositions. We would gladly welcome the Southern Pacific, the nearer the warmer, as something of an improvement on present conditions, but so long as there remains a hope of this other enterprise the people of this county will be foolishly false to their own interests if they do not strive to the utmost of their power to make that hope a reality. If we supinely allow this present opportunity to lapse, this franchise to go by the board, and make the Southern Pacific our staff, just that certain we will continue years longer to trudge through the sand as we have trudged in years past. We consider that one of the inevitables. It wagons alone are to be our dependence the Bakersfield route is abundantly good enough. That far, or in that view, we believe The Courier is right—so far as the bullion alone is concerned any way. Bullion men can make bargains for themselves. They have the "say" on the business of this section; whether we are to have a railroad or no railroad; cheap freights both ways, or moderately cheap down freights and high rates for back freights always, so long as it has to come over the Southern Pacific with no competition.

Illinois Grangers.

[From The Daily (Nevada) Independent.]

The Grangers of Illinois are disaffected. They don't believe in the organization that was to have done everything for the farmers and that was to have eschewed politics as something that didn't concern them. We learn from our exchanges that Good Hope Grange, McDonough county, Illinois, has seceded, and has given its reasons for so doing in the following categorical manner: First, the original principles for which the organization was formed have been entirely overlooked and ignored. Second, that large sums of money have been collected, are now and will be in time to come, for which no adequate return has ever been realized by the members. Third, there is a general disposition to change the organization to a political party; and fourth that it is burdensome and expensive to the members of the order, which offers no adequate benefit. We have had our doubts about the ulterior intentions of the Grangers all along, but from the secrecy with which they conduct their affairs, it was difficult to penetrate their designs. It was but natural that farmers should organize for their own protection and for obtaining the full value of their wheat, but it was not all natural that politicians should make common cause with the honest farmer without having reason for the alliance other than the price of wheat. We are afraid the farmers have been duped by the politicians. Did the Order of Husbandry act in good faith it could do incalculable good to the agricultural interest of the country, but with their parade of secrecy, where, if they were single-minded, no secrecy is necessary, and their pretensions to establish Grangers' Warehouses all over the country, as if to segregate themselves from the rest of the community, they excited the distrust of thinking people. The order will very soon, we think, stand forth in its true character, that of a political organization, and as such may be of great weight in shaping the destinies of the country. But as regards its durability as an agricultural association, its existence is doubtful. The farmers ultimately will have to fall back on their clubs, which, though not so pretentious as the Grangers, may be more useful.

Killed by a Rattlesnake.

A. S. Heep [a sheep?] and some friends started out with a view to examine some land to determine its adaptability for grazing purposes. They had traveled some distance when their attention was aroused by a sharp, whirring noise. Not beingacquainted with the sound of a rattlesnake's warning, the party kept advancing and only stopped when the venomous reptile, which was coiled up and secreted in a dense tuft of dry grass and weeds, sprang forth and buried its poisoned, death-bearing fangs clear through the thick woolen clothes Heep wore, into the main artery of his left leg, just above the knee. Involuntarily, as he felt the pain of the bite of the snake, he leaned forward to examine the wound, and as he did so, the reptile, which had again coiled up, sprang forward and struck him on the right cheek, about an inch below the eye. By this time his friends came forward and soon despatched the reptile. No remedies were at hand. Rapidly the deadly poison diffused itself through his veins; his limbs and body began to swell; the pupils of his eyes to distend, and soon he was in the throes of death. He died in twenty minutes after being bitten.—[Fresno Expositor.

James Lick.

The worst lick at the fair features of any man that we have seen for a long time is manifest in the portrait of the above named great benfactor, as printed n last Sunday's Chronicle. If James Lick was young and a marrying man that sober caricature of his features would afford tenable grounds for a libel suit.

Women as Scientists.

So far as the study of mathematics and natural science is carried in female schools there is no perceptible difference between the capacity evinced by the pupils for such subjects and that manifested by boys at the same age. The first symptoms of a diversity in this respect are generally when a girl has left school and begins to go into "society." She then learns—often after much mortification and many rebuffs—that these subjects, over which she has spent so many hours of labor, and in which perhaps she has been so deeply interested, are as unsuited to a woman's proper sphere in life as swinging a sledge-hammer or driving an omnibus. The attainments and desire for further knowledge which she sees greatly admired and highly commended in her brothers are, in her own case, if not absolutely laughed at, at least productive of a very visible and not at all gratifying smile. The latest ukase of fashion in regard to the gore of a skirt is, she is practically told, an infinitely more befitting topic of consideration for her than the latest ascertained parallax of a fixed star, and the varying altitude of head-dresses a far more becoming object of observation and reflection than the rise and fall of the barometer. It has sometimes been remarked as a matter of wonder that only one woman has attained a position in the very first rank of scientific writers. The state of feeling which formerly prevailed, and which to a great extent still exists, in regard to such studies by the female sex, renders it much more wonderful that that one has reached this position. —[New York Times.

—The following dialogue took place in a street car in Raleigh a few days ago: One of a couple of Teutonic gentleman sitting in one end of the car seeing a flashily dressed fellow come and take his seat at the opposite end from where they were sitting, asked: "Who ish dat, Hans?" "Oh, dat ish a sphort." "Vat yeu call a sphort, hey?" "Ton't you know?" "No, vat is he?" "Vell, he is one of der fellers vat shaves all de hair off a pig and cover him all over mit soap, and pet a green Dutchman five dollars he can't catch him."

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

A Trip to Death Valley—Egan.

July 10, Judge Hanson, M. Sampar and V. A. Gregg, Esq., started out on a trip to the head of Death Valley, from which Gregg proposed to go through to Panamint. The party returned a few days since, and from Mr. Gregg we have the following: The objective point of Hanson and Sampar was the lead mine near Cottonwood canyon, Death Valley, discovered some four years since by Greenley, and Hahn, Wheeler's lost guide. After reaching the ground and searching without avail for a day or or more, Gregg left the other two and struck out alone south across the trackless and furnace like desert for Panamint, 70 miles distant and not a drop of water on the route. About the middle of an immense wash full six miles wide and almost impracticable for a horse on account of sharp lava rocks, his eye fell an object not calculated to reassure a lonely traveler in those regions; this was the bones of a human leg, from thigh to foot inclusive, yet held together by the ligaments. It had evidently been deposited in that spot by a recent wash. The locality is about five miles from the foot of the mountain on the east side, and about 10 north from where the Rose Spring trail crosses this (Panamint) valley. As this is in the vicinity of where the last traces of Egan, Wheeler's other lost guide, were obtained it is possible these bones are a portion of his remains, and the first of either of those unfortunate guides that has ever yet been discovered. Proceeding 40 miles further Mr. Gregg reached Hot Springs about dark, and Panamint the following morning. The weather was intensely hot, the breezes, occasionally blowing, actually feeling as hot as a blast from the mouth of a furnace; when the cork was withdrawn from the canteen the steam would rise from the water within—which indicates a reasonably warm place even for a lawyer.

The Potosi Tunnel Company of Cerro Gordo.

We are indebted to Mr. John Simpson, M. E., for the prospectus issued by the above company. It is accompanied with maps of Cerro Gordo hill and plans and estimates of the enterprise, which we really believe to be a very promising one. The design is to continue the Potosi tunnel, which is now in some 400 feet, clear through all the mines on the hill back to the huge Buena Vista, a total distance of 4,400 feet, below the outcrop of which it will strike 2,140 feet. It will tap the Union at a depth of over 1,000 feet, and all the other ledges at a corresponding depth. It is to afford facilities for removing ores from all these mines at a cost not exceeding $1 per ton, besides working three mines belonging to the tunnel company. The estimated total cost is a little less than $100,000. We have no doubt but this would be very advantageous to all the mining interests of Cerro Gordo, and a good investment of itself.

Panamint.

Mr. Gregg is highly pleased with the propects of this camp. Jacobs had just paid out several thousand dollars to the boys. Timbers were most all out and on the ground ready for his mill machinery, which was then due. Senator Jones and brother were expected in the camp very soon. Grain and whisky were non est, both essential to the comfort of animals of course; but for man there was plenty to eat for which the boys wouldn't charge a cent. They are a hospitable set, those boys out there

Impassable.

Roadmaster John White informs us that the high waters have washed out a bent and otherwise damaged the bridge across the slough this side the Bend City bridge, and that it is impassable; it is quite possible it will be destroyed entirely. The main structure is in no no danger. It is hardly possible to remedy the trouble with the slough bridge until the water falls, which will be several weeks.

Bounty Money.

As several ex-soldiers have submitted inquiries to us personally regarding their rights to back bounty under the late law of Congress, we publish the advertisement of W. H. Aiken of San Francisco, as a party better able to furnish the desired information. We understand him to be the Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California, and worthy of confidence. See his advertisement.

Notary for Panamint.

We are told by those who are acquainted with Wm. C. Smith, the newly appointed Notary and Justice for Panamint, that he is both competent and accommodating, and altogether quite a popular young man out there, so that parties at a distance desiring transcripts of records or other business attended to there can entrust it to him with the assurance of having it well done.

Where to Apply.

Parties wanting as good cabbage, potatoes, carrots and all such, as can be obtained in the country, can find them at Mr. Walter's place near the Post. At least the big lot he sent us were the very best all around we have yet seen. Among the rest was a lot of roasting ears, the first of the season.

Sold.

As will be seen by the notice elsewhere Hiskey & Walker have turned their Lida mill property over to Gen. Page, who took charge on the 8th.

Sylvania.

Messrs. Connelly and Lake have returned from quite an extended tour around the country, among others having visited Sylvania. There they were, as Mr. Connelly tells us, most hospitably received by Dr. Marriotte and brother, the Doctor demonstrating the fact that he is a good cook as well as furnace man and miner, and, moreover, garnished the good things with a welcome which made the boys appreciate things very highly. The Marriotte furnace (which is a success) according to the Doctor is the invention or suggestion of Mr. Mosheimer, formerly Superintendent of some extensive borax works at Columbus. Adopting his plans the Marriotte brothers made the experiment, and have thereby determined a means which will enable miners to supply themselves with all necessaries while prospecting these But for this nearly all in that district or interested in it would have to suspend operations for lack of means, no matter how much rich ore they might have on the dump. Now they can erect their own furnaces to run without a blast, and take out bullion as required for current expenses, or make it a regular and profitable business on a somewhat reduced scale if they choose to do so. The Marriotte furnace has a capacity of two tons of ore per day, working up to 96 per cent. of the lead contained, that is to say, the slag assays only 4 per cent. in lead, which is as good as any furnace will do. This furnace is called a reverberatory. From 2,300 pounds of ore run through the Marriotte furnace a few days since, 937 pounds of bullion were obtained, containing silver to the value of $451 98. The Emma No. 2 mine, belonging to Louis Marriotte, has quite a lot of good ore on the dump, 20 tons of which is to be put through this furnace immediately. This gentleman is also the discoverer of a large body of fire clay, conveniently at hand, of a fine quality, and quantity sufficient to supply all demands of the camp. Mr. Marriotte invites all the miners having use for this clay to go and help themselves. With this, the district possesses within itself every essential for successful furnace operations—a tolerable supply of water an abundance of wood of the best quality, fire clay, and most important of all, plenty of ores which smelt with the greatest facility. It is plausibly claimed that with these advantages bullion can be produced in Sylvania fully one third cheaper than in Cerro Gordo, and apparently of a higher average value. But returning to these mines. The Emma No. 2 shows at 18 feet deep a three foot ledge solid, of gray carbonates, assaying by numerous tests from $45 to $150 per ton. W. F. Kincaid has a shaft down 112 feet, the deepest in the district, on a silver ledge ten inches wide at that depth, assaying $800 per ton. Also on a lead mine called the "Liberal," a shaft 55 feet deep, with a four foot ledge, and quite a lot of ore on the dump. He has also an open cut on another ledge showing a face of 11 feet of splendid lead ore, the best in the district. There is about 100 tons of this on the dump. Mr. Kincaid is building a furnace, same style as the Marriotte, but larger, to reduce this ore, and will have it ready to run in about two weeks. Kincaid trotted the boys all over the district, spending a whole day in showing them what it was. Hubbard & Halsey have a shaft down on the "Gladiator" 110 feet, next deepest in the district. They have a large quantity of ore on the dump. Like most of the Sylvania miners they have interests in Gold Mountain and Lida, and were there working upon these pursuant to requirements of law. On this account there are but few miners in Sylvania at present, and many other locations equally as promising as those mentioned could only be examined from the surface. Among them is one owned by Dave Mansford and others, upon which a tunnel is now run 80 feet, which in 30 feet more will tap the ledge at a depth of 150 feet. These locations are all apparently on one and the same ledge, or in a quartzite formation some 300 feet in width, which has been traced and prospected more or less every 300 or 400 feet for 10 miles, or clear into the White Mountains. It is a wonderful formation, and will surely, some day, develope some wonderful bodies of ore. Though found in fair quantities, no extraordinary large bodies, like that of the Union in Cerro Gordo, have yet been struck, but at the same stage of development the prospects are just as flattering as they ever were upon that famous mine. We have great faith in the future of Sylvania, and the "capital" which is going to verify this faith is this little, cheap furnace. From that will come the sinews of war, and the miners will not sit down and longingly look to New York and London for the "coming man," who in these later days comes not all.

Weather.

We have had more or less cloudy weather every day, and at times considerable rain, during the past two weeks. The black clouds, rolling thunder and occasional vivid lightning tended to renew the half forgotten habit of dodging the flash and preparing to run to the cellar out of the way of tornadoes, as people used to do, and now do in the Eastern States where the electric fluid is in the habit of knocking a few of them over every day or two.

The S. S. Library.

The new library for the Sunday School is now in the case ready for distribution. It consists of over three hundred volumes of excellent miscellaneous, and many of them, most beautifully bound books.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

A Novel Legal Question.

P. Reddy, attorney for plaintiff, has filed in the Clerk's office a complaint in an action in which G. G. Burckhardt is plaintiff, and —— Burckhardt, his wife, defendant, which presents rather a novel legal point or two. In brief it is as follows: Plaintiff and defendant were married in Germany in 1851. In 1854 plaintiff came to the United States, leaving his wife behind. Soon after his departure she applied for a decree of divorce on the grounds of wilfull desertion. The decree was granted in due form, all without plaintiff's knowledge. In 1857 defendant came to Los Angeles where plaintiff was, and he, knowing nothing, as is alleged, of her action in regard to the divorce, accepted her as his wife, and as husband and wife they came to Lone Pine, where they acquired some property, which was duly recorded as a joint homestead. On the 11th of the present month plaintiff was informed by letter from Germany of the matter of the divorce, receiving at the same time a duly certified copy of the decree, all from his father, and the first information he had ever had in relation to it. Immediately on the receipt of this information he ceased to co-habit with her or acknowledge her as his wife in any manner, and has now entered suit to compel a relinquishment of her wifely interest in the homestead property. The case comes before the District Court at the next term. The answer, when filed, may present some mitigating circumstances for the bold fraud alleged against the defendant, but any way it is rather a curious case.

Woe to Lo.

From the upper end of the county comes more complaints of drunken Indians, and ere long either poor Lo or those sneaks who furnish him fire-water will come to grief over this nefarious business. The Indians, sober, are quiet inoffensive and excellent help for the whites both in field and house, and by the whites are appreciated and esteemed accordingly, but drunk he is a "sodom," liable to get himself and others in serious trouble at any moment. The other day Mr. Darrah found a lot of these Indians, male and female, in the road some seven or eight miles north of this place, all as drunk and boisterous as whisky could make them After a fashion they were on the war-path; but it was too crooked and devious for them to make anything out of it at that time, though one of these days they will be more successful, and then there will be a bit of a muss and fewer doggeries.

Grain.

The grain threshing season is now fairly begun. The crops, so far, are turning out remarkably well. Westerville's machine is at work on Walters' crop, near the Post, which is yielding so well as to make Mr. Walters' method of planting worth mentioning. That is simply to sow during the Fall or early Winter instead of the Spring months as is the general custom. We saw this crop a short time before it was cut, and it is rarely we have seen a more promising one any portion of the State, the fine stand being mainly due to the early sowing.

The Silver Sprout.

Mr. W. M. Donnell, of San Francisco paid the Silver Sprout or Virginia Consolidated mines a visit this week, having come up for that purpose. Mr. Donnell is a mining man of the highest reputation, and his opinion is deemed of value by all his numerous acquaintances. In relation to the Virginia Consolidated, it is enough to say that he deems the prospects, so far as developed, as fair as could reasonably be wished, and will amply justify the expenditure of a large amount in further explorations.

Personals.

V. A. Gregg, Esq., J. L. Darrah and S. P. Moffatt have gone to Sylvania-Lida and around....W. J. Lake and T. F. A. Connelly are off for Panamint....Mr. Donnell, of the Virginia Consolidated, has returned to San Francisco; will probably repeat his visit in about a month....W. L. Hunter and Sam Regensburger of Cerro Gordo paid us a flying visit; said, when they started, they were going to adhere rigidly to the main road till they got to the Hill.

Medical.

As will be seen by his card elsewhere Dr. Hehner has located his office at the Blaney House and tenders his professional services. We understand him to be a well educated young physician.

Vegetables.

We would direct attention to Mr. Harger's proffer to furnish vegetables from his Bishop Creek ranch. Orders from any portion of the county will be filled per return stage, if so desired.

Earthquake.

It is said we were favored with quite a rattling little earthquake about 5 P. M. Monday last. Might have been; didn't know anything about it in this print shop.

Lager.

Henry Smith is removing the Burkhardt brewery from Lone Pine to Panamint, which camp he proposes to supply with a beverage a long ways ahead of the regular imported tangle-leg.

For a Daily Mail.

A petition is being circulated, and generally signed, praying that the mail service between Bakersfield and Lone Pine be increased from a tri-weekly to a daily, as it ought to be.

Failed.

The stage from the north arrived on time yesterday morning, but brought nothing but the express box.

Piute District.

Doss, Morris, & Co. have their new arastra in full operation, but have made no clean up.

White Mountain District.

From Mr. Connelly we learn that the contracts on the Broder & Moffatt mines have been finished, a shaft on each of the three mines being down 50 feet. Two of these mines show considerable good ore at the bottom, but Mr. Moffatt will continue to sink and prospect awhile longer before undertaking the erection of reduction works. Messrs. Cowse and Rhody, of Kern county, have recently made discoveries of which very high hopes are entertained. They are very energetic prospectors and intend to prove the value of their mines before they quit them. Matt. Stuart, Tobasco, Capt. Chase, the irrepressible, and some fifteen others besides those already mentioned, are all delving away, firm in the faith that they have splendid mines, and intend to have them in available shape by the time works are erected, which it is hoped will be sometime this Fall.

Piute Postoffice.

This is the name of the new postoffice recently established at Round Valley, which, to avoid complications with other Round Valleys, we will add is in this county. Postmaster Yaney, Bishop Creek office, dispatched the first mail to the Piute postoffice on the 17th, the "mail boy" being Grandfather Clark, aged 70.

Bishop Creek.

The so-called army worms have disappeared from Bishop Creek, and it is found that they did not damage the growing corn near as much as was feared....A fine rain visited that portion of the valley Monday last.... Crops are excellent.

For Texas.

T. J. Taylor and family, of Bishop Creek, left for Texas on the 20th instant. Mr. Taylor is one of the early settlers of the valley.

The Placer Mines,

Just west of Bishop, are turning out very well. Chamberlain, Brown & Co. are making good wages all the time.

The Idea of a Universal Medicine is at last realized in DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS. This concentrated essence of the finest medicinal herbs and roots in the Western Hemisphere, eradicates all diseases that have got undermined the sources of vitality, and in Chronic Indigestion, Nervous Headache, Congestion of the Liver, Rheumatism, Gout, General Debility and innumerable ulcerous and scabious disorders, it is a specific absolute and infallible.

How the Modocs Get On.

The Modocs have had better health during the past Winter than I had anticipated. But five deaths have occurred since they came here. The conduct of the tribe is and has been as good as we could expect or ask. All seem willing and anxious to do as near as they can as we wish them to. Too much praise cannot be accorded to Bogus Charlie for his evident desire to improve and learn the ways of good men. Steamboat Frank is much interested in learning to read. We keep them well supplied with books and charts, and when opportunity offers give them instructions. Frank and Schonchin Pete read pretty well considering the chances, and several of the others (Hooker Jim, Scar-face and several others) read a little and spell some. We have them at work gardening all good weather, but it is very wet and cold here this Spring, and we make rather slow progress. They know very nearly nothing about farming or gardening, so everything they do has to be closely watched and carefully supervised. They are very good workers and show a great desire to learn how to work. We shall not be able to do as much this season as we would like on account of not having the means to procure a team and the necessary implements for their use.—Ex.

—Family physicians are carefully noting the promising state of the green apple crop.

—There are still some people living in the mountains of Kentucky who have never seen a grain of tea or coffee in their lives.

—This is given as a Delaware obituary: "His hat wasn't always cocked over his left ear, but he didn't owe a butcher in town."

—"Thou rainest in this bosom," as the chap said when a basin of water was thrown over him by the lady he was serenading.

—A Leavenworth paper notes the death of a man of "thirty five years standing." Chairs must be scarce out there.

"Change cars," is what a city bootblack said to a countryman the other day when he had finished blacking one of his brogans.

—A Detroit boy propounds this awful theory: "What would you rather do, be eaten up by a tiger or have all the maple sugar you can swaller?"

—The last Congress is triumphantly pointed to as one in which there were very few jobs. We'll admit it, provided Jobs is spelt with a capital J.

—It is pleasant to remember that Thomas Jefferson was a famous fiddler, but it is sad to think what trouble the Democracy have now in dancing to his music.

—Augustus Leonard dressed up like an Indian and descended on the cabin of a Missouri family for fun. They kept the body in ice for three days for his father to come.

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's
CALIFORNIA VINEGAR
BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

PANAMINT.

The Prominent Mines and Their Real Value.

[From The Eureka Sentinel, July 16.]

Judge William Adams has placed in our hands the following interesting letter, received by him from J. W. Whitlatch, in which is contained an interesting account concerning the mining outlook of Panamint district, near Death Valley, in California. The letter is dated from Desert Springs, Kern county, California, the writer at that time being on his way to Ord district to examine the condition of the mines of that locality. Following is the letter:

I have been to Panamint district, and have given it a searching investigation. It is a fine prospect on the surface but I do not believe the mineral will extend to any great depth. I am satisfied the lodes will go down but am afraid the mineral will not. In every case where sinking has been done to the depth of 20 feet, the ore becomes poorer in most of the leads. Still, there is mineral as far as any sinking has been done, but it is confined to lines or streaks, not extending through the whole mass. Among the

are the Jacobs' Wonder of the World, Stewart's Wonder, Wyoming, Hudson River, Harrison and the Rising Sun. The Wonder of the World, Jacobs' mine, has three shafts and an open cut. The first shaft is sunk 12 feet deep; the vein is seven feet wide and shows what is known as glance copper ore, very rich, and is about two feet in width. In some places the balance of the vein carries little mineral, but not in paying quantities.

THE NO. 2 SHAFT

is an open cut run 12 feet along the vein and 10 feet deep. The vein here, like in the first, is about seven feet wide, and shows mineral all through, but seems to concentrate into seams, centering in one side of the vein matter as the work progresses.

NO. 3 SHAFT,

in size 8x8, is sunk 50 feet deep, the width of the ledge being the same as in the other two. Near the surface the ore is very rich, but at the bottom not more than two feet will pay. The lode is composed of a large quantity of white, barren rock, the ore showing best near the surface, though found in paying quantities to the present depth of the shaft. A large amount of blue stained rock is also found in the mine which looks pretty but does not amount to anything. There has been, thus far, taken out of the mine, as near as can be estimated, about one hundred and fifty tons of ore, one-third of which is certainly good, the balance, if it pays, is certainly very deceptive in its appearance. I am of the opinion that the best will go as high as $200 to the ton, perhaps more. The lode is certainly a fissure vein, although running through a lime formation. Further in the vein passes out of the lime into a tertiary granite formation, and is traceable at least a mile on the surface.

STEWART'S WONDER MINE

and the Challenge mine are located on this lode, both of which present the same appearance as the above mine. The Wyoming is located on the opposite mountain, on a similar lode, passing out of a lime into a tertiary granite rock. This mine has a tunnel run in on the vein about 120 feet, following it along the ledge, which does not present a very flattering appearance. Still there is no reason why any lack of confidence should be wanting, because it does not show any good prospects on the surface. Directly over the tunnel the Wyoming passes over the cone of a very high mountain, and on the opposite side of which, from the tunnel, is where the best showing on the surface presents itself. There are about 500 feet of the lode creeping out on the opposite side of the mountain, which shows a most flattering outcrop. The lode at the widest point where it appears in rich seams is about five feet in width, and shows to be about two feet at the narrowest point, and will average near $200 per ton. There is no sinking done on the mine except where the tunnel enters the hill. The mine has been bonded to Senator J. P. Jones for a short time for $60,000, which, to appearances, is more than its real value.

THE HEMLOCK MINE,

similar to the Wyoming, is situated further south on another mountain, and has a shaft sunk 20 feet, showing a well defined vein four feet wide, but which spangles out and is disappearing. A little more galena appears in this mine than in former ones. The Hemlock is also bonded to Senator Jones at $25,000, which I consider is all it now shows to be worth.

The Harrison, Hudson River, Alabama and several other mines are located on what is known as the Happy Valley side, and present a similar appearance to the above mentioned. The Hudson River is equally as good, showing as well as any in the camp, although no work has been done on it yet. They are now at work on the Harrison mine. It is rather small, but well defined and very rich; the widest points in the mine are about four feet, and the vein is very well defined and shows very rich ore throughout. I think the ore would go at least $200 to the ton. The shaft, which has been just commenced, is eight feet deep, and the ore taken out of it is the best in the camp, in my opinion, to mill, except that of the Sunrise. There is little if any difference in the Harrison and Hudson River ores to mill, either of which I consider the best ore in the district outside of Nick Wonder's Sunrise. The Harrison mine is situated on the summit of a mountain 9,000 feet above the sea level, the croppings along the vein showing good ore the entire length. I think a large quantity of good ore could with little expense be extracted from the mine by commencing at the lower end of the croppings and following the vein. By the time the further extremity of the ledge would be reached, a distance of 400 feet, a depth of 120 feet would be attained, which would prospect the mine and at the same time 1,600 tons of $200 rock could be taken out. This may look a little extravagant, but it is my belief that it can be done.

THE HUDSON RIVER MINE, is on the same mountain though a mile and a half further west. About 300 feet of surface croppings is in sight and in two places show to be very rich, confined to small streaks from three to ten inches in width. The formation is a conglomerate of lime and tertiary granite sprinkled with a slaty matter. The course of the vein is nearly east and west and dips to the north on an angle of 45 degrees. The mine would produce pay ore from the commencement, as would all the mines in this district if properly directed.

THE ALABAMA

is situated near the Harrison on the same mountain. It has but a small vein, only being a foot to eighteen inches, but very rich in ore, showing a little more of the copper than the Harrison or the Hudson River. The Alabama crops out for 500 or 600 feet, showing a well-defined vein at various points. There is plenty of wood at these mines—cedar and a very superior quality of nut pine. There is an abundance of water situated two and a half miles down a steep mountain, and it is only a question of money to build a good road so as to have the water brought to the mines. These three mines—the Harrison, Hudson River and Alabama—together with the water and other locations, belong to the same parties.

THE SUNRISE,

or Nick Wonder's mine, is located at the head of the main gulch of Surprise Canyon, and is a singular looking deposit. It has not the appearance of a vein, though it may be. It is in a lime formation on the main side of the main Panamint mountain, 200 feet above the gulch, and at an exact altitude of 8,000 feet above the level of the sea. The deposit shows to be about 80 feet in length by about 40 feet in width. About 125 tons of ore have been taken out, portions of which is worth from $300 to $400 per ton; the balance I think will average $150. I estimate that 400 tons of ore are now in sight. The mass seems to have been squeezed out of the lime into various shapes. Less copper appears in this mine than in any other of the district.

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD,

or, as it is commonly called, "Jacobs' Wonder," is a fair representative mine of the district. The mineral is black, copper ore, and the vein carries considerable blue or carbonate copper in spots, while on the outside near the wall rock the quartz is barren. It is fair to say that out of seven feet two is good ore, but not much, if any, more will pay. The Mexicans have been running a sort of smelting works, which is but a small concern run by an ordinary 46-inch bellows. They have also an arastra which they have been working. Two tons of ore, selected as a sample of the best ore, was taken from the Hemlock and sent to Cerro Gordo and produced $490. This I should say was a very good general sample of the district. Some portions may be better, others poorer. Black lime is found mixed through the ore deposit and large bowlders, weighing from three to four tons, appear on the surface. Between these bowlders streaks two and three feet in width of chloride rich as any ever found in old Austin, are found. What we used to call bromide of silver is also found. Take any of this ore and put it in a forge and it will blister out equally as well as the old Yankee Blade ore of Union district. It is impossible for any one to make head or tail out of this singular deposit; still I think they will succeed in finding a defined lead. At all events, the owners have a fortune in sight—at least $50,000. The ore appears to be a grayish looking sulphuret; the quartz is white, of a fine, soft texture, fully charged with mineral, and will yield 80 per cent. of its metal by the ordinary mill process.

to reach the Panamint mines is hard to travel—heavy sand and high mountains to pass over. The distance from Tulare, the present terminus of the railroad, coming from San Francisco via Bakersfield and Havilah by stage to Indian Wells, is 140 miles; from Indian Wells to the mines, over a frightfully heavy, sandy road, 80 miles; and coming in by way of Los Angeles it is all of 250 miles.

Panamint Valley is 1,350 feet above, and Death Valley, on the east side, is 240 feet below the level of the sea. The mines are situated all the way from 6,000 to 8,000 feet high. The major part of the mountains, until you have attained an elevation of 7,000 feet, are barren of any soil or earth, all solid rock. The hillsides are so steep that it is impossible to take a horse to any of the mines without first making a trail. A good road is built in Surprise Canyon from Panamint to the spot selected for the town site at the upper springs.

I have no doubt but what a general stampede will occur sooner or later to this place, but not until next Spring, as no money can be made until the machinery arrives and is put in operation.

Any one putting up a mill in Panamint now would certainly make a fortune; as the chances for ore to mill is a "dead shot," and can be furnished in abundance. I visited thirteen mines or prospects that show a large quantity of rock, and the chances for mining good ore out of any of the mines is splendid. Nature seems to have done for this camp more real prospecting than any place I ever saw.

The greatest expense will be to build roads to and from the mines, in order to get the ore to the mills. The mines are scattered over a large scope of country, although you can go to the summit of the mountains and take in the whole country. Still it will require at least five days of hard labor to get to all of these mines. I did four of the hardest days' work I ever accomplished to see for myself the different locations. On a clear day by going to the summit of the mountain Holcomb mountain, Ord district, Ivanpah, Cerro Gordo, the Sierras and Fort Tejon mountains can be plainly seen. Death Valley streches its barren wastes along the eastern base of the mountain and west of the valley. But little grass is found in the country, and provender for animals will always command a high price. I am convinced that it will be a rich camp. I will report on the condition of Ord district as soon as I arrive there.

The Coming Race.

The city of San Francisco offers a purse of $25,000 for a running race of four miles and repeat, open to all the horses in the world. The race to come off at the new track, near Central Park, on the 7th of November next. The first horse is to get $13,000, the second $5,000, the third $4,000, the fourth $3,000. No horse is barred out, come from what part of the world he may. All horses east of the Rocky Mountains are to receive $1,000 each for expenses, and those from Europe $1,500 each. The rules for weight adopted are as follows: Three year olds are to carry ninety pounds; four year olds one hundred and four pounds; five year olds one hundred and ten pounds; six year olds, and over, one hundred and fourteen pounds. It is expected that this will be the most interesting as well as the most exciting race ever run in America.

Milk Toast.

Boil one quart of good milk, add some quarter pound of butter, more or less, as you wish the toast rich. Toast your slices of bread brown but not scorched black, and pour the milk over hot. Some like the milk thickened with a little flour—one teaspoonful of flour wet with a little water and stirred into the milk while boiling.

Road Steamers.

The Bakersfield Courier says that Col. Hyde, one of the inventors and manufacturers of the Hyde road steamer, had paid that locality a visit, and was on his way home intending to bring out two of his machines for use there. One of them is to be used as a motive power in heavy ditching, for which it is especially adapted, and the other for use on common roads. He contemplates a trip to Cerro Gordo to return with a train of bullion wagons. Though we think it doubtful if this experiment proves a marked success without some preparation of the road in many places, yet we have high hopes of much ultimate good to follow the effort. We feel assured that these machines, if not so already, can be brought to such a degree of effective usefulness as, next to a railroad, to fulfil every requirement of transportation on these sandy, waterless wastes, whatever they may be able to do on rocky, rough roads. If available for this purpose at all there is scarcely a limit to the number of places throughout the Great Basin where these steam roadsters may not be most advantageously employed. We, too, have always taken a very great interest in these steamers, and have a faith equally as great that sooner or later they are destined to take a leading place in the advancement of all this sandy inland region. This will certainly be the case, beginning soon, if they have now been perfected to the extent claimed.

Undelivered Land Patents.

There are remaining in the General Land Office undelivered more than 300,000 patents for agricultural lands. Of this number 75,000 were from Illinois and nearly as many from Indiana and Missouri. Among them are patents signed by President Monroe and by every President down to Lincoln The cause of this accumulation of patents is found in the fact that many land owners, believe that a duplicate Receiver's receipt is sufficient evidence to the title of their lands, but they ought not to be so regarded. Entries are being constantly cancelled by the U. S. Land Office for informality, and if the address of one who is interested is not known at once at the local land office, as is often the case, the man to whom he has sold his land will some day be astonished to find another person holding a grant patent for his property. Every man in the States and Territories who has been relying for more than five years on a Receiver's receipt should make inquiry through the proper channels, and find out whether the General Land Office has issued a patent for his claim, or suspended or cancelled his entry. No landholder should rest secure in his title until he has the Government patent in his hands.

A Fight with Indians.

A company of the Sixth cavalry had a battle with a large body of Comanche Indians, near Fort Still, a few days ago. Six soldiers were killed. These Indians afterwards killed a stage station keeper and his wife; next a party of wood-choppers were attacked and killed. A body of rangers, under command of Major Jones, were at last accounts completely surrounded by a large body of Comanches.

De Long.

The Lyons County Times says of De Long: We are assured that Mr. De Long will remain in the field till the last ballot is cast in the Joint Convention, to be holden at the Capitol in Carson City, in January next. If any one withdraws the prospects are it will be some one else.

To Hades by Rail.

Mount Vesuvius is to have a railroad to the top, costing $4,000,000. The upper station will be guarded by a pent house, so as to protect it in case of an eruption, and the line is to be constructed in such a way that the utmost danger to be apprehended is the loss of a few hundred feet of rails.

The Diamond Swindle.

Lightner has sued Lent to recover $20,000 which he paid to be let into the "big thing"—the diamond swindle. This is wrong of Lightner. He oughtn't to light on Lent for money Lent on such good security as diamonds.

Fixed.

Postage on newspapers is finally fixed by both Houses at two cents per pound, prepaid, but free within the county, the law to take effect on the first of January next.

—What is the key-note of good-breeding? B natural.

WHY IT HANGS.

The Los Angeles Express is of the opinion that our railroad enterprise is hanging fire rather more than it should do, and that the real cause of this was the ill-advised proposition to make it a wooden track instead of iron; that that proposition at once depreciated its value in the eyes of capitalists both at home and abroad, who, as a matter of course, would not invest in any such temporary and inefficient substitute. Such was and is our own views as affecting the chances of help from the outside capitalists. But those who claimed to know have all the time asserted that such outside help could not be secured, and that we must depend wholly on our own resources and n doing so must "cut our clothes according to the cloth." It was asserted that, while home capital was entirely unequal to the construction of an iron, it was both sufficient and willing for a wooden road, provided it could be demonstrated that such a road would fulfill all the required conditions.

On this point we have this to say: We are perfectly satisfied that a wooden road constructed and equipped substantially as now proposed by Engineer Crawford would answer the immediate requirements very well, and for much less cost than one of iron. As originally proposed it would be of no value whatever. The later plan supposes half-buried rails of excellent timber, thereby avoiding the troubles from warping, and a broad wearing surface for light locomotives and cars with with wheels especially adapted for the work. There is not a doubt, with suitable equipments, but such a road is perfectly practical in a mechanical point of view. The strap rail, or rails of native timber, either with or without a hard-wood facing in lieu of the strap, and heavy iron wheels, is both unduly expensive and impractical. We make a material distinction on these points; we advocate the construction of the one kind of a wooden road, or at least the beginning with such, for several reasons. First, because its value will be perfectly demonstrated as the work progresses without risking the loss of as much as one per cent. of the outlay. Second, because if found to answer the purpose, as it certainly will to a moderately satisfactory extent, it can be completed, owned and operated wholly at home, or by home capital. Third, and most important of all, it is a tangible and most important beginning, and just so much work done toward the grand desideratum, a first class iron track narrow-gauge railroad, inevitably bound some day in the early future to form the first and most important link in a great thoroughfare from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific; a road which will tap and develope the richest and largest expanse of mineral producing territory within our national domain. But if home capital cannot or will not undertake this beginning on this plan, it is absurd to appeal to that abroad to aid a mere expedient. In that view the admittance of the wooden road proposition has done a degree of harm it will be difficult to remedy.

Capital looking for paying investments (and there is no scarcity of such in the great money centers) demands a business proposition supported by facts and figures of the day to begin with Chances for business largely prospective are rarely accepted as satisfactory collaterals with cent per cent. capitalists, and unfortunately for us our collaterals are much of this character. Those of us best acquainted with the unbounded resources of this great region may and do feel that we know in reason that the developments of the day, as shown by actual figures, will scarcely equal a hundreth part of those bound to follow as a certain sequence of the investment sought. But how to make this knowledge available when submitted to outside capitalists is the question. A true statement of the business this day awaiting this road ought to be sufficient to command the attention desired, but this we do know that such an abstract statement will fall wonderfully short of the truth as shown by the most reasonable probabilities. If these probabilities are admitted on their real merits, as to a certain extent they may be, then it will do to act on the proposition of The Express and send out one or more of our best men to enlist the desired outside help. But it will be a misfortune if we cannot do this work ourselves. The control of this road otherwise falls we know not where, and if there is any place especially interested in maintaining that control, Los Angeles is the one in this instance. That city, San Bernardino and this county would do far better to build and alone control a wooden tramway, run by mules only, than to merely have a passenger interest in a first-class wide-gauge iron road on the same ground. The tramway will itself build the other in due time, and in this belief we think an earnest effort ought first to be made at home. The future of Los Angeles, as a city, will be settled one way or the other, as this railroad proposition is settled. If this franchise goes by the board, its chances to become a city goes by the board.

Water Spout in Eureka, Nevada—Lives Lost.

On the 24th ultimo Eureka, Nevada, was the scene of a terrible flood or cloud burst. A dispatch to the San Francisco papers says:

It had been raining with great violence from early morning till noon, when a cloud burst on a lofty range of mountains to the east. A vast volume of water rushed down the canyon where the town is located. The eastern part of the town was flooded in ten minutes by a fearful rush of water, constantly increasing in violence and depth. By its impetuousity the people in that portion of the place were hemmed in. Every moment houses were torn from their foundations and swept away with their occupants. Ropes were procured and a line formed. Brave men thus protected dashed into the torrent and saved many lives. Only a few women and children were lost. The body of one, Mrs. Broy, was recovered. Rodger Robinett, reporter of The Cupel, is amongst the drowned The Cupel office was swept away. Bodies are being brought to the Court House as fast as recovered. Three Chinamen are lost. Thirty houses are swept away, and all that part of the town devoted to dance houses and other places of amusement is gone. The flood lasted only half an hour. The total loss of life is not yet known. It is believed it will reach 25 or 30. The weather is still threatening.

Through the Tail of a Comet.

[From The New York Tribune.]

"It will gratify many of your readers," says Prof. Parkhurst, "to see the following account of the earth's passage through the tail of the comet of 1861, which I copy from Brande & Cox's Dictionary, article "Comet." As, that time, that comet had not been seen in the northen hemisphere, no one had an opportunity to observe the phenomena with scientific accuracy:

This leads us to mention a very interesting circumstance in the history of the comet. About the time of the nodal passage (June 28, evening) it was remarked that the earth was behind the comet only two degrees in longitude, as seen from the sun; and the latter body being the nearer to that luminary, it followed that the direction of the tail was such as to bring it either upon or very near our globe. Accordingly it was conjectured that, with due allowance for curvature, it was quite possible that the earth might have been involved in the tail on the evening of June 30, when she arrived at the comet's nodal point of longitude. Observations subsequently published, which enable us to determine the direction of the tail with more certainty, appear to indicate that the main branch was in advance of the earth on that evening, but that the secondary tail, or the diffused nebulosity, which separated from the principal ray, was actually directed upon us, and was probably intermigled with our atmosphere. And it is a remarkable and significant fact, that not only in various parts of England and Ireland, but also in Spain, Italy and Switzerland, and other Continental countries, a very peculiar phosphoresence or illumination of the sky was perceptible during the early hours of the night in question, which many persons supposed to be caused by the aurora borealis, unusual as the phenomenon is in the Summer months, especially in the south of Europe; at the same time it was remarked that the luminosity of the sky did not resemble the usual effect of the aurora, but was something quite exceptional. We incline to attribute the phenomenon to the presence of cometic matter (if matter it can be termed) in our atmosphere."

Conventions and Elections.

The following record has been carefully prepared and corrected. It embraces the Conventions so far called, and contains the time of the different State elections to be held this year:

July 14—Arkansas Constitutional Convention meets, if carried.

July 15—Indiana Democratic Convention, in Indianapolis.

July 15—Ohio Democratic Convention, at Columbus. (A meeting of the State Committee is to be held to see if the call shall be withdrawn until after the election on the proposed new Constitution.)

July 29—Alabama Democratic Convention, in Montgomery.

August 3—Election in Kentucky.

August 5—Kansas Farmers' Convention, in Topeka.

August 6—Election in North Carolina.

August 6—Michigan Reform Mass Convention, in Lansing.

August 18—Special election in Ohio on the new constitution.

August 18—Pennsylvania Republican Convention, in Harrisburg.

August 19—Tennessee Democratic Convention, in Nashville.

August 26—Pennsylvania Democratic Convention, in Pittsburg.

Sept. 1—Election in Vermont.

Sept. 14—Election in Maine.

Oct. 13—Election in Ohio, if new constitution is rejected.

Oct. 13—Election in Indiana.

Oct. 13—Election in Iowa.

Oct. 13—Election in Nebraska.

Oct. 14—Election in Georgia.

Nov. 3—Elections in Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Wisconsin.

NOTE—All the above named States (thirty-two) elect Representatives for the Forty-fourth Congress, besides State officers varying in each State. Rhode Island will elect members of Congress in that State. The elections to the Forty-fourth Congress will be completed next year as follows: New Hampshire in March; Connecticut in April; California in September; Mississippi in November. The Forty-fourth Congress will, unless sooner convened, meet on the first Monday in December, 1875.

Cloud Bursts,

From all quarters come additional stories of disasters by cloud-bursts. Fifty honses and many lives were destroyed in Moravia, in Europe, by one. On the night of the 26th ultimo, Pittsburg and Alleghany City (Pa.) were visited by an awful cloud-burst, by which about three hundred persons were drowned, and a vast amount of property destroyed. Kentucky and other States have been similarly visited, but without much loss of life except by lightning, six men being killed in Woodford county by one stroke.

The Visalia Branch.

"Down brakes" will soon be echoed with a vim at the depot in the western edge of this city. The grading is going forward, the laying of the iron will soon begin, and the engine will be at the junction in a few days.—[Delta, July 24.

St. Nicholas for August

Is an excellent "hot weather" number. It contains "The Affair of the 'Sandpiper,'" a story of adventures on the water, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps; "A Whaleman's Ghost," a story of the ocean by J. H. Woodbury; and even a poem, telling in a very quaint and amusing way "How a Little Bird went to Sea." There are large installments of the two serials, "Fast Friends," by J. T. Trowbridge, and "What Might Have Been Expected," by Frank R. Stockton. As the first of these stories is of the North and the other of the South, the adventures of the boy-heroes are not at all similar. Natural History receives a good deal of attention in this number. The Zoological Gardens of London are described, with eight pictures of their occupants; there is a story in French (for translation) of a Pet Monkey; the exploits of some "Missionary Insects" are told; there is a sketch of the life and adventures of a Snail; and certain ants that raise crops and some birds that lay out streets are described by the lively and wise "Jack-in-the-Pulpit." Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm contributes "Willie's Little Brown Sister," a sketch of the far West; and Mrs. A. M. Diaz has a thoroughly New England sketch, "The Moving of the Barn," with funny amateur pictures. The poems, "In Summer Time," and "The Little Doll that Lied," are each marked by a peculiar quaint rumor that will be sure to make them widely read and quoted, and the first is most exquisitely illustrated from designs by the author. Besides all this there is a beautiful frontispiece; short stories by Charlotte Adams and Lizzie W. Champney; a practical article on Wood Carving and the usual excellent special departments.

Laura as a Milliner.

The San Francisco Post of the 15th ultimo says: Hearing on the street that Laura D. Fair, in addition to operating in stocks, was investing in mines and mining property, we traced the rumor to its source, and, on inquiry at room 45, Merchant's Exchange, the office of the Silver Column Mining Company, of Wallapai district, Arizona, we found that the lady in question was very largely interested in that company, and was furnishing the money to put up a mill on its property, and, from the value of the ores in its mines, it is fair to presume that we will soon be called upon to note the arrival of bullion from that district.

Beecher, et als.

Mrs. Tilton denounces her husband and most emphatically denies any criminal connection with Beecher in word, deed or thought. Beecher strenuously asseverates the same thing. He is a much injured man or the most sanctimonious liar and villian in the United States. We think, however, that Tilton is the man who will have to carry this distinction. The whole thing as published is very voluminous, and we can only wait its conclusion, which will require some time yet.

Badly Shot.

Charley Van Gorder had his arm shot away by the accidental discharge of his shot-gun, near Virginia City recently.

NEW ADVERTISMEENTS.

A CARD.

TO THE PEOPLE OF BISHOP CREEK AND ROUND VALLEY: I am wrongfully accused of stealing certain branding irons belonging to one John H. Givens. I consider that my name, character and honor are damaged to a certain extent. I can prove by men of good standing that the day they claimed to have lost said irons, I was not within ten miles of John Givens' corral. I would not put this notice in the paper, but he (John H. Givens) continues to say that he believes I stole his irons. Now as I am amongst strangers, comparatively speaking, I must defend myself and character, and I do say in this INYO INDEPENDENT that if one J. H. Givens continues to tell people that he believes I took his irons, he (John H Givens) tells or believes a dirty lie, and I can prove it, and is no gentleman for saying such without good proof.

(Signed,) An Injured Man,

JOHN C. MOORE

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

Sylvania.

Messrs. Darrah & Gregg returned from this district a day or two since having taken a look at about every location in the district. The sum of their conclusions is simply thus: That the district everywhere shows on the surface an abundance of the very best smelting ores. That the bullion is fully twice as rich as that from Cerro Gordo, and can be produced, ton for ton of ore, fully 30 per cent. cheaper. While the workings, so far, all of which are merely surface comparatively, show as flatteringly as could be wished, yet the fact remains to be demonstrated by deeper and more extensive workings whether large and permanent bodies of ore exist there, such as to justify the erection of reduction works on a large scale. For this purpose much more capital than the miners now possess is imperatively required. They can work away on the surface and with their small bassos make a fair living, but with such means they cannot in any reasonable time sink shafts and drive tunnels to satisfactorily determine the main question as to the permanancy and extent of the deposits. There is no experiments to be tried as to the smelting character of the ore, no doubt as to its remarkable richness. But for the district to take the rank it should, and doubtless ere long will do, some heavy company will have to take hold and go systematically to work. There is a grand opportunity there now for some such company, or half a dozen of them for the matter of that.

The Eclipse.

Capt. Eudey, though working a limited force, is driving work ahead at the Eclipse at a most commendable rate. He has had considerable trouble with the canal which supplies the motive power to the mill, the very high stage of the river being the cause, but he has the water in all right and the mill about ready to start up, which will be at first upon tailings, though quantities of good ore are being constantly taken out. Capt. Eudey is a worker, and goes at it in such a way that he is bound to make a success of the undertaking if any man can do it, and yet without the expenditure of a useless dollar. We are confident that the Eclipse one of these days will take an important place on its real merits as an Inyo mining enterprise; there is none in the county more deserving of the general good wishes. They have expended hundreds of thousands of dollars in an honest endeavor, and unlike most of such original failures, no man is loser a cent by the non-fulfillment of any of their obligations.

Personals.

Mr. McCallum, the newly appointed Land Office Register, and Mr. J. S. Rothschild arrived by Thursday's stage ....Judge Hannah, District Attorney Snelling and P. Reddy, Esq, are expounding the law or something to the good people of Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo....V. G. Thompson, of the Blaney, after safely depositing his charge at San Quentin, arrived here from the Bay Tuesday last; thinks there is more people in S. F. than there is here....As we stated last week that T. F. A. Lake and Billy Connelly had gone to Panamint, and, as they didn't go, people who like to sustain newspaper veracity will confer a favor by ignoring their presence for a few days, or till they do go, also, the same with the Judge and District Attorney—they have come back since the foregoing was in type.

Cloud Bursts all Around.

Last week Sylvania, Panamint, Swansea, Lida and several places in this region were visited by water spouts, some of them of extraordinary force and volume. The furnace at Swansea and a good portion of the town was flooded several feet deep with water, sand and wood and charcoal. A thousand cords of wood and many tons of charcoal were washed out of the canyon and scattered over the plain. The Panamint toll road was swept from end to end and is impassable. It will take two or three weeks to put it in repair again. A portion of the road between Benton and Columbus was also washed by a spout.

Matters at Bishop.

A friend writes us that the farmers of Bishop have mostly finished cutting their small grain, and that corn, potatoes and other standing crops are coming along finely, notwithstanding the set back received from the late cold weather of the Spring, which likewise doubles up the work, bringing harvest and corn cultivation in right together ....The Bishop Grange is in full operation, having regular meetings and a fair attendance.

Sorrowful.

One of the most sorrowful sights one can see is that of a man, who, when in his normal condition, is physically and mentally strong, and always kind and amiable, go wandering about the streets bereft of all reason, acting in all respects as a very small child or as perfectly insane men only can do, but of such we have an instance in kind now here. His case is not hopeless, however, if placed under proper treatment at once.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

From Panamint.

Messrs. J. D. Sears, Al. Briggs and Deputy County Surveyor Jo. Seeley went out last week to view out the proposed county road from the foot of the Lake to Panamint. Mr. Sears places the distance between the two points at 65 miles as near as may be. There is plenty of water and a little feed at Darwin canyon. Feed, however, is a very scarce article all throngh that country. A considerable amount of heavy work will have to be done to make a road through the canyon. For nearly half a mile the road will have to be constructed almost wholly in solid rock, but this done the whole road may be considered as complete, there being but very little work required at any other point to constitute it by far the best one leading into the district. In that event it is quite probable it will command pretty much all the heavy freighting even from Los Angeles. The matter of its construction, together with a report of the viewers, will be submitted to the Board of Supervisors at the meeting next week.

The Jacob's Mill.

At last accounts, the teams having the machinery aboard for the Panamint mill, were about stuck in the heavy sand on the new road out from Indian Wells. They found the road much more difficult than they anticipated, and would probably have to have considerable assistance before they could get in with it. One great trouble is every pound of provender is to be hauled along, which adds materially to the cost of freights. A railroad is the only remedy for the drawback the camp will always have to contend against on this account.

He Flingeth Stones.

The other day up in Cerro Gordo John Daly got very mad at the way the "Mud Hen" had treated him, so he fell to throwing stones at her with force and precision. The Hen cackled alarmingly, Wm. Barrows made John quit and Justice Van Kleek sent him down here under a $500 bond to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Another Unfortunate.

Yesterday's Cerro Gordo stage brought down a poor crazed man from that place. We have not learned his name. A. C. Matlack, elsewhere referred to as being in the same condition, had just previously been confined in the calaboose, so that there are now two awaiting an examination preliminary to consignment to the Stockton asylum

Quite Well.

The seven or eight persons remaining in this town these warm days are enjoying a fair degree of health, circumstances considered, a piece of information we deem of value to the other half dozen who have ganged awa,' the Summer months to spend.

Lost.

While returning to Lone Pine from George's Creek, July 28, Dr. Gelcich lost a case of surgical instruments They were wrapped in a white handkerchief. Any person finding them will confer a real favor by returning them to the Doctor, or informing him of the fact.

Will Meet.

The regular meeting of the Board of Supervisors begins on Monday. They will fix tax rates, and, it is to be hoped, will skirmish for an easier method of paying them; devise a plan beneficial to all alike.

Flooded.

On the 21st ultimo a big stream of water rushed down Lida canyon, doing some damage to Curt. Ober's house and personal property, causing a removal of the family to higher ground.

Thanks

Mrs. Yaney, of Bishop, has placed this establishment, especially the better half, under real obligations for her kind remembrance.

Singular Phenomenon.

A gentleman from Washoe Valley informs us that during the past week the fish in Washoe Lake have nearly all, if not all, died. On the eastern shore of the lake is to be seen a regular windrow nearly a mile in length of dead fish. They are of all sizes, from the smallest minnow to fish over a foot in length. Far out over the waters of the lake the fish are seen floating belly up. Already a great stench arises from those that have been driven ashore on the eastern shore of the lake by the prevailing southwest winds. The lake is fully three feet higher than it was at this time last year, and its waters never looked brighter or purer. No mills about the lake are running tailings or chemicals into it, nor can anything unusual be discovered in or about it. It is supposed that all the fish in the lake are dead, as the pelicans, gulls and other fish-eating fowls which have abounded thereabouts, have suddenly left. Day before yesterday not a pelican or gull remained on or about the lake. The only explanation advanced by any of the settlers is that there has been an eruption of some kind of deleterious gas from the bottom of the lake. —[Virginia (Nev.) Paper, July 20.

Child Stealing.

Philadelphia is much excited over the kidnapping of a four year old boy. The kidnappers advertise that they must have a ransom of $20,000 or the child will be killed. The father, named Ross is doing his best to raise the money, while other parties offer a reward of $50,000 for the arrest of the scoundrels, but so far without result. One man makes the offer on his account as his wife is becoming crazed with apprehensions for the safety of her own children. The whole affair is intensely mysterious.

—Thousands of poor men are spending as much for newspapers as would buy a good mint julep every day.

MATTERS AND THINGS ABOUT BENTON.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

BENTON, MONO CO., CAL., July 29th.

MESSRS. EDS.—Snob says, "perhaps some of your readers desire to know how 'matters and things' are at Benton." Not so lovely as they might be had a not occurred in Mack's mill a short time ago, which brought "matters and things" to a period in that portion of the town. The crank shaft broke, and being six inches in diameter, could not be mended here. Mr. Mack has gone to Virginia City to get a new one, and is expected home in a few days.

RUNNING.

A. B. Williams has been running his mill for thirty days as steadily as ever a mill run, and has made one shipment of bullion, with another ready to go in a day or two. Mr. Williams' bullion is mostly silver of the very finest quality, being worth about $20 per pound.

We have had extremely

here; the thermometer stood at 90 in the shade, which is equal to three paper collars per day. We are now having an occasional shower, settling the dust, watering the crops and sage brush, and cooling things down generally; but now and then these showers come all in a drop—down the canyons carrying every thing before them. A Scotch gentleman, living between here and Columbus, gave us an account of one of the drops coming down a canyon near his place which "made a stream large and deep enough to float the Great Eastern, and he lost his hat in the flood." We have every reason to believe this story because the Columbus stage driver says the road is not very dusty now.

THE STAGES,

at present, are making good time, only twenty-five hours on the road from Carson to this place. We get The Sunday Chronicle on the following Tuesday at 8 o'clock. But when they get to running on the road from Aurora to Columbus, and from the lattter to Benton (which they talk of doing), then the mail for this place and places south will be at least twelve hours later than at present.

PERSONAL.

We were favored with a call from Mr. Vickers, of Bishop, who tells an interesting story how the army worms pilfered and robbed the farmers of that locality. Hightownr and Sanguinetti had a bit of a "discussion" last evening the principal result of which was the breakage of a few glasses. The last named gentleman took his departure on the stage this morning for Aurora, in search of a people of a higher grade of intellect (they are 7,000 feet high up there) than this place affords, and also, it is presumed, to get some one to "fagle this thing up" SNOB.

Washed Out.

A water spout washed away a stretch of the railroad between Toano and Indian Wells so that trains could not pass for several days. It was reported that an emigrant train was ditched at the time and several persons killed, but this turns out not to be true.

Murder Cases.

There have been six murder cases tried in the State since the passage of the law allowing the jury to fix the penalty. In four of the cases the jury ordered imprisonment for life.

After the Mormons.

United States Marshal Maxwell, of Salt Lake, has warrants for the arrest of twenty Mormons on a charge of perjury. One of them has been arrested and is now being tried in Idaho.

—It would take a train of cars eight hundred miles long to load the 1874 wheat crop of Minnesota.

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES; SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. WORMS—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's
CALIFORNIA VINEGAR
BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1361 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

A FRAGMENT.

[FOR THE INDEPENDENT, BY BYRD WILSON.]

In sombre, brown relief against the clear
Blue ether, rear'st thy lofty crest
Oh! bald Mount Whitney!
Earth's green and grassy mantle covers not
Thy gaunt and sinewy sides;
Like creases, dark, deep ravines
And cañons seam and scar
Thy mighty form
Thy brother sentinel of Time's revolving years—
Proud "Inyo Dome"—looks grandly down
From his eyrie in the sky.
Side by side you stand—grim giants
Of the Sierras—alone and incomparable
In the mightiness of your desolation.
The foot of man has scarce disturbed
Your gloomy solitude.
At thy feet the hills stretch far and wide
That would be mountains in other lands.
Like some long, green and grassy snake
The valley winds its sinuous way,
Streaked with the white ribbon
Of a sparkling stream, with fountains
Fed by eternal snows.

RED HOT.

Brigham's Destroying Angel.

[From The Western World.]

This book is certainly a very remarkable one. Bill Hickman's confession and startling revelations are most extraordinary. That such black-hearted villainy, such almost unheard of atrocities could exist—that too in the nineteenth century—in the center of the United States, in the name of religion, and by the direct orders of professed Christians, God-fearing ministers of the everlasting truth, is truly marvelous. In Hickman's confession he says he killed all whom Brigham and his apostles ordered him to kill, through a consciousness and religious belief that he was doing right, and that Brigham was really the prophet of God and could not do wrong. But the time came at last when he became convinced, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that Brigham was not a true prophet, not a Christian. He learned that several of those he had so cruelly murdered by Brigham's orders were innocent of crime. Then it was that the prick of conscience conquered the hero of a score of the most unprovoked murders ever committed, and the fearless desperado became an abject, self-accused murderer, to whom was one continuous hell. But where could he go? What could he do? His crimes were notorious—he could not leave the Mormon fold—yet he resolved never to commit another crime for the church (Brigham), and would do all he could to redeem his past life. He engaged as a guide for General Connor, and acted in that capacity for many months, avoiding Brigham and endeavoring to keep on good terms with Gentile and Mormon. But this was not to last. Brigham finally sent for Hickman, and at first offered him $1,000 to kill General Connor, and finally commanded him to it under severe penalties. But Hickman had resolved, and most decidedly refused. Then commenced an organized system on the part of Brigham and his followers to destroy the property of Hickman, and to rob and persecute him to death. The cowards, they knew their man, and they dared not confront him openly. He was hunted throughout the mountains, and no effort spared to take his life, and with a remorse of conscience worse than death, he gave himself up to the Government and confessed all. Upon the basis of this confession all the arrests have been made. We quote the concluding paragraph of this confession. He says:

"I have had ten wives, and have twenty-four children living, six grandchildren, and one little great grandson, only a year and a half old; though I am now but fifty-six. I had one daughter born when I was eighteen years old, and she had a daughter and I was a grandfather when I was thirty-six. But my property has mostly been taken, my children scattered and my life sought, and I, lonesome and lonely, am and have been passing my time in this situation. And now only my good old wife, the same girl I told you I courted and married when a boy, sticks to me and owns me.

"Tongue cannot express or man imagine some of my feelings in the past few years. Many times when the sun would rise I would wish for night; and when night came I would wish to God it was morning. But I dared not say I had been robbed and ruined, and deprived of all that was dear to me; I thought it was all I could do to live by keeping still. I would rather have died a dozen deaths than to pass through what I have, if I could only be alive again and see right and justice triumph! Thank God, I think the day has come, and now is, and in justice to myself, my posterity, the living, the dead and my country I think it right to come out and show the damnable course pursued by Brigham Young—guilty as I have made myself, and with no excuse to offer except my fanatical belief. Believe me or not, I was sincere."

The late agitation of the Mormon question in Congress, the very decided position which the President has already assumed, and the action of Gen. Sherman looking toward the concentration of the United States troops in close proximity to Brigham's possessions, all indicate a "new departure" in the treatment of this question by the Government.

Bismarck's Daughter.

The Boerson Courier of Berlin gives an interesting incident of Bismarck's domestic life. His daughter, who is a favorite, though not beautiful is accomplished, amiable, and fills a high place in society. She was wooed by the most eligible suitors, heirs of rich families, members of nobility, men of high official position, and even a prince, and refused them all. Her father, after brooding long over the possible reason for his daughter's conduct, told her she must have a strong attachment to some one far below her in birth and position, and begged his name, declaring his wealth was powerful enough to remove all difficulties of social position. In tears the young lady confessed her lover was a young Lieutenant in the army, and that he returned her passion. The next day the young officer was summoned, and the Chancellor told him the seeming obstacle to his wishes should be removed, his poverty should be no barrier; though unknown to him, the love of his daughter was a guarantee of worth. But to the great surprise of the Prince the Lieutenant, answering, said he was a descendant of an old Catholic family, and though thankful to him, he could never take for his wife the daughter of one whom his family regarded as an enemy of the church, and whom he was almost compelled to look on as such. The officer then departed, and the confounded Chancellor, calling his daughter, told her the Lieutenant wholly refused her hand and she must forget him. Paler than before, she replied, "He is too honorable to deny his religious faith. I will not ask of him such a sacrifice, and if he desires it, I, less believing than he, will adopt his religion to render our marriage possible." She became more inconsolable from day to day, and at length her father was thrown into a state of excitement. Such is the present state of the affair.

Fraternity.

Two ministers of the Methodist Church South have written letters to The New York Methodist on the subject of fraternal relations between the two churches, north and south. Rev. John C. Shackleford, of Southwest Missouri, earnestly desires the "unity of all who believe in Christ." He was never a pro slavery man, and voted against expunging from the Discipline the rule forbidding "the buying and selling" of slaves. He thinks that the correct basis of unity includes two acts: 1. The forgiveness of injuries received by either party; and 2. The confession of wrongs done. Rev. S. M. Cherry, of Franklin, Tennessee, writes in an excellent spirit. He mentions the action of the late General conference, and the two reports offered on fraternal relations. The old men of the Conference, including Drs. Lee, Schon, Regester, McFerrin and others, who were members of the General Conference of 1844, favored the minority report; but the counsel of the younger men prevailed. If the latter erred, he hopes they may live to rectify their errors. Brother Cherry is cordial and brotherly.—[Christian Advocate.

The Nimble Grasshopper Astonished.

The other day, over in Washoe Valley, the old chief grasshopper, leader of the mighty host, sounded his trumpet and came marching down across the foothills toward Watkins' barley field. Watkins heard him coming—heard the gnashing of mandibles, the clashing of wing sheaths and the rasping together of serrated thighs—heard but was not dismayed. He took down his Babcock fire extinguisher, gave it a churn or two, strapped it upon his back and went up against the enemy, wearing upon his countenance a snub of derision. When he met the advancing army he turned loose upon the front ranks. The old chief hopper and his little hoppers stood it but a moment. It was too many for them, and with wild whoops they turned tail and fled back into the hills in dismay.—[Enterprise.

The Oil Regions of Los Angeles.

The following is from The Los Angeles Herald: The works on the Temple claim are now completed, and boring will be commenced in a few days. The claim is situated five miles west of Lyons' Station, in a rocky canyon of the San Fernando range, and is surrounded by towering mountains a thousand feet high. The oil flows from many springs, and is at present lost, there being no tanks to receive it. They will bore at the rate of ten feet per day, and the indications are that they will get a flowing well within a hundred feet. The show of oil upon the surface is very great, and without any work having been done to develop the springs, The oil refined at Lyons' Station shows that it is of superior quality and non-explosive. The well sunk on the Wiley claim some years ago, although only one hundred feet deep, flows a continuous stream of oil, which is now lost, however, there being nothing to save it in. The Moore spring and the Pico spring are now being developed, and show flattering prospects. The line of the Southern Pacific railroad passes within three miles of the oil springs, and it will be easy to transport the oil to market. The history of the Hughes claim is a singular one. In 1865 Mr. Hughes, the owner of the famous Hughes claim, being about to bore for oil, and being a strong Spiritualist, applied to a medium to indicate the spot where he would probably find oil. A certain spot was indicated, and after boring 150 feet a flowing well was struck, the oil being of the finest quality; but unfortunately at the moment of success the boring tools got fast, and it was impossible to extricate them. Several efforts have been made to extricate them but have failed. Wood and water are abundant in the immediate vicinity. It would be a delightful resort for tourists—among the forest clad mountains and romantic canyons. Game is abundant, and this is truly the home of the honey bee. A bee cave was discovered here a few days ago in which there can be seen twenty-four layers of honey. The famous cave discovered some years ago, and which is supposed to contain a ton of honey, is truly an object worth seeing, the swarm of bees constantly passing in and out of the cave being immense. A beautiful waterfall, 100 feet high, has been found here among the pine mountains. It is surrounded by pine-trees 100 feet high. Petrified wood and many natural curiosities abound in this region.

The "John Brown" Song.

Frank Moore, in a friendly note to the editor of The Boston Transcript, says: "I notice that there is a lively controversy going on about the 'real John Brown song.' The first one was undoubtedly written by Holbrook, and published a short time after the execution of the brave old man at Charlestown, West Virginia. My recollection of John Brown songs, commencing with the stately poem of Julia Ward Howe, which is by far the finest of all written on the theme, numbers over seventy. Some of them are really excellent, while a good many are simply 'extortions from the dictionary without recourse to brains,' as Isaac O. Barnes used to say of a celebrated Massachusetts man's speeches. But one John Brown song from below Mason and Dixon's line ever came under my observation. It was printed on a remnant of blue wall-paper, and is as profane as it is wretchedly weak."

Grasshoppers.

A letter just received from our special correspondent at Ponca announces fearful ravages by the army of grasshoppers. On Friday last they made their appearance in Dixon county, coming from the north in great clouds. Within a few hours they stripped the corn fields, leaving them as desolate (using our correspondent's expression) as was Chicago after the fire. Fortunately most of the small grain was harvested and will not be injured by this raid. Old settlers in that region declare that they never have seen anything like it. It is to be hoped the incursion of these voracious pests will not extend below the Indian reservation.—[Omaha Bee, July 18.

IMPORTANT TO SETTLERS.

In view of the fact that settlers on the public lands are allowing the time to elapse without proving up as required by law, we have obtained the following information from Mr. McCallum, the newly appointed Register of the Independence Land District, and present it for the benefit of pre-emption claimants, who should understand the importance of offering their proofs in time, and thus save possible litigation and expense.

The law requires that where settlement was made on surveyed lands filing must be made within three months thereafter, and proof and payment must be made within thirty-three months of the date of settlement. Therefore, where the settlement was made in November, 1871, time will expire in August, 1874.

Where settlement was made on unsurveyed land filing must be made within three months after filing of the plat, and such proof, etc., must be made within thirty-three months of date of filing the Township plat in the Land Office. Therefore where the plat was filed November, 1871, time for making proof will expire August, 1874. Failure to comply with the requirements of the law in this respect is held by the Land Department to work a forfeiture of the claim, and renders the land subject to the first valid settler. In fact, on this point we will state that it is our impression that if proof is not made within the time specified it works an absolute forfeiture of the pre-emption right, whether any other claimant interposes or not. This is our recollection of the tenor of a decision lately promulgated by Commissioner Burdett and published in some of our exchanges but which at this moment we cannot find. At all events the only safe thing to do is for each settler to see that the time does not lapse without coming forward with his proofs and money. At any time—three months after filing, and within the time specified—such proof and payment can be made.

These proofs are to be made before the Register and Receiver. No amount of improvements are specified by the law, but sufficient must be shown to satisfy the land officers that the settlement was made in good faith, two witnesses besides the claimant being sufficient. In case adverse claims have been filed on the same land, citation to the adverse party is issued from the Land Office upon request, with instructions as to the mode of service. In case of contest each party must of course be his own judge as to the number of witnesses necessary.

To avoid delay, unnecessary expense and trouble settlers should at once notify the Register, by letter or otherwise that they desire their cases set for hearing, giving the date of their filing and the description of their land, when the proper examination of the records will be made and parties notified when to appear and as to the condition of the records.

Its Geographical Position.

The San Bernardino Guardian persists in locating Panamint "near the Inyo line but in San Bernardino county." Fortunately for Panamint on account of the outrageously long name of our neighboring county on the south, it is in Inyo and not nearer than thirty-six miles of the northern boundary line of San Bernardino. As shown by the United States survey stakes on the townships immediately west and south it is in township 18 south, range 45 east. The sixth standard south is the boundary between the two counties, and is the line between townships 24 and 25 south. Panamint is one township north and nine east of the lower end of Owens Lake, and consequently is almost due east of Cerro Gordo. The Guardian can rely upon the truth of this statement, and cease to teach false geography as regards Panamint.

To Our German Friends.

We are in receipt of The California Post, a new weekly paper in German just started at Los Angeles by Conrad Jacoby. Typographically, considering that the letter is Dutch as kraut, it is a very fine looking paper, and we are told by those who can read it that, otherwise, it is an excellent paper and worthy of support. The price is $5 per annum.

The Pope.

For many years the French government has kept a man-of-war lying at Civita Vecchia for the use of the Pope, should he wish to leave in a hurry. Italy has made a demand on France to remove said vessel.

THE RAILROAD.

Capt. Beane, Secretary of the company, and Engineer Crawford recently went to San Bernardino to see what that place would do toward the L. A. & I. Railroad, via the Cajon Pass. A meeting was held at which a very enthusiastic feeling favorable to the undertaking was expressed and set forth in a set of resolutions. There is no doubt but that county will assist quite liberally toward constructing the road, as it will secure the first benefits of the interior market for many of its productions, besides having a much needed outlet for the same to the sea. This railroad would doubtless cause a large influx of settlers into the beautiful and rich valleys of San Bernardino, as well as the development of a vast mining region extending all the way through to Inyo and far beyond.

In this county nothing of a public nature intended to promote the enterprise is being done, or is likely to be, until the leading men take hold and first put it in a definite shape. The principal portion of the Inyo franchise holders are, and have been, absent. When they and the others together manifest an earnest purpose in the undertaking—when they argree on a plan of action, and come up with at least enough coin for a tangible starter—then there will be some propriety in appealing to the Inyo public for that assistance it can and will give on a reasonable assurance something of value is to come of it. We expect and have expected Los Angeles men to lead out in this, and to lead out as though they meant business. But it is highly important that the franchise holders in this county delegate some one to represent them in a conference with those at Los Angeles and arrange a plan of action at once. The sooner this is done the better. There is nothing whatever to be gained by delay.

It is a conceded fact that a railroad is a sine qua non for our every interest in this section. The general business of this county is drifting into a slough of despond from which it will scarcely ever triumphantly emerge until something of this kind is done. This may not be a pleasant fact to contemplate, but judging the future by the two years last past, and giving our prospects all due weight, and it is as plain as the nose on a man's face that a new leaf must be turned over before our mining interest, upon which our every other is wholly dependent, can attain that stage of development amounting to reasonably prosperous times. This identical railroad is the one, and the one thing above all others, to produce the desired result. We, everybody can sit here and suck our thumbs and wait for capital to come in, and for the Southern Pacific to extend a branch and for cheap freights over any portion of that company's routes, and for all the advantages expected to follow therefrom, and when the thumbs are fairly sucked away we will find that we are not a bit nearer the realization of our hopes than we are to-day.

But men working in the interest of the big monopoly, men in Los Angeles and San Francisco and all the way around, not forgetting our own locality, are striving in various ways to choke this Los Angeles enterprise out of existence; they preach a Southern Pacific branch from Tehechepi, and cheap freights down the San Joaquin, and all such nonsense. We will never (in any reasonable time) have either one or the other. Bullion, when in the whole control of one or two individuals, may be taken down the San Joaquin for $10 a ton. But miscellaneous freights, bullion, ores and all kinds, will have to stand the standard rates of $45 or $50 on each ton, instead of less than half the smaller rate that our road could not only well afford, but would compel even on the other. We must have freights at less than $45 per ton.

If the Los Angeles & Independence road is not an existing iron fact within the next two or three years it will be simply because both Los Angeles and Inyo are lacking in business, energetic men. Incorporate, call in 10 per cent. to help build at least 10 miles of road, and then it will do to offer stock or ask contributions. If the original stockholders are not willing or able to do this much, the sooner they are forced to haul out the better.

Public Worship in England.

The bill regulating public worship in England has passed to a third reading in the House of Commons. The Catholic Bishops protest against it as an interference by the civil authorities with matters belonging exclusively to the Pope.

Very Smart.

The Indiana Democracy made what might properly be termed some right smart nominations. B. C. Smart is their candidate for State Treasurer, and J. H. Smart is their nominee for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Resolutions.

[From The Los Angeles Express.]

At a meeting held last Saturday evening, the Good Templars of our city passed the following series of resolutions:

HALL OF MERRILL LODGE, No. 299, I. O. G. T., Los Angeles, July 25.

WHEREAS, The Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce did, at their meeting on the 14th of July, adopt a series of resolutions denouncing the measure known as the Local Option law as "dangerous to American liberty and subversive of the rights of the people as guaranteed by both our State and Federal Constitutions;" and

WHEREAS, The said Board of Directors of the trade guilds of this city, in thus dogmatically pronouncing upon a question which is, even according to their own interpretation, entirely moral, political and judicial, departed from their legitimate duties as a commercial organization, and might with equal propriety pass upon disputed religious dogmas or decide questions of purely moral ethics; therefore

Resolved, That the thanks of Merrill Lodge, No 299, Independent Order of Good Templars, are extended to Judge R. M. Widney for the logical and spirited opposition he interposed against the passage of these extraordinary resolutions.

Resolved, That the principle which the Local Option law seeks to compass invades no personal right that ought to be respected by the mass of mankind, since it aims to control drunkenness by decreasing the facilities by which drunkenness is propagated; that, as drunkenness is recognized by all established law as a crime, it is logical to prevent drunkenness by the aid of the law.

Resolved, That an individual right is only to be granted and respected as long as it does not infringe on other individual rights; and as the right to get drunk without restraint involves an abuse of individual rights, to the detriment of the rights of other individuals, and becomes a source of great public expense in consequence, the right to protect ourselves from it and its consequential evils by such constitutional measures of restriction as the majority of the people may deem advisable.

Resolved, That the press of the State are respectfully requested to publish the foregoing resolutions.

J. H. BLANCHARD,
W. S. Merrill Lodge

The Latest Phase.

The latest in reference to the Tilton-Beecher scandal is about this way: Justice Reilly, of Brooklyn, thinks he will dismiss Gaynor's libel suit against Tilton unless the Supreme Court, by mandamus, compels him to go on with it. His reason is that the party libeled does not complain. This will be ruinous to Mr. Gaynor's hopes of a little cheap notoriety. Moulton is with Gen. Ben. Butler in Massachusetts, and says he holds the key to the whole affair, but won't come out with it until Beecher testifies in his own behalf. It is said Moulton is afraid to tell his story, as in the event of Beecher's vindication, he will stand with Tilton as a malicious defamer. Gen. Strabismus says he won't have anything to do with the dirty business, which determination is accepted as an indication that the General's mind has become unbalanced; it was thought he would be delighted to take stock. Henry Ward goes imparty about, precisely as if he had never written or received those letters, the fervent nature of which remains as unaccountable as ever, accepting his perfect innocence as he and Mrs. T. so strongly assert it. The Church Committee gave notice that they would close the examination of witnesses on the night of August 4. It is doubtful if any satisfactory conclusion will be reached by the committee, and also whether the matter will come before the courts at all or not. The Woodhull is in her glory, and intends to pursue the fight to the bitter end.

Elections.

The election in North Carolina was to come off last Thursday. There was any quantity of Independent candidates in the field, and in consequence, the chances for a Republican success are considered very slim. Last Monday Utah held an election, in which the women generally of Salt Lake voted, and to a man went in favor of the big Mormon gun, George Q. Cannon for Delegate to Congress, and all this, notwithstanding that body last Winter refused him a seat because he had so very many wives—almost as many as the average Congressman has of mistresses. The Gentiles consider themselves badly cheated in this election, claiming that it was carried by outrageous cheating—there is no doubt but many of the new class of Mormon voters are highly proficient "repeaters."

May be So.

A correspondent of The Sacramento Union, writing from Virginia City, says it is whispered that lately there has been a consolidation between Sharon, Ralston, Mackay, Fair, Hayward, Jones and Flood & O'Brien, which abates all political enmities and leaves the Senatorial course clear of any obstruction.

Will Take a Hand.

Germany, by official note, informs France that if she don't check the Carlists in their atrocious cruelties and in their violations of neutrality, Germany will take prompt steps to do so.

Forest Fires in Wisconsin.

Chicago people are not the only people who dread fire. The Green Bay Advocate thus depicts the situation in that locality:

Although the wood's fires are prevailing in every direction, those most threatening seem to be northeasterly from here, in Kewaunee and Door counties and part of this county. Hundreds of families, who went through the sad experience of '71, keep their household effects packed up ready to move in case the fire is uncontrollable. Pretty much the same state of things exists on the west shore of the bay in Oconto county. No general disaster, however, like that of '71 need be apprehended, unless similar conditions of the atmosphere and gales of wind should occur together. A great source of anxiety is the fact that large tracts of country are covered with burnt and dead timber, remaining since the fires of '71 which are now quite dry and as inflammable as tinder. These, however, might burn safely in the absence of a gale. The Kewaunee Enterprise says that considerable damage has already resulted in that region, and that a panic exists amongst the settlers, many of whom have moved out of their houses and taken their agricultural implements and other movables into the middle of clearings for safety. Some houses, barns, fences and outstanding grain are already burned The new bridge between Kewaunee and Ahnapee was burned lately.

Senator Stewart's Movements.

Last evening a small conclave of gentlemen were obstructing the sidewalk in front of a Montgomery street cigar store, and the conversation turned upon Nevada politics. S. T. Gage, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, was one of the party. He seemed to be well posted, and furnished much information. There was a curious man in the crowd, who took great interest in Senator Stewart—who is good naturedly called "Bill" by every man on the coast who has never seen him.

"Where is Bill Stewart, now?" asked the curious man.

"He's gone to Panamint," was the reply of Mr. Gage.

"Well, what Mint is he going to pan, the San Francisco Mint or the Carson Mint?"

"I didn't say he was going to pan any Mint," replied Mr. Gage; "I said he was going to Panamint Mining District."

"Ah, yes, to be sure. Well, do you suppose he will pan as much coin out of that as he did out of the Emma mine in Utah?"

Mr. Gage said he didn't know how that might turn out, but he could enlighten the party on the latest phase of the freights and fares question—whereupon the meeting incontinently adjourned in wild disorder.—[S. F. Chronicle.

Jefferson Canyon.

This locality, situated a short distance from Belmont, is beginning to excite considerable attention in this city, and we hear of several parties who contemplate a visit to the district for the purpose of spying out the business outlook. The principal mine is the Prussian South, which is reported to be of marvelous richness and vast extent, and on which a mill and hoisting works are in course of erection. The Prussian mine is also said to be a good mine; and there are other locations which hold out a prospect of becoming valuable. From all we can learn a prosperous camp is destined to grow up in Jefferson district; but we do not know of sufficient inducement, at present, to cause a rush to the locality.—[Austin Reveille.

Dropping Them.

In all parts of the United States the people of all political parties are dropping the congressional salary-grabbers and refusing to have anything more to do with them. The last case in point was that of James M. Tyner, of the Eighth District of Indiana. Tyner was one of the grabbers who refused to pay back the spoil he received. The other day he made his appearance before a convention for renomination, but the signs looked so black that he thought it best to get up and withdraw his name. This man was elected in 1872 by a majority of 2,939 We hope that when any of the salary-grabbers of this State come before a convention for a renomination, or for any office whatever, they will be treated as Tyner was, and allowed to get out of the way. It is said Houghton is an aspirant for the governorship. He is one of them.—[Sacramento Union.

Ye S. F. Hoodlum.

Two men have recently been murdered in San Francisco by the hoodlums, who run the city pretty much as they please. Some of the more peaceable citizens, who have become a little tired of dodging brick-bats every day, talk of putting on a special police composed mainly of respectable and reliable men, but the older citizens don't want to serve because they hate to arrest their own sons, and the younger ones are afraid to corral a hoodlum for fear of counter charges. It is now thought no such force can be obtained except it be from the Six Chinese Companies, and in case of this recourse general prayer is to be offered for the most absolute Kilkenny cat fight ever known.

De Long.

Hon. Chas. De Long left on Saturday evening for Oakland, California, and will return with his family as soon as Mrs. De Long and—the baby—are able to travel. That's what's the matter.—[Virginia Independent.

—An elephant stepped on a Chicago young lady's outside toe last Saturday. The lady said she didn't mind it so long as the elephant only kept two of his feet on the toe, but when he put all four of them on at once, she requested to be permitted to remark that he was a great, ugly, nasty brute.

As Usual.

A Cerbat correspondent of The Arizona Miner tells the following pretty story of those fatherly scoundrels, the Indian Agents, at the Colorado Reservation:

False musters are charged upon Agent Tonin, who, it is alleged, charged a large body of Mojaves, who for years have been supporting themselves, to visit his reservation, when they were counted with other Indians so as to swell the aggregate present to over 800.

The ditch on the reserve is a dead failure, Not one drop of water can reach it from the Colorado, and the head gate has never been opened. Nearly $100.000 have been used in digging it and $20,000 more are asked for. Agent Tonin's statement, that the ditch is now almost ready for use, is denounced as a falsehood. A schoolmaster, head foreman and other employes are borne on the rolls and paid for doing nothing. No school exists; the farm—so called—consists of an alfalfa grass plot about fifty feet square in front of the agent's residence, which is watered daily by Indian children under the direction of the schoolmaster. Tonin is also charged with owning a ranch near the reserve, to which the finest cattle belonging to the Indians are sent and marked with his brand. All the best farming implements likewise find their way there. The Indians are not half fed. Feeble old squaws are compelled to earn their living by carrying bundles of hay, oftentimes weighing a hundred pounds, many miles to the reserve, where Tonin pays them nominally fifty cents per diem in two cups of flour. This hay is then charged to the Government as having cost $60 gold per ton.

Stamping Documents.

The following act in relation to the stamping of unstamped documents passed during the last session of Congress, and is now a law:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all instruments, documents and papers heretofore made, signed or issued, and subject to a stamp duty or tax under any law heretofore existing, and remaining unstamped may be stamped by any person having an interest therein, or where the original is lost, a copy thereof, at any time prior to the first of January, 1876. And said instruments, documents and papers, and any record thereof, shall be as valid to all intents and purposes as if stamped when made, signed or issued, but no right acquired in good faith shall in any manner be affected by such stamping as aforesaid; provided, that to render such stamping valid the person desiring to stamp the same shall appear with the instrument, document or paper, or copy thereof, before some judge or clerk of a court of record, and before him affix the proper stamp; and the said judge or clerk shall endorse on such writing or copy a certificate under his hand when made by the said judge or clerk, setting forth the date at which and the place where the stamp was so affixed, the name of the person presenting said writing or copy, the fact that it was thus affixed, and that the stamp was duly cancelled in his presence.

A Los Angeles Local.

This is founded on fact. He came from Panamint. His bottle of benzine gave out just twenty-four hours before his arrival in the city. He was very dry when he got here. He flooded the parched and dusty channel of his throat with five cent gin. He became hilarious. He passed out of that stage. He grew belligerent. He gave a yell. He startled the guardian of the night. He was snatched bald-headed. He was incarcerated. He was brought before his honor the Mayor. He was fined. He could not find enough in his pocket to pay the fine. He works. He earns his daily rations by the sweat of his brow. He curses his fate. He looks if he might have been born for better things. He wishes to return to the breezy mountain tops. He says he prefers the freedom of the mining camp to the confinement of the city prison. We should think he would. He will return. We shall expect him again next year. They always come back and do the same thing over again. Will they never learn wisdom? It is an open question. Moral. Don't drink five cent whisky.—[Star, Aug. 1.

A Weather Note.

A terrific thunder storm visited Elko, Nev., July 30, creating great consternation. The lightning was very destructive, striking several telegraph poles in rapid succession and shattering them to atoms. Two mules tied to the hind end of two freight wagons, seventy feet apart, were instantly killed by the same discharge.—[Gold Hill News.

Cuba.

News from Cuba is favorable to the cause of the insurgents. A general uprising of the negroes against the Spaniards is expected and feared.

Base Ball.

Two American base ball clubs are causing so much excitement in England that extra railway trains are being run to points where they play.

—Marshal Soult once, showing the pictures he stole in Spain, stopped before one and remarked: "I value that picture very much; it saved the lives of two estimable persons." An aid-de-camp whispered into the listener's ear, "He threatened to have them both shot immediately unless they gave it up."

Indians in Texas.

Some United States cavalry, aided by Texas Rangers, had a fight with Indians July 24 near Jacksonboro, Texas Twelve rangers, the commander of the United States cavalry and some soldiers were killed, and the whole body of whites were repulsed by the Indians. This is serious if true.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Our Only Terms: Cash, in Advance. Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.

Bend City Bridge.

On Tuesday last Dr. White and a party passed through town on their way to get fresh provisions over to the mining party at Waucoba. They found the bridge across the slough, some one hundred and fifty yards this side of the main bridge, had been carried away, excepting a few of the timbers that had been hauled out and saved, and that the main stream of Owens river was running through this new channel. A flat-boat was found, its leakage bailed out and, under the able superintendence of Lieut. Wotherspoon, of the Post (late of the U. S. Navy), the crossing was effected, and the Indian with his pack train (which he had left on the other side) sent on rejoicing towards Waucoba. The river is rapidly cutting deeper in its new channel, which is so considerable a cut-off as to preclude all hopes of a return to the old channel. The old bridge has a small stream running under it in virtue of the present high water, and also serves as a crossing over a dangerous quick mire.

Failed to Connect.

Much to special and general disappointment the county dads failed to meet at their regular term last Monday, Supervisor Bell being the only member present. Supervisor Hughes is sick, we understand, which accounts for his non-attendance, while the harvest season, we presume, is the reason why Supervisor Laird failed to appear. Sick officers have a valid excuse, but well ones ought to attend to business ness entrusted to them by the public even at a personal sacrifice, or throw up their commission. Such failures as this occasions very serious inconvenience, especially to parties traveling long miles to have important road and other matters attended to, as was the case with several in this instance. It is presumed a special meeting will have to be ordered at once. Since the above was in type we have been handed a notice calling a meeting a week from next Monday. The notice will be found in another column.

Personals.

Mr. Tait, of the Panamint toll road, was in town during the week, and reports that the damage to the road from the late rush of waters was less than was at first supposed....Mr. Van Arsdale has, we understand, received news of the death of a near relative and the dangerous sickness of another in New York, on which account he started for that place last Tuesday....J. L. Darrah has gone to Visalia....County Treasurer Harry Isaacs was to have sailed from England, en route for this place, on the 5th instant....P. Reddy, Esq., and lady, accompanied by Miss Alice Rhine, took the Northern Stage Friday last for a trip to San Francisco....Wm. G. Squires, one of our old-timers, but now of Carson, is now paying our burg a visit.

The Insane Men.

Drs. White and Hehner examined A. C. Matlack as to his mental condition a few days since, and declare him insane. He will start, in charge of W. L. Moore, for Stockton early next week. An inquiry was also held upon the Portugese barber, sent down from Cerro Gordo as a lunatic, but they decided him not insane. He is, however, still held in confinement until further developements.

Quite Safe.

Greene Hitchcock thought the other day to place his big wood wagon in a safe position near the river, where he was compelled to leave it, and took some pains to get it on dry ground near the slough. It was a case of misplaced wagon and confidence both; the river went prospecting, but Green is satisfied his wagon is still there, for he can yet see some of it sticking out of the mud.

For Conference.

Rev. M. W. Pratt preaches his farewell sermon at 3 P. M. to-morrow at George's Creek, and here in the evening prior to his departure for Carson to attend Conference. The time for holding this (the Nevada) Conference of the M. E. Church has been changed from the 17th to the 3d of next month. Bishop Merrill presides.

Deaths.

There were two deaths in Lone Pine last Saturday, but we have the name of but one, Edward Kane, who was formerly a resident of this place, but more recently of Cerro Gordo, where he became "leaded" some months ago, finally resulting in his death. He leaves a wife and two children.

Visitors at the Post.

We learn that Gen. Davis (an Inspector General from Washington City), Lieut.-Col. A. D. Nelson, of the 12th Infantry (commanding the regiment), Col. Wingard, Paymaster, Capt. Johnson, of the Medical Department, and Mr. R. R. Tilly are expected in by way of the Visalia trail to-day or to-morrow.

St. Vincent's College.

This well known Los Angeles institution of learning now begins another term, and is prepared to receive pupils from a distance.

The Hospital.

Dr. Gelcich informs us that there are but two patients now in the County Hospital at Lone Pine, though he has several in his private hospital.

Bring in Your Claims.

We would call especial attention to the notice to the creditors of the Lida Milling & Mining Company. All having claims dating prior to the 6th day of August of last year must present the same, duly verified (this last is an important point), on or before the 29th instant to Mr. Reddy for settlement, or forever after hold their peace.

The Lida Milling Property.

This property was this week formally, as it was previously in fact, sold to Gen. Page, the price paid being $10,000. A new boiler is being put in, which will require but a few days, when the mill will start up and things move again at Lida.

Purchased a Farm.

Jo Walker, late of Hiskey & Walker, Lida, has purchased Squire Campbell's old homestead at Big Pine, containing fifty acres of land with house and other improvements, all for $3,000. We consider this one of the most desirable places in the valley, so far as our knowledge extends.

Open for Business.

Parties having business before the Land Office can get it attended to at any time, as Register McCallum is duly installed and the office is open for business. Mr. McCallum is obliging and, as we have good reason to believe, is thoroughly conversant with his duties.

For Panamint.

Senator Bill Stewart and a brother of Senator J. P. Jones went out to Panamint the present week. It does not appear that Trenor W. Park, who was to be one of the party, was along.

Badly Hurt.

One day last week J. M. Horton, of Bishop received a dangerous hurt from the kick of a horse. Several ribs were broken.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

Raid on Fort Steel.

[From The Denver News, July 21.]

They had a lively time at Fort Steele with the Indians on the 16th. About seven o'clock in the morning a party of Sioux suddenly dashed into the fort and, before they could be intercepted, succeeded in getting away with all the horses and mules in the place, thirty or forty head. All the cavalry having been sent up north, in the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail country, there was no means of pursuing the kleptomanical redskins, who safely made off with their booty. The same party, not long afterwards, were joined by a reinforcement of a score or more, and then fell in with Moore, a section foreman, accompanied by his men. He, at first, thought they were U. S. cavalry, and turned back to order them off the road bed, but the Indians beginning to fire, showed him easily his mistake. Ordering his men to do their prettiest to send the car along, Moore stationed himself in the rear with a Winchester rifle, and kept peppering away at the advancing savages. He succeeded in picking off the foremost, after which the Indians gave over the pursuit, and taking up their dead comrade, made off to the northward. When the Rawlins people heard of all this they organized a party which struck the trail about where the skirmish occurred, and set out for a long chase after the raiders, with what result deponent sayeth not.

Bakersfield Items.

Among the sounds that now go to make up the sum of the noises with which the air is resonant, is the whistle of the locomotive and the rolling of the car wheels like distant thunder, that is heard as trains arrive and depart on the north bank of the river, about two and a half miles distant.

The first passenger train arrives on the north bank of the river to-day at 9:50 A. M., and leaves at 6:45 P. M. These are the hours fixed for the arrival and departure of passenger trains. The work on the bridge has commenced. Two steam pile drivers are in operation and the piles of Oregon fir are being driven with great rapidity.

We received a call on the 26th instant from V. G. Thompson, of Independence, Inyo county. Mr. Thompson was formerly a well known citizen of this county, and once the Republican candidate for Sheriff. He seems well satisfied with his new home, and has great confidence in the mineral resources of his county which he says are yet untouched, and expresses the opinion that their development is entirely contingent on quick and easy means of transportation. In fact, the future of that county is largely dependent on the extension of railroads thereto.—[Courier, Aug. 1.

General News Items.

The late storm in Moravia ruined eleven villages and two towns.

Reuter's Telegraph News Agency has been consolidated with the Paris agency of Havas, La Fite & Co. It now extends to all the telegraph lines of the world.

It is again given out in Washington that Bristow will exchange the Secretary-ship of the Treasury for the Attorney-General's office.

General Sherman is of the opinion that nothing short of extermination can completely settle the Indian problem on this continent.

Some horse thieves recently hung in Kansas by a Vigilance Committee gave the names of twenty more who belong to the band.

Governor Ames asks the President for troops to keep the peace (not yet disturbed) at Vicksburg. The President declines to send troops unless they are demanded on strictly constitutional grounds.

Bogus Charley, the Modoc, is in St. Louis, being lionized.

Indians have recently been raiding close up to the town of Bozeman, Montana. They captured two white men.

Several members of the Chicago Common Council are to be indicted for selling their votes in a recent election of architect for the new court house.

On the 31st ultimo Senator Morton opened the Republican campaign at Terra Haute, Indiana.

As far as known, 133 persons lost their lives by the Pittsburgh cloudburst.

Captain Hanna han has returned to Kansas from Fort Dodge, and reports that his party killed nine Comanches on the Canadian river. Upon the bodies of the dead Indians were found several scalps of white persons.

Another black sheep has cropped out in New Orleans. A preacher eloped with one of the sisters, and was pursued and captured by his wife in Amenia, New York, and marched back in triumph.

One of the jury that convicted Boss Tweed says an attempt has been made to bribe him to sign a petition for the old thief's pardon. He protests against the favor shown this man over the other criminals at Blackwell's Island.

During the month of July twenty-one persons were sent from San Francisco to the Insane Asylum, and in the present month five were sent in one day.

A Chinese Consulate is soon to be established in San Francisco, the Six Companies to pay the cost of it.

The Reese River Reveille says: Another man who failed to turn up the "lady card" arrived from Battle Mountain yesterday without a cent in his pocket, and unable to tell the time of day on account of having loaned his watch to the three card monte thieves at that place.

The swindler known as Lord Gordon Gordon was arrested in Manitoba, August 1st, by two English detectives, but he soon after blew his brains out.

The reservoir of the Trenton (N. J.) water works gave way last Monday, destroying some $50,000 of property, but occasioning no loss of life.

Dupree, the French explorer of Africa, was recently killed by the Bedouins on the Sahara desert.

Famine still lingers in some parts of India.

Spanish Affairs.

One thousand Carlists prisoners were taken by the Spanish troops at Olite. The Carlists managed to slip in and plunder a place called Cuenca while the chief officers of the Spanish troops before the place were quarreling as to who should command. By the time this was settled the Carlists had sacked the town and left. The Spanish Government is sending 12,000 more troops to Cuba. England has agreed to the proposition of Germany not to offer any protection to contraband English ships, when taken by the Spanish Republic, furnishing supplies to the Carlists.

—No wonder people go to Colorado in Summer. Thermometer 75 and 80 degrees by day, and blankets needed by night.

—When you are in a hurry for your lager don't ask a German to explain the process of its manufacture.

—A policeman who has a beat two miles long thinks of entering into competition with the vegetable growers this Summer.

—There are counties of Minnesota in which the entire crop is to be looked for in the crops of grasshoppers.

—A Liverpool woman, to shield her husband, who was charged with removing the end of her nose, swore that she bit it off herself.

—"I'm not much for sthump spakin'," declared a candidate at Dubuque, "but for honesty, capacity and integrity I bate the divil—so I do."

—A man advertises for a competent person to undertake the sale of a new medicine, and adds that it will prove "highly lucrative to the undertaker."

—Lot's wife wouldn't have looked back but a woman with a new dress passed her and she wanted to see if the back breadth was ruffled.

—A good way to restore a man apparently drowned is to first dry him thoroughly inside and out, and then clap a speaking trumpet to his ear and inform him that his mother-in-law's dead.

Self denial has a worthy representative in the temperance man who through twelve years of total abstinence has looked upon a basket of champagne in his cellar without popping a cork.

—An Arizona girl shot her lover and then nursed him tenderly until he died. His last words were: "I forgive you, Mary; you did it with an ivory-handled pistol."

—The immense amount of building going on at San Francisco has raised the price of bricks to a high figure. Between that and local option it takes a rich man to afford even a brick for his hat.

—The pale, sad looking young men whom one occasionally meets in the streets are not consumptive, are not mourning the loss of a friend, and are not divinity students. They are breaking in tight boots.

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

How to Paint. For mechanics, merchants, farmers, and a guide to the professional painter. Methods in plain and fancy painting. Including gilding, bronzing, staining, graining, marbling, varnishing, polishing, kalsomining, paper hanging, striping, lettering, copying and ornamenting, mixing paint, tools required, etc. $1.

Life at Home; or The Family and its Members. Husbands, wives, parents, children, brothers, sisters. Rev. Wm. Aikman, D. D. $1 50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of Both Sexes. Formation of character, choice of avocation, health, amusement, music, conversation, cultivation of intellect, moral sentiment, social affection, courtship and marriage. $1 50.

Wedlock; or The Right Relations of the Sexes. Laws of conjugal selection; showing who may and who may not marry. Wells. $1 50.

Oratory--Sacred and Secular. Or the extemporaneous speaker. Including a chairman's guide for conducting public meetings. Pittenger. $1 50

The Temperance Reformation; its history from the first temperance society in the United States to the adoption of the Maine Liquor Law. By Rev. J. Armstrong. $1 50.

Gems of Goldsmith. "The Traveler," "The Deserted Village," "The Hermit." With notes and original illustrations, and biographical sketch of the great author. One vol. 14mo; tinted paper, fancy cloth. Price $1.

Family Physician. A ready prescriber and hygenic adviser. With reference to the nature, causes, prevention and treatment of diseases, accidents, and casualities of every kind. By Joel Shew, M. D. $4.

Hydropathic Encyclopædia. A system of Hydropathy and Hygiene. Embracing outlines of anatomy and physiology; the preservation of health; special pathology, including the nature, causes, treatment and symptoms of all known diseases. Designed as a guide to families and students, and text book for physicians. By Trall. $4 50.

Children; Their Management in Health and Disease. A descriptive practical work. $1 75.

Family Gymnasium. Containing the most approved methods of applying gymnastic, calisthenic, kinespathic, and vocal exercises to the development of the bodily organs. By Dr. Trall. $1 75.

The Alcoholic Controversy. A review of The Westminster Review on the Pysiological Errors of Teetotalism. By R. T. Trall, M. D. 50 cents.

Annuals of Phrenology and Physiognomy. One yearly 12mo volume. Price 25 cents for the current year. For 1865, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, nine, containing over 350 illustrations, many portraits and biographies of distinguished personages, together with articles on "How to Study Phrenology," "Bashfulness," "Diffidence," "Stammering," "The Marriage of Cousins," "Jealousy; its cause and cure," etc., the nine in one volume. $2.

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French Brandy of Bitters as a stimulant.

FEVER AND AGUE.

FEVER AND AGUE cured for fifty cents. There is not a remedial agent in the world that will cure Fever and Ague, and all other malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow and other Fevers (aided by RADWAY'S PILLS), so quick as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. Fifty cents per bottle. Sold by Druggists.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES; SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. Price $1.

WORMS—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 18, 1869

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

DR. RADWAY'S

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's
CALIFORNIA VINEGAR
BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS'
WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers wish their papprs discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Peace Societies.

The Peace Cause is as old as the Christian religion, but the first Peace Society of modern times was organized in the city of New York in the Summer of 1815, when the sad results of our last war with Great Britain was yet fresh in the minds of the people. Thirteen years later the American Peace Society was formed in Boston, so that it has been in operation more than forty five years. Its objects are to prevent wars between nations and rebellions at home. If it cannot prevent all such, it will not labor in vain if it forestalls one in a score, or even one in a hundred, any more than temperance societies, because they cannot abolish all intemperance.

Peace societies in our country and Europe hope to accomplish their object by bringing the truth, and especially the truth of the Gospel, to bear on the custom of war They propose as substitutes for it mutual forbearance, negotiation, arbitration and, ultimately, a Congress or High Court of Nations, to settle national difficulties. So numerous and influential have they become that they have already done much for the maintainance of peace. But much more must be done, or the demon of war will continue to curse our country and the world. Surely it is better to prevent than to suffer.

The American Peace Society has various appliances for influencing public sentiment. It publishes a monthly periodical—"The Advocate of Peace"—which is worthy of a wide circulation. It has on its catalogue about one hundred different books and tracts written with great ability, and containing facts, arguments, incidents and illustrations which are perfectly convincing. It employs agents and colporteurs to bring the cause before the people by the living voice and the circulation of its publications. It bespeaks the aid of editors, ministers, teachers and all others in its heaven born enterprise

It is commended by such men as Gov. Buckingham, Bishop Morris, Prof. Peabody, Stephen H. Tyng, Howard Malcom, E. O. Haven, Reverdy Johnson, David D. Field, William E. Dodge, Geo. H. Stuart and thousands of other philanthropists and chirstians. If all will co-operate with it and do what they can to produce a right public sentiment in relation to war, the time will soon come when national duels will be as unpopular as individual ones now are.

Properties of White Sugar.

In many cases white sugar has been employed as efficaciously in remedying drunkenness as ammonia. No rationale of a very satisfactory character has yet been adduced for the action of so simple a substance as sugar under these circumstances, except that it serves to bring on a different fermentation than the existing one in the stomach, and to neutralize, by the formation of new compounds, the action of the liquors. A curious fact has long been observed, namely, that the life of animals which breathe in the water is incompatible with the presence therein of even an inconsiderable quantity of sugar. In some parts of Europe one of the methods pursued in the preservation of fish consists in removing the viscera and sprinkling sugar over the interior, keeping the fish in a horizontal position so that the sugar may penetrate as much as possible. It is said that fish prepared in this way can be kept completely fresh for a long time, the savor being as perfect as if recently caught from the water; and salmon, especially, treated in this manner before being salted and smoked—a tablespoonful of sugar to a five pound fish—possesses a much more agreeable taste.

Butternuts—By J. Billings.

It is better to do evil bi acksident than to do good bi acksident.

Ekonemi iz the parent ov 9-tenths ov all the welth and happiness there iz in this world.

The truth bides its time, but a lie iz alwuss in a grate hurry to vindikate itself.

Most all ov our misfortunes are the result ov karlessness.

Lazyness and fear are not recognized amung the vices, but they ort to be, for they hav dun as mutch hurt as ennything i kno ov.

The fool crop is the most prolifick and about the surest one we hav.

Thare are but few who think at all and thare are less who think right.

If we should live our lives over again we probably should make just az menny blunders, they would only be different ones.

How menny thare iz who think they are wize, just bekause they kno how to dispute.

I hav thot that men war honest from vanity az often az they waz from virtew.

It iz the amiable weaknesses of men after all that endear them to us more than enny other traits.

The man who kan keep a sekret is one who has got his vanity well under kontrol.

With all due respekt for the wimmin, i think they hav more coquetry than modesty in their natures.

Gravity often turns out to be only the wisdom of ignorance.

Menny men are obstinate from ignorance, but more are obstinate from pride of opinion.

One reazon why lies are so prevalent iz bekauz people are too lazy to hunt up the truth.

I suppoze we are constantly doing good and evil without knowing it.

Thare is no satisfakshun to the human hart so grate than the reflekshun that we hav dun a worthy ackshun.

The worst people we hav are those who hav just about az much vice az virtew in them.

Menny men decide right by a kind ov intuishshun, and if thay were called upon to give their reasons they couldn't do it.

It iz a grate art to know how to confer favors, it iz often dun in sutch a way az to do more hurt than good.

Phools are plenty enuff down here belo, and most ov them hav made themselfs so.

I don't know whitch is the biggest phool, the man who can spend two hours bragging about himself or the man who kan set pashuntly and listen to it.

A sekret is not only the hardest but the meanest kind ov a thing to keep.

Ridikule that ain't true has got more strength to it than a lie has.

Friends are lost and enimys are made by too grate familiarity.

The "Summer Vacation"

A Washington correspondent of one of the New York papers asserted a few days ago that neither the President or a single member of his Cabinet was to be found at the national capital. They were all absent enjoying their "Summer vacation." This is a new phase in our Republican court calendar. Under the earlier administrations of the Government such a statement would have excited adverse comment; but in these progressive times we get used to such things. The pernicious effect of this prevalent system of absenteeism has been made manifest in the case of the Attorney-General. A delegation goes to Washington from one of the Southern States to consult him on official business, and not only do not find him at home, but none of his clerks can tell where he has gone. They telegraph to various points where they suppose he may be recreating, and fail to obtain information of his whereabouts. In the meantime this branch of the public service is in abeyance, if not entirely suspended.—[S. F. Call.

Freaks of Electricity.

A prominent surveyor of Virginia, together with a newspaper man, paid a visit yesterday to the Crown Point mine to inspect the workings of the new reel. The inspection proving satisfactory, they next proceeded to try the effects of the electric current proceeding from a rubber belt near by. The surveyor suggested that it would be a good idea to stand upon a piece of rubber and try the effect that way. He did so. His hair began to raise in a second or two, and remained on end for a full hour. Not even Brother Wardell's private bottle, in the back room, had the desired effect of causing it to resume its natural position.—[Gold Hill News.

A Deadly Poison.

At a recent meeting of the Paris Scientific Academy, M H. Sainte Claire Deville, a distinguished chemist, offered to the gentlemen present a tight vial containing about fifteen grains of osmium, the most deadly poison known. In a short explanation M. Deville said that twenty pounds of the chemical would be sufficient to poison the entire population of the world. One thousandth part of a grain of osmic acid, set free within a volume of air of a hundred cubic yards, would possess such a deadly influence that all the persons respiring this air could be nearly killed.

Useful Hints.

A lady writing to The Country Gentlemen thus recapitulates some of the valuable suggestions she has had the good sense to learn from her servant girls. She says:

The other day Mary was ironing and asked for a piece of sand-paper to rub her irons on. I was astonished that I had never thought of it before; it is so nice, removes every bit of starch or anything else, and makes them so smooth. One girl taught me that old corsets make the best stove cloths. Just one-half at a time is a convenient size. They are ready made and much better when unfolded to take hold of anything with than a made holder and much easier to wash. Just throw them in with the brown towels, as many as you happen to get soiled through the week, and they come out clean and ready to use again. Another girl pours hot water on the blades only of steel knives, and they wipe and do not need drying. Another told me the best way to keep dry hams and dried beef was to pack in dry salt. We have tried it several years with perfect success. An old salt barrel is convenient Set in some cool, dry place; put quite a thick layer of salt in the bottom; then pack in the hams, using the pieces of dried beef, if you have any, for chinking; then cover it with salt; then hams and salt again until the barrel is full. There is not the least danger from insects, if the hams are smoked and the beef dried and put away early before the flies come around; and they are much nicer to handle than when put in ashes or oats or anything of that kind.

Make a Note of This.

The following simple remedy to be applied to the wound inflicted by a rabid dog is said to have been used with great success in Leipsic and to some extent in this country: Wash the bite thoroughly with warm vinegar, and then pour on it a few drops of muriatic acid.

—Chandeliers, with candles in them, are the last pretty things for ear-rings.

—In Prescott, Wisconsin, an ambitious widow married "a wealthy planter from the Bermudas in search of health." He afterward stepped out to convert $1,200 of her money into United States bonds, and it is supposed he has gone back to "the Bermudas."

—A Brooklyn young woman, who abandoned her old husband, says: "He was too soft. I couldn't be hugging and kissing him all the while—it isn't my disposition. I couldn't bear to sit on his lap and cuddle him every time I wanted a cent."

—A few days ago an excited negro woman of Montgomery, Alabama, applied to a local Justice for local protection against two other negro women, who, she complained had conjured her. She stated that they took some snake bones and love powders and tore up the bricks in front of her gate and put them under th bricks.

—A strong-minded woman in Detroit made the following gentle reply to a politician who had called at her house to get her husband to go to the polls to vote: "No, sir; he can't go. He's washing now, and he's going to iron tomorrow; and if he wasn't doing anything he couldn't go. I run this 'ere house, I do; and if any one votes it will be this same woman."

—Newspapers which have been publishing thrilling details of the assassination of Minister Kido, of Japan, are respectfully requested to relieve the anxiety of his American friends by stating that the story is untrue in every respect. State Equalizers Smashed.

The Supreme Court has denied a rehearing in Houghton vs. Austin, a case involving the constitutionality of the State Board of Equalization. The opinion was written by McKinstry with the concurrence of Wallace and Niles, and with the dissent of Crockett and Rhodes. The following propositions are laid down and each is sustained by full argument and reference to numerous authorities: 1. Taxation is legislative in its character. 2. The authority of the Legislature to levy taxes cannot be delegated to a State Board. 3. The clause of the Code authorizing the State Board of Equalization to alter assessments as made by the county officers is unconstitutional.

Goldsmith Maid and the Babies.

When Goldsmith Maid came round the third time, and the Judges declared her winner and the time 2:16, there was a universal uprising upon the grand stand, accompanied by huzzas and the waving of handkerchiefs. The ladies appeared to be more enthusiastic than the men. A gentleman states that on turning round he saw a woman near him waving her handkerchief with all her might, but on looking down he saw her baby lying at her feet and beginning to cry. "Madam," said he, pointing to it, "your child" "Oh," said she, "I forgot all about the baby; but it makes no difference. I expect to have several babies, but I never expect to see another Goldsmith Maid.--[Jackson (Michigan) Citizen.

For War.

The Woodhull, it is reported, will soon bring suit against Judge Noah Davis of New York for issuing a warrant and causing her arrest. She says she can now prove that Davis was aware he had no law for his proceeding, and that he usruped authority. She also blames Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony for refusing to defend her by speaking at the time of her arrest, when they might, by simply uttering the truth they know, have saved her from being unjustly imprisoned.

Grant for a Third Term

The New York Herald's Long Branch letter authoratively says that President Grant desires and expects a nomination for the third term, not as a candidate of the Republican party, but as a candidate of the anti-Republican and anti Administration forces upon the Liberal Republican and Democratic platform of 1872. A number of leading Western Liberals had a conference with the President a few days ago when the above arrangement was made

THE COST OF THE CENTRAL PACIFIC.

According to the report of the Chief Engineer of the Central Pacific railroad the cost of each mile of the 1,219 miles of that road was $120,000 a mile We suppose that engineer, and the company he lies for, take the people of this coast to be fools of the most obtuse order. With the exception of about 300 miles, including the snow-shed section, the average cost of the remainder could not by any possibility have exceeded $20,000 a mile, or one-fifth of the amount set forth in this lying report.

A single intelligent glance must convince any one at all acquainted with the line of this road that that report is a falsehood, four times over, on its face. Assuming honest work and management, as in other public works, the whole cost of the road, save in the matter of grading can be absolutely demonstrated by a simple arithmetical calculation. From such calculations, including the entire cost of grading and superstructure, a road with a gauge of 4 feet 8½ inches, laid with ties two feet apart and iron of 45 pounds to the yard, every dollar of the necessary cost of the Central Pacific is for three fourths of its length fairly included in $12,000 per mile This is allowing $1,000 per mile for grading, which is amply sufficient on level sage-brush plains. But for sidings, stations and extraordinaries over and above those already included, there remains yet $8,000 more to be added to the cost of each mile to bring it up to just one fifth the sum claimed in this unblushing report.

The company claims an actual investment in the road, in round numbers of $144,000,000, upon which amount they ask and in various ways are receiving interest. That is to say, the object of his report is to set forth a basis for imposing rates that will pay the interest on this immense sum. In the way of bonds, lands, State and county subsidies, saying nothing of absolute donations, amounting to considerable sums, this corporation has received something near $64,000,000, or several millions more than the entire road could have cost by any reasonable possibility. Yet it is not satisfied to accept this as a free gift and a reasonable rate of interest on the same, but demands interest on nearly twice as much more of purely fictitious capital. We have alluded to this matter merely to show what a foolish thing it is for people in this county to turn their eyes to this corporation, expecting it to pay money out of its own pocket in building a branch road for our benefit, or, without such branch roads, to expect freight rates over its existing lines at low figures such as our exigencies demand. Such hopes and expectations are too fallacious to be worth a minute's consideration. These men have been presented with a splendid railroad--one that did not cost them a cent of their own money--and yet, not satisfied, are ever scheming, lying and conniving for more. Is it reasonable to suppose that such men will ever expend a dollar for such branch road for the sake of its legitimate business only? It is absurd to expect it. They would kindly consent to manage the road and collect the tolls, they to have the sole right of fixing the rates, if we would build and equip and convey it to them in fee simple; but, otherwise there is not the remotest probability that they will ever have anything to with it.

The Effects of Pure Air.

As showing how deleterious pure air sometimes proves, we have two instances in the recent experience of two Bakersfield men. The Courier man spent a few days in the mountains 4,000 above his accustomed malaria, and the effect of such a quantity of pure air, as he informs his readers, was to send him home too sick to attend to his editorial duties and as the paper shows for which he begs indulgence, had to do most all living last week on the flat of his back The other instance mentioned in the same issue was Lawrence, District Attorney of that county Some three weeks since he left Bakersfield on some official business, and notwithstanding almost every paper in the State has had something to say about his unaccountable absence and unknown whereabouts it now appears that the poor man was brought to bed and has been confined at Tehachepi by reason of too much pure air, or rather a lack of his regular malaria. These circumstances open a new field (Bakers field) of research for medical sharps. But the editor of The Californian, who staid strictly with his malaria all the time, was also sick that week, so the learned sharps will have a beautiful chance to distinguish themselves in harmonizing old beliefs with the new theory of the deleterious effects of pure air. But they are bound to admit that it is refreshing—the pure air, not the new theory.

Representative Men.

[From The New York Sun.]

A Congressional committee was recently appointed at Washington to manage the approaching campaign, chosen from the two Houses. It consists of thirty five members and four delegates. Of these fourteen are from the Senate and twenty-one from the House, and of the latter there are twelve, or about one-third, who are new members In making up this committee ordinarily, the utmost care is taken to select men who are not only free from general objection, but whose character and conduct inspire confidence.

This wise rule of discrimination has been wholly set aside and despised in the present instance, and an insulting disregard of even decency substituted for it, which makes the act doubly offensive. A glance at the standing of individual members is sufficient to determine their unfitness for such a position. Here are the names:

John A. Logan, Chairman--Back-pay grabber and extreme inflationist.

A. H Cragin--Back-pay grabber and jobber in the navy.

Simon Cameron--Back-pay grabber and life long corruptionist.

J F Lewis--Back pay grabber and scalawag.

George E Spencer--Back-pay grabber and carpet-bagger.

J. R West--Back pay grabber and confederate of Kellogg.

L B Conover--Back-pay grabber and carpet bagger.

J. W. Flanagan--Back-pay grabber and scalawag.

A. L. Boreman--Back-pay grabber

W. M. Stewart--Back pay grabber and Emma mine trader.

P. W. Hitchcock - Back pay grabber.

Powell Clayton--Back-pay grabber, carpet-bagger and Arkansas jobber.

J. H. Mitchell, alias Mitchell-Hipple--Much married jobber.

Zachariah Chandler--Dealer in temperance, morals and political purity.

E. L. Cobb--Back pay grabber and small scalawag.

R. H. Whitely--Back-pay grabber and carpet-bagger.

Geo. C. McKee--Back-pay grabber and carpet-bagger.

S. O Houghton--Back pay grabber.

H. H. Starkweather--Confidential ally and whitewasher of the Washington ring.

The new members are almost entirely unknown, and serve as mere figure heads to this majority. The four delegates from the Territories, with Chipman of the District of Columbia at their head, pocketed every cent of the back pay. So that in fact this committee may be said to be composed of grabbers, carpet baggers and scalawags, and some of them are the very worst specimens of these three tribes in Congress. It is easy to imagine what sort of reform such patriots would preach.

Tragedy near Knight's Ferry.

The Indian rancheria on the south bank of the Stanislaus river, near Knight's Ferry, on Saturday night last was the scene of a tragedy, resulting in the death of a white man and the wounding of two Indians. It appears that a young man by the name of Morgan, formerly of Columbia, Tuolumne county, arrived at Knight's Ferry on his way home from the State Prison where he had just served out a term of three years, and at once got upon a drunk He then proceeded to the Mexican portion of the town where he made several ineffectual attempts to create a disturbance. He then crossed the river and proceeded to the Indian camp, about 12 o'clock at night. His first movement was to shoot a dog, which caused a remonstrance on the part of the Indians, when he fired at one of them, the brother of Jack or Tommy Grant, as he is sometimes called, the ball grazing the scalp; he then fired a second shot, the ball entering Grant's head a little above the eye and passing under the brain. Jack then rushed upon his assailant and with a large pocket knife stabbed him to the heart, ripping his side completely open. Morgan died without a struggle Jack immediately sent for Pentland and Grayson and informed them of what he had done, and said that he should make no attempt to run away but demanded a trial. On the following day Dr Lowe probed the wound in Jack's head but was unable to extract the ball. It is generally believed that the Indian --who is decidedly a favorite with the whites in the vicinity where he has been raised on account of his industry and general good behavior--cannot live but a short time. E T. Stone, Justice of the Peace and acting Coroner, at once summoned a jury aud held an inquest on the body of Morgan, and rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts as above stated. The remains of Morgan were conveyed to Columbia for interment. The general impression seems to be that Morgan was a desperate character, and that society suffers nothing by his death.--[Modesto News, August, 6th.

Local Option in Los Angeles.

The election yesterday on the question of Local Option was held in Los Nietos township and at Compton and Wilmington. Panamint Matters.

Following is an extract from a private letter to us from a gentleman in Panamint whose opinions are worth as much as any man's, and therefore we call the especial attention of the Mail Agent and the Telegraph Stage Company both, to a suggestion or two of interest to them, in the hope that some action toward a compliance will be taken immediately. The letter was written on the 3d:

"The machinery of the Panamint Mining Compony is arriving daily, and will soon be erected. The damage to the road is all repaired, and it is now all in good shape. A great many people are coming in here every day. Mr Henry Jones and Senator Stewart and party will arrive to-day. They come to inspect our mines, those of which now being worked looking very well indeed Two new and valuable lodes were discovered last week.

The weather is pleasant, with an occasional shower, just enough to cool us off finely And here, I will remark, we have something else to brag on besides our fine display of ores, and that is fine and pure water as the Sierra Nevada affords.

WHAT IS NEEDED MOST.

What we want and need worse than almost anything else now is a tri weekly stage and mail. We have a mail route from Lagunita, an office and a Postmaster, but no service ordered. Why don't the Telegraph Stage Co. do something to assist these miners? They have been, all these voyageurs, good patrons of that line. There are dozens of people at San Francisco to go on their coaches, and would come at once, if they knew they could ride into the mines. If that company will not put the line on somebody else certainly will and soon, too, for it is very much needed. We are paying 25 cents on each letter and paper to get our mail from Lagunita post office by private conveyance. The Pacific Coast should certainly do something to supply mail facilities to a camp now containing some three or four hundred miners, and the number constantly increasing.

ANOTHER MATTER WORTH ATTENTION.

Our camp next season (and the present, too,) will afford a good market for a large amount of hay, grain and other produce, all of which could be brought from your valley at fair profit, if a road was cut through that little range this side of Coso. I very much hope the Supervisors will give that matter all due consideration at an early day.

X."

OUR BENTON LETTER.

BENTON, Aug. 13.

MESSRS. EDS—A few incidents possibly worth noting have occurred since my last. It is hardly worth mentioning, but our mines are turning out richer than ever, consequently mill men meet their obligations promptly, so that business of every kind is lively as it can be. Benton is bound to be the principal inland city any where in this section of country, either in this State or Nevada

MINE SOLD

Mr. Aaron sold an interest of 250 feet in the Yellow Jacket mine to Mr. Mitchell. I cannot give the amount of the consideration, but it must be for a pretty good figure, as the mine has produced quantities of very rich ore, a good deal of which has been sent to Reno for reduction.

WHAT IT COST.

The cost of striking a man in Benton is $40. Two of Frank Shaw's hay makers came to town last Sunday, and began prospecting for a row and found it. One of them unceremoniously struck a man by the name of Bishop with his revolver while standing in Crosss' saloon. They then went out and fired three or four shots to let the Justice and Constable know that they intended to make business for them. In this they succeeded, though no one was seriously injured, unless, financially and socially, it was the aforesaid prospectors who were arrested and fined $40 each and costs.

HIS RAGE TOWERS HIGH.

I propose to make my personals strictly reliable, because I learn that one of the gentlemen mentioned in our last letter was highly insulted because his name appeared in your paper; and also heard that he threatened to raise the hair of your correspondent if the offense was repeated. [If this threat came from the big two fisted bully we suppose it did, that is enough to "raise the hair" without using a regular scalping knife. It is fearful to think of!—EDS.]

PERSONALS.

We were favored with a short visit from one of your prominent citizens and citizenesses, Mr. Reddy and lady, who arrived Saturday evening and remained till Monday morning. Messrs. Hutchison, Hill, Miner, Wickland, Lyford and Thompson start for the Yosemite to-morrow morning. They ought to have a good time as they are without an exception, all jolly good fellows. Mr. Sanguinetti has returned from Aurora, but has gone again I do not know where, but we are quite confidant he "means it" and that he is determined to "fagle this thing up." SNOB.

The Delano Station.

We learn that the railroad company are pulling up the round house at Delano and removing it to the bank of Kern river, two and a half miles this side of Baker-field. We hear it said further that it is proposed to build a station some nine miles beyond the latter place--[Visalia Delta.

--The Great Western Railway Company, of England, has abandoned the broad for the narrow-gauge. The change of gauge of the whole line was effected in three days, and with it ends the broad-gauge system in Great Britain.

Kentucky Elections.

Reports from principal points in Kentucky indicate that in the election on the 6th instant the Democrats carried the State for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. The other nominees were elected according to local feeling, and party lines in most cases were not closely drawn. Local Option was everywhere defeated.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

A Dirty Outrage.

Monday evening last a gang of five or six well known hoodlums rode up to the Indian camp west of town, and after knocking down or severely injuring Indian George with a stone for trying to rescue his squaw from their brutish clutches, they outraged her before his eyes. A runner came to town after the Sheriff, who, with Under Sheriff Swearingen, immediately started to the rescue, but by the time they got close enough to recognize them by their voices, the gang took the alarm and mounting their horses, fled like a pack of cayotes. They were ordered to stop and had a pistol shot fired after them, but this only accelerated their speed. It is a source of general regret that the Indians do not put a ball through the perpetrators of such high handed outrages as this, which, if properly prosecuted under the law, as we are told it will be, would surely send every one of them to the Penitentiary.

Piute District.

Francisco Gonzales and two other men came down from this Bishop Creek district, Thursday, bringing with them some particularly rich gold rock from a new ledge recently struck Gonzales is highly elated with his prospect, the three owning one hundred feet on the ledge. A Mr. Johnson had purchased a half interest in the discovery claim, having paid $4,000 for it, and is now gone to San Francisco to procure the machinery for a five-stamp mill, to be erected and put to work on this ore immediately. Griswold & Co.'s arastra was running steadily, but with what results we have not heard.

For Yosemite.

Gen. Davis and staff, whose arrival we noted last week, having finished their duties at Camp Independence started Thursday on their return. They will go to the Yosemite, Lieut. Wotherspoon, of the Post, being in command of their escort. These officers, each and all, have a knack of making friends with all of our citizens with whom they come in contact. Col. Wingard, Paymaster, whom everybody knows and likes, was along with the party.

Struck It.

We are pleased to know that the ledge for which Superintendent Wingard has been running his tunnel on the Virginia Consolidated was struck Thursday last, and at a depth of two hundred feet from the surface. The vein rock is loose and requires timbering before the ledge can be cut through to determine its thickness, and this work has to be done at once, but enough is developed to know that the ledge is large and the whole prospect very satisfactory.

Gone Below.

Special officer W. L. Moore started Monday last for Stockton to take A. C. Matlack to the Asylum. The deranged man was anxious to go, realizing that it might restore his shattered mind to its normal condition, in which hope it is much to be wished he and his friends may not be disappointed. The barber with the unpronounceable name, held as a lunatic, has been sent to Dr. Gelcich for treatment in the County Hospital at Lone Pine, his lunacy being considered temporary and of the snakes-in-the-boots order.

The Amount.

As shown by Assessor Dillon's books, the sum total of the taxable property of this county foots up to $1,589,730, which is much the largest showing the county has ever made. The supplemental list has been returned and included in the above, accounting for the material increase above our previous report published a few weeks since. As there were but very few applications to the Board of Eqalization for a reduction on assessments we infer that Dillon and his deputies have done their duty fair and well.

Oasis Lodge, No. 352.

Following is the full list of officers of the above Good Templar lodge located at Bishop, which lodge, by the way, is doing excellent work: Mrs. Minerva Inman, W. C. T.; Laura Hall, W. R. H. S.; Addie Inman, W. L. H. S.; W. T. Wiswall, W. V. T.; D. E. Hunter, W. S.; T. M. Clark, W. A. S; J. C. Mills, W. F. S.; Fred Schwartz, W. T.; Wm Dean, W. M.; Jos. W. Inman, W. C.; Stanton Powers, W. I. G.; G. A. Free, W. O. G.

Lumber for Lida.

Gen. Page is having a large amount of lumber shipped from Lewis' mill at Bishop Creek and Stewart & McDonald's at Big Pine for use in improving his Lida Valley mill property. Inman and Garrison start in a day or two with two heavy teams loaded with lumber from Lewis' mill, after delivering which they enter on extensive quartz and wood hauling contracts at Lida.

To Meet.

Barring accidents, sickness, a press of other business, change of mind or other interfering contingencies, the County Dads will meet next Monday in special session to take up the business of the late regular term, passed by default. The tax rates on the present assessment are not to be fixed till the October term.

Birthday Party.

Though not very extensive in point of numbers it was the jolliest party we have seen for many a day which spent the greater part of two days helping Harry Wright, of the Taboose, and his amiable spouse to celebrate his birth day. There were many things besides the over abundance of good things to eat, and the general good time worthy of note, but for the present we can make no more than a passing allusion, not forgetting to express our obligations to Brown, of the Pioneer Stables, for personal favors at his hands shared by "THE INDEPENDENT family" generally. There was another Brown, H. C., better known as "Bill," who fairly earned good praise for the music he furnished for the dancers, never flagging or hanging back for a moment, all the time, notwithstanding he had to do all the "calling," which of itself was enough to wear two men out. This Brown fulfills his duties well. A real surprise party was tendered Mr. D. B. Curtis at his "bach ranch," not far distant from the Taboose, but we don't propose to say anything about the dancing that was done there, nor of the numerous roasting ears, melons and such that the young ladies corraled. (The old folks have no taste for such things) We pass all these things, but will say that the Taboose Ranch parties are always a success, because both Mr. and Mrs. Wright know how to extend a welcome and get up good things for the hungry, such as are rarely met with elsewhere, causing this station to be one of the most popular on the road. Harry is improving the place as rapidly as possible, and ere long will have not only a fine looking "ranch," but a very valuable one. The soil is excellent, water abundant, and trees and flowers and "garden truck" of all sorts, grain and tame grasses all grow there remarkably well. It will require a year or two to get the place in good shape, but it is a very pleasant resort as it is, and just a nice drive of less than two hours and a half.

From Panamint.

Mr. Connelly returned from Panamint this week. He goes back next week, intending to go into business there. Billy Lake remained there, being, we believe, interested with him. He is highly elated with the general outlook of the camp. Senator Stewart, Trenor Park and Henry Jones were there and are pleased beyond their expectation. Jones says he will have a 20-stamp mill running there in less than 100 days The machinery for the Jacobs' mill was all on the ground. The toll road, recently washed out, is in rep ir again. It is reported that Jones and Rains have become large owners in the r ad. We are ob ged to omit mention of several other interesting items in this connection now.

Fun To-Night.

Our citizens to-night, and elsewhere in the valley hereafter, are promised a very entertaining performance by Johnnie Mack, the famous dancer and comedian, and Mr. Alf Graham, who is said to be an excellent delineator or imitator of celebrated actors, particularly in Shakspeare, also a singer, especially of impromptu songs, made up of local affairs, and as he "goes along" in the song.

To Whom It May Concern.

The attention of all parties to whom this heading will apply is directed to two notices in this issue, signed by W. L. Kennedy at Panamint.

Music.

Among the new advertisements will be found that of W. H. C., or "Bill" Brown, who is a good ball room musician and prompter.

Accident.

A few days since Mr. D. E. Hunter, at Bishop Creek, slipped from a ladder, spraining his ankle so severely as to lay him up for a week or two.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

The Philadelphia Kidnapping Case.

The Philadelphia Press has the following as the latest special report in the boy abduction case, which shows how little progress has been made in the solution of the mystery:

From news gained in police circles and from private sources it may be set down as a certainty that Charlie Ross is in Philadelphia to-day, and if not he is not very far from here. If the child has been moved from this city it is just possible that one of the men took him away in his charge, while the other remained here and endeavored to negotiate with the bereaved father to return the child for a sum that seemed fabulous. It would thus seem that the idea in kidnapping the boy was to secure money; and finding that they could not accomplish their ends as easily as they expected, and public indignation running high, the miscreants resolved to take things quietly, and wait until the storm against them has died when, no doubt, further bargains will be attempted. The men who did the work are undoubtedly professional thieves, as large pecuniary rewards would have long ago induced a novice in one or the other parties to give the detectives a clew on his "pal," turn State's evidence himself and escape punishment. As the case now stands there is every reason to believe that in a short time—probably in less than a week—something may turn up which will give the case an entirely new phase, and show that some one has had a hand in the matter who professes entire ignorance of the scheme, and who loudly cries "innocence."

Over the Niagara Gorge.

[From The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, July 28.]

Our readers have heretofore read something in these columns in regard to Stephen Peer, of Drummondsville, Ont., the remarkable young man who succeeded in "walking away" with Signor Balleni at the Falls last season, in the matter of funambulistic honors. Peer has not been idle since he first came into notice and public favor as a rope walkist, and by dint of practice and application has become an adept in this peculiar line. His first performance yesterday afternoon was very successful, and pleased all who witnessed it.

The rope on which the intrepid funambulist crossed the Niagara gorge was purchased at a cost of $400, part of the amount being subscribed by residents at the Falls, as we understand. It is one and three-fourths of an inch thick—half an inch smaller than the one used by Balleni—and its entire length is 1,260 feet. It is 190 feet above the river at the ends, 130 feet in the center, and is supported by strong guy ropes fastened to the American and Canadian banks. The rope is located on the American side about midway between the Bridal Veil and the Niagara Falls Gas Works, and stretches away to Victoria Point on the Canadian shore, a short distance below the new Suspension bridge, from which, by the way, a splendid view of the exhibition could be obtained, as also from either terminus of the rope.

A large crowd had assembled at the various advantageous points about 3 o'clock, at which hour the performance commenced. On the American side was stationed Young's band, of this city, which had accompanied a picnic party from here in the morning. It is estimated that about two thousand people in all witnessed the hazardous feat. Peer started from the Canadian side, walking very slowly at first. He was dressed in a suit resembling that of a circus rider, wore a red skull cap and carried a balance pole twenty-one feet in length and weighing forty-nine pounds. The wind was blowing quite briskly, but was not strong enough to interfere with the walkist's project.

Peer crossed on the rope to the American side in safety, having stopped six times on the way over. He was greeted with loud cheers. The exhibition was a free one, but on his arrival at the bank he, and others in his interest, went around among the crowd and collected subscriptions from those willing to contribute. In this way quite a handsome sum was obtained, not a few of the spectators being quite liberal in their gifts. This important feature of the programme being carried out, Peer started on his return trip. The band struck up a slow march, to which the walkist kept accurate time for about half the distance across. Arriving at the center, he secured his balance pole with his handkerchief, and then went through several acrobatic feats with deftness and agility. After this, he again grasped the pole and started for the Canadian bank on a brisk trot, which he maintained for quite a long distance. He finished the walk without incident, and did not seem at all wearied by his exertions.

Stephen Peer has lived on the Canadian side of the Falls all his life, and is well known on both sides and throughout the vicinity. He was formerly a painter and subsequently a hack driver. In a conversation with our reporter yesterday afternoon he stated that he gained his first ideas of rope walking from the performances of Blondin several years ago, and made up his mind he would go into the same business after due practice and "learning the ropes. This he has done, and the Niagara Falls people are rather proud of him; for though rope walking is no new thing to him, Peer is a native there, and his feats are certainly fully as good as those of his predecessors.

—A man in San Francisco, who closed his saloon one night recently to allow a lady in the rooms above to die quietly is now suing her heirs for $350 for the accommodation.

The Commanding Operation of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS in Chronic Dyspepsia, Fevers, Nervous Disorders, Constipation, Deficiency of vital power, and all maladies affecting the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the pulmonary organs or the muscular system, is exciting the wonder of scientific men and creating such a sensation among the sick as was never before witnessed in any age. The sales of this great vegetable remedy have been quadrupled within a single year. n216m1

SQUIBLETS.

—A female pawnbroker in New York advertises herself as "a poor loan woman."

—Senator Logan's friends think it very hard that Nast should have pictured him as a dog just at this time of the year.

—In Cuban hotels butter is served up, when called for, in long-necked bottles, and looks very much like wagon-grease.

—The Newport ladies are trying to make "a feature" of kittens, as companions. Nearly every dog has his day.

—A liberal reward will be paid for the editor who has not inflicted a pun upon the name of Mr. Jewell, the new Postmaster-General.

—Switzerland compels every newly married couple to plant six trees immediately after the ceremony, and two on the birth of every child.

—The "season" commenced late at Newport, but now is fully begun. The "rush" thither, however, comes the latter part of July and in August.

—There are only two 50-ton steam-hammers in the world. One is at Krupp's works in Essen; the other at the Government steel works in St. Petersburg.

—Bloggs wants to know how soon Henry Ward Beecher will send in his sealed verdict to the investigating committee appointed by himself. Bloggs is cynical.—[Cincinnati Commercial.

—Gen. Butler is living at Lowell, Mass., this Summer, and looking after the defrauding cashier of one of the Lowell banks, whom he has undertaken to clear.

—Extract of a letter from an absent wife: "If John should feels like suiciding while I am gone, give him a razor, a basin and a couple of towels and lock him up in the cellar."

—The finest place at Long Branch is John Hoey's place on Cedar Avenue. Early in the Spring Hoey added ten acres to the Park, and imported over $30,000 worth of statuary for its adornment.

—"Whiffs from Ararat" is the breezy title of a journal which has been established by American pilgrims at the very foot of the mountain. The paper contains some curious local topics.

—An exchange says: "Keep an eye out for the early resumption of specie payments," to which a paper responds: "Both our eyes are already out looking for it, and so are our elbows."

—Somebody in the crowd at Queenstown asked an Irishman why he shouted "Down with Rochefort!" Pat said it "was because he killed the Archbishop." "What Archbishop?" "Sure I don't know, but I suppose it was Cardinal Cullen!"

—Seth Green, Deputy United States Commissioner, will spend the Summer at the Government fish station on the McCloud river, California, at which point fish will be hatched and sent to stock Eastern rivers.

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French Brandy of Bitters as a stimulant.

FEVER AND AGUE.

FEVER AND AGUE cured for fifty cents. There is not a remedial agent in the world that will cure Fever and Ague, and all other malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow and other Fevers (aided by RADWAY'S PILLS), so quick as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. Fifty cents per bottle. Sold by Druggists.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

FROM AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S

Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES; SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. Price $1.

WORMS—the only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

DR. RADWAY'S

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

A Story of Our County.

[From Capt. James Hobbs' "Wild Life in the Far West."]

About the year 1868 there was a great excitement in regard to the Owens river mines, in Inyo District, California. I packed my mules with provisions, a pick and shovel, with pans and other outfit, and started for Owens river, in company with a train of wagons bound for the same destination. The owner of the train was a French Canadian, by the name of Nadieu. The wagons were loaded with provisions and supplies for miners at Cerro Gordo. We arrived at Owens river, which I found a hard country, twenty-two days after leaving Los Angeles. We stopped at a place called Lone Pine, some eighteen miles from the Cerro Gordo mines. As this was a very elevated country, the snow was so deep the wagons could not ascend the mountains. The provisions were carried up the mountain on pack mules, and with my mules I accompanied them. On my arrival at the Cerro Gordo mines I saw no way of feeding my mules, and, therefore sold them to Mr. Nadieu. I then dug out a large hole in the bank, and fixed up a rude habitation. Here I became acquainted with a number of Mexicans, one of whom had discovered the mines in this vicinity.

HOW THE CERRO GORDO MINES WERE DISCOVERED.

These mines were discovered in the following manner: A Mexican by the name of Pablo Flores, who was a prisoner among the Pah Utah Indians, discovered some green rocks and lead ore. A short time after he had found these metals the Americans had a fight with the Indians at Owen's Lake, when he made his escape. He showed the Americans specimens of the metals, which led to the discovery of the Cerro Gordo mines.

All the metals in the vicinity are worked by smelting, or by the fire process. I soon commenced work for Belshaw and Elder, in the erection of a smelting furnace. After the furnace was completed I continued in their employ in smelting ores. These metals contain arsenic and other poisons. In working these metals there is made what is called a flux, which is a composition of lead, silver, iron and cinder or dross, which is put in a furnace and smelted and then run into pigs or bars, composed of lead and silver. The pigs are then shipped to San Francisco where the lead is separated from the silver. A ton of these pigs yields nearly a thousand dollars in silver. The lead is worth about five and a half cents per pound there, and just about covers the expense of transportation to San Francisco, and the expense of separating and refining.

I continued in this business until I became paralyzed from the effects of the poison in the smoke, when I was placed in the hands of a physician, and by the time I was able to resume work I had expended all my funds. I then became acquainted with a man by the name of Honn [C. F. R. ?], a Dutchman, who told me he came here from Salt Lake by the way of Death Valley, which he considered a very rich country in the way of minerals, and proposed to me to go with him to prospect that country. I told him I had no means, to which he said all he wanted was a couple of pack mules or jacks, and provisions, for which he could furnish the means. He agreed that we should fare equally in whatever we found, and said if we were successful in prospecting, he had a friend who would furnish anything we might want for mining, provided we would give him a share. We then bought two jacks and loaded them with provisions and mining utensils, and started for Death Valley, in company with a man named Hunter, who joined us the day we left.

DEATH VALLEY.

The region about Death Valley is, for the most part, very mountainous, but in some sections are found deserts of sand sixty miles in width. During the year 1852, an emigrant train in passing through this section attempted to go through this valley, as they stood in great fear of the Indians who infested the mountains. But they ran from one danger into another. In crossing this desert they lost their way, and with one exception all perished. The man who survived, whom we met, gave an account of a rich silver mine, which was discovered by one of the men who had perished. The man who found this mine made a gun-sight of a piece of the metal, which gave to the mine the name of

"GUN-SIGHT LODE."

We tried to induce our informant to accompany us to this mine, but he declined, saying that he had passed through enough in that section already, and never wished to return there.

As the account of the richness of the mine was very flattering, we decided, after learning its location, to find it if possible. On our arrival in the valley we found the remnants of the train and the skeletons of the party in a locality which agreed with the description given us, as did the location of the surrounding mountains in the distance. In prospecting we found many kinds of minerals, but the country was destitute of water and wood, the mountains being composed of ledges of rock. But the mine we were unable to find. After searching in vain for eight days, finding but little water, my feet became so lame that I was able to walk only with great difficulty. My friends left me at a small pool of water which we fortunately found; and, taking with them provisions and water sufficient for two days, started on a prospecting trip to a mountain which appeared about twenty miles distant, saying that they would return the next day if possible.

I remained at this pool four days, my friends not making their appearance. My anxiety on account of my friends, who were now two days behind their time, was now intense, as I feared that even if they did not perish from lack of food and water, they might be massacred by the Pah Utah Indians, as I knew they frequented that vicinity. I also felt that I was in no condition to defend myself if attacked by Indians.

HAHN AND HUNTER LOST.

On the morning of the fifth day I went to the top of a high hill to take an observation, and from there I discovered a man coming over the sandy plain below. I started to go to him, and found on reaching him that it was my friend Honn, who was nearly dead from hunger and thirst. In answer to my inquiries, he said he had left Mr. Hunter three or four miles back so exhausted that he was unable to go further. I then took Mr. Honn into camp and gave him food and drink. These men in going out prospecting had refused to take the jacks for fear they might not find water sufficient for them, and they might perish, thus leaving us no means of escape from that barren country.

THE JACKS EAT UP THE FLOUR.

While I had been gone, two hours, the jacks had been into our camp and eaten up most of our flour, which placed us in no enviable situation. Mr. Honn, after eating, immediately fell asleep, and I took some provisions and a canteen of water and started in search of Mr. Hunter, taking Mr. Honn's tracks as a guide. In my anxiety I did not stop to get the jacks but started on foot. I found Mr. Hunter asleep, with his gold pan under his head. When I aroused him from his slumber, he looked wildly at me and attempted to escape; but I caught him and endeavored to quiet him. He soon recognized me, and made inquiries for Mr. Honn. I told him he was all right and in camp. He then said, "For God's sake, have you any water?" I gave him the canteen, which contained about three pints. He grasped it and in his eagerness would have drank it all, had I not taken it away from him, when he begged that he might drink all he wished. I told him he must eat something, and when he had done so I would give him more. After eating I gave him a small quantity of water, and he became more calm and rational. He then told me that in returning from the mountain, where their search had been unsuccessful, they had become bewildered, and not feeling at all sure that they were going in the right direction, he had given himself up as lost. As soon as he felt able to walk to camp, we started on our return, and when about half way there I allowed him more water and food. We arrived safely in camp about sunset.

START FOR CERRO GORDO.

We found our friend Honn still sleeping soundly, and Mr. Hunter had a good night's rest, as he slept soundly till morning. In the morning I told them we should be compelled, for want of provisions to return to Cerro Gordo as soon as they were able to travel. Our stock of flour had been reduced by the raid made on it by the thieving jacks to about six pounds and this had been somewhat injured by them. As Cerro Gordo was over a hundred miles distant, it was necessary for us to start as soon as possible in order to reach it before our provisions gave out. We retreated from this desolate place (appropriately named Death Valley), and arrived finally at the mountains just below Cerro Gordo and found the snow and ice so plenty on the mountains that our animals could not easily ascend. We told Mr. Hunter if he would remain where we then were with the jacks we would endeavor to reach the mining camp at the top of the mountain and return with provisions, which he consented to do. All we had to leave with him was a small piece of bacon and some ground coffee. The jacks were able to survive on tall bunch grass and small brush.

Mr. Honn and myself reached the top of the mountain that night about 9 o'clock, wading through the snow in some places to our waists. After much suffering from cold and hunger, by midnight we reached Cerro Gordo, or the camp of the miners. Mr. Honn being rather fond of whisky, commenced indulging freely, for he was nearly frozen; and both of us were after a while warmed up and thawed out with hot drinks furnished by these hospitable miners who had given us up as lost. Early in the morning we obtained a sack of flour, some bacon and other provisions that we could easily carry on our backs, and some matches, for we knew that we should be detained at the foot of the hill until the weather changed, and started on our return to Mr. Hunter. We had both obtained a bottle of whisky, and Honn was so careful of his that he carried it in his hand.

WHISKY FIRST, FLOUR SECOND.

He was a little unsteady from the effects of the "thawing out" process of the night before, and in descending a steep place his foot slipped, and as the sack of flour on his back made him top-heavy, he fell and rolled heels over head some thirty feet. The bag of flour caught in the brush, tearing it and spilling part of its precious contents. Honn brought up against a pine tree, and holding up his bottle, on which he had bestowed the most of his care he remarked that he saved the best part of his load. I gathered up what flour I could, and told him that I thought the flour of the most importance, but he preferred the whisky. We then made our way down the mountain as best we could, and finally found Mr. Hunter, who was overjoyed to see us. I made a fire in our little camp stove, wet up some of the flour and baked some bisquits, which with our other fixings made us a capital meal. We remained here several days, our jacks getting recruited in a small ravine below where there was no snow and the bunch grass was plenty. We now commenced to work our way up the mountain sides with our jacks, for the snow had rapidly melted and settled and then frozen stiff, so we could get our beasts along. In due time we arrived in camp at Cerro Gordo, where we were looked upon almost as having returned from the grave.

A GOLD SPECIMEN.

Soon after our return a Pah Utah Indian came to Cerro Gordo with a very rich specimen of gold. He could talk Spanish a little, and told me if I would give him some presents he would show where the gold was. I then asked my friends Hunter and Honn if they would accompany me with the Indian. Mr. Honn was ready to go, but Mr. Hunter, on ascertaining that from all I could learn from the Indian the mine was probably on the borders of Death Valley, said he had seen all he wished to of that country, and would not return there if the whole country was a solid mass of gold. I then took the piece of gold the Indian gave me and had it assayed, when it proved very rich. I took the Indian to a store and asked him what he wanted, and he said some calico, tobacco, a pipe and some beads, which I gave him. We then bought provisions enough to load our two jacks and another a friend of mine gave me, and started to find the gold ledge, which the Indian told us it would require ten days to reach.

TO DEATH VALLEY AGAIN.

The first eight days of our journey passed without any particular adventure. On the ninth day when we awoke in the morning our Indian was missing, and I never saw him afterwards. I told Honn that the Indian having proved false, we had better go on, as we were so near Death Valley, and do the best we could at prospecting. He thought the Indian had started off for his tribe to inform them of our position, and feared that they would soon be down on us in force to murder us. I told him we had two Henry rifles, which would give us thirty-two shots, and two six-shooters with twelve shots more, making forty-four shots, and that those Indians only had bows and arrows, and that we could cope successfully with them, and we had better proceed, hoping to find gold enough to make our trip profitable.

CAPTURE A SQUAW.

We started soon after breakfast, taking along a ten-gallon keg of water, and followed an Indian trail till about 4 o'clock, when we suddenly came across a squaw of the Pah Utah tribe, who was digging palm roots, which is the principal food of the tribe. On seeing us she was badly frightened, and fell fell on knees making signs for us not to kill her. I then took her by the hand and raising her up showed her our water keg, and made signs to ascertain if she could tell us where we could obtain water. She then started, and following the Indian trail showed us a small spring. Here we encamped for the night. Immediately after showing us the water she wanted to leave us, and I made signs for her to remain and she should have something to eat. When I offered her some food she took it in silence, but would eat nothing till Mr. Honn and myself commenced eating, when she had more confidence and began to eat. After supper Mr. Honn and myself lit our pipes and commenced smoking, when she made signs that she wanted to smoke, and I politely offered her the pipe, when she puffed away and blew the smoke out of her nose several times, then returned me the pipe. After this she appeared more contented, and remained with us that night, being provided with a blanket, etc.

A FRIGHT.

I told Mr. Honn I deemed it prudent for one of us to remain on guard, and he thought the same. I therefore kept awake until after midnight, when he relieved me, and stood guard till nearly morning, when we were aroused by our jacks running towards us much frightened. At first we thought the Indians were upon us, and, jumping up, we seized our rifles and prepared to give them a warm reception; but the howling of wolves around us convinced us that there was no cause of alarm from Indians just then. Although wolves may not seem very desirable neighbors, we felt much relieved when we found what frightenen our animals.

After breakfast we were about resuming our march, when I made signs to the squaw to learn where we could find the next spring of water. She pointed forward in the direction of the Indian trail, making signs to the sun, so that I understood we could reach water before sunset. I had with me some curiosities for Indians, such as beads, red handkerchiefs, finger-rings, etc., and I gave her a sample of each, for which she appeared grateful, and we then allowed her to depart. She started for a mountain a few miles distant, and we then journeyed onward. After going nearly fifteen miles we came to a small stream of water, which was in Death Valley, but it was so bitter as to be unfit for ourselves or animals. After looking around for some time I found a spring of good water, near which we encamped for two days. In prospecting there we discovered places which yielded eight cents perhaps to the pan but no rich ledge as we expected.

WILSON AND PATTERSON.

Here we were surprised by the appearance of two Americans who rode into our camp one of whom had an arrow sticking in his left shoulder. His name was William Wilson and that of his companion was John Patterson. They stated that they, in company with two others, come into this valley prospecting, as an Indian had shown them some rich specimens, which he said came from this vicinity. They had been visited at their camp, which was about ten miles below us, by a party of Indians, who had shown them some nice specimens of silver and gold, making signs that they were obtained at a mountain a few miles off, and offering to show them the way to these rich diggings. Two of the men left with the Indians, expecting to return the next day. The following day the two men left in camp were attacked by a party of Indians, and hastily mounting their horses they had escaped, leaving all their effects, and providentially had seen our camp and joined us. They said the two missing men were brothers, by the name of Copeland, and that they cared the Indians were traitors and would assassinate them. After I had cut the arrow head from the man's shoulder, they concluded that it was best to return to Silver Peak, where there was a miners' settlement called "Belmont flat," and get help to return to their camp and search for the Copeland brothers. Belmont was distant nearly eighty miles, and as they knew the route, and that there was water in three places, Mr. Honn and myself decided to pack up and accompany them, for the situation began to appear dangerous if we remained behind.

SEARCH AFTER THE COPELANDS.

We arrived safely at Belmont, and found it quite a settlement. We organized a party of twenty-four men, with pack mules, provisions, etc., and started back to Death Valley in search of the missing men. We searched in every direction in the valley and in the mountains where the Copelands went, but could see no traces of them, except the camp fires where the Indians had been. After two days of anxious search, we went to the camp where the two men were attacked, and found that all the property left there by them had been carried away; also found one dead Indian covered up with brush, who was very likely killed by a shot from one of the men who escaped. The Indians wisely kept out of our sight, for our party of twenty-four men were well armed. Being satisfied that our search was of no avail, Mr. Wilson said he would be revenged on the Indians for the loss of his friends.

POISONING A SACK OF FLOUR.

He had brought some strychnine for that purpose, and mixing some of it with a sack of flour and one of sugar, left them as a present to the rascally red skins if they should happen to return there. The whole party now concluded to return to Belmont and obtain provisions and mining implements to work several mines or placers which we had discovered. While at Belmont an old Indian came into the place and

THE STATEMENTS MADE.

The public interest in the great scandal will now, perhaps, reach its culminating point, since both Moulton and Beecher came forward with their long delayed statements. Moulton had prepared two, one very long one and one quite short. The latter only was given to the committee, and presents no new points of overwhelming importance such as the public were led to anticipate.

Beecher's statement is very long and is a remarkable revelation of his inner life and of the toils which have beset him since the Tilton scandal began. He ascribes all to the fact that Tilton thought he had undermined him with Bowen. He spoke of the first reconciliation with Tilton; that they shook hands, and Tilton invited him to his house, saying he wished to have the good old times renewed. He visited the family several times after that. At the conclusion of his statement he said that if any man living would do him a favor he would come before the committee and tell all he knows of the affair, and if he has any letters or correspondence of his touching the case, he will produce them.

The New York press is divided in opinion as to the effect of his statement. The Tribune says that the statement shows he has been the victim of a monstrous conspiracy. The World says he has explained his letters, sparing neither Tilton, Moulton or himself. The Herald says Beecher's friends will accept Beecher's statement as a vindication.

In his cross-examination by the committee Beecher explained how he was induced by Moulton to loan Tilton $7,000 to help him out of business difficulties. It was done to smooth Tilton's way and hush up trouble. He describes the manner in which he became acquainted with Woodhull; that she was very enthusiastic at first, and became angry and sent threatening letters when he declined to preside at the Free Love meeting in Steinway Hall. He says he abhors the doctrines of Free Love, and every disciple of them that he ever met. In the same examination he again denied most solemnly the truth of Tilton's statements as to improper acts or relations with Mrs. Tilton! Tilton says that Moulton's suppressed statement must now be published, and that it will annihilate Beecher.

Mrs. Beecher has written a feeling letter to Plymouth Church, thanking them for standing by her husband in this great trial. Its reading provoked bursts of applause in the congregation.

Stealing a Railroad.

Michael Reese has begun suit against M. S. Latham and others, the original owners of the Vallejo, or California Pacific railroad, alleging fraud, and involving some $7,000,000. Latham denies the allegations, and in his very long answer, shows how Stanford & Co., the real plaintiffs in this action, stole that road and now bring this action to swindle European and other bondholders out of their just dues secured on this road. Some interesting developments are promised.

Mining Accident.

A terrible accident occurred in the Belcher mine, Gold Hill, on the 17th. The large fly-wheel of the hoisting gear flew to pieces with tremedous force and effect. Two men, Alfred Donnell and R. D. Bray, were killed outright.

Railroads in Colorado.

Colorado has 640 miles of completed railroads within her borders, and six roads entering Denver. Immigration in consequence has been greater during the last three years than in any other of our Territories.

An Oil Tunnel.

The tunnel through which the Southern Pacific road will pass out and into San Fernando valley will be a mile in length, and through a mountain saturated with coal oil.

Murder in Los Angeles.

Frank Edwards committed a most brutal murder upon Levi Tidrow in Los Angeles on the 14th. The murderer was arrested.

Completed.

The Visalia and Goshen branch railroad was completed on the 14th and the former place, which owns it, slops over with happiness.

--An Oshkosh Judge got four bars of soap for a marriage fee.

--The new postal cards will be gorgeous enough to answer for love letters.

THE ISSUE IN NEVADA.

People who read the Nevada papers, especially of Gold Hill and Virginia are led to infer there is a political issue of tremendous importance for the people of that State to determine this Fall. Connected with this question in the high toned discussions indulged in by those papers, we occassionally notice such words and phrases as "De Long," "Bill Sharon," "Big Bore" "Sutro," "Sutrostunnel," "liar and horsethief" and many others of similar character, all supposed to have some bearing on the United States Senatorship. After some study we begin to understand the sitution. The several parties and factions are all actuated by precisely the same ulterior motive and object, which is the pockets of the Comstock stockholders, the nominal object being the United States Senate. It is simply an engineering problem whether these pockets can be most effectively tapped, worked and exhausted by means of vertical, horizontal or "slantindicular" holes or bores. By these names the several parties are known. The respective papers discuss the problem with commendable logic and gentleness; the most effective argument with each, so far, is that the other "is a liar and horsethief, and don't know enough to engineer himself home." The vertical party, Sharon, Chief Engineer, control a vast number of perpendicular holes in the ground, and know, from long practice, it is a good way to reach the bottom of shallow pockets. They call themselves the "Up and Down" party, because of the taking honest ring of the phrase; but its real signification is "up, for us leaders, down, for all the rest." The Horizontals, headed by Sutro, own but one big hole in the ground, run[illegible] level, to which level t[illegible] they hope to bring the enti[illegible] Comstock, and by means of the very great draft that will be created, to suck in Congress and especially the stockholders on the ledge. The other party foresee or forefeel the force of the sucking in power of the Sutro bore, and feeling bored at the prospect, deridingly call it the "Big Bore." The third party, headed by De Long, don't own any holes of their own worth mentioning, but are anxiously looking for one by which they can get some sort of a show at the main pocket. As they stand between the other two they are called the "Slantindiculars." The principal argument presented thus far by this party for a place in public sympathy is set forth in a weak pun on their leader's cognomen in these words: "It's D—Long between changes; let us engineer this thing a while." Besides these, there are other parties, factions and sell-out clubs of the ichneumon class, all satisfied to accept any solution of the engineering problem, whether by vertical or horizontal holes, provided they can get a reasonable return on their deposits. For this they will bore where ever it is the softest, and of course, will tap the chief engineers of the main parties first, leaving them to do the hard boring for the stockholders, the grand object of the whole and holes, and certain to be reached anyway. With this lucid explanation and a quadrant, our thousands of readers can easily understand the engineering difficulties which beset the people of our neighboring State, as regards their choice for Senator.

OUR BENTON LETTER.

BENTON, Aug. 19.

MESSRS. EDS:—As I design to make my "personalities" strictly reliable, you will do me a favor by correcting an error of mine in my last letter, in regard to the parties who were going to Yosemite. Messrs. Hutchison and Lyford didn't get off, as I was informed was their intention.

MILLS AND MINING.

Albert Mack has shut down his mill for the present, but intends to start up soon, either on a quality of ore that requires roasting, or on free ore if it can be obtained at his mine. Mr. Wetherill's mine in Hutch's Canyon is looking better than it ever has, and considering his facilities for milling (a four-stamp mill), he is doing a splendid business. I am told on good authority, that he runs out between $1,000 and $1,200 every 24 hours. Other mines in this vicinity are looking up, and prospectors are almost daily bringing in good specimens from new discoveries, principally in Hutch's Canyon and Yellow Jacket districts.

HAY HARVESTING

is about ended. Large loads of baled hay are arriving every day. I am told that Mr. Shaw of Adobe Meadows will wind up his haying in about a week, when he will have cut and in stack at least 200 tons. Mr. Sangunetti [and his amiable and popular partner whose name always causes us a loss of a few types.—EDS.] is about finishing up a job of the same kind of about 100 tons, part of which is already drawn to market.

PERSONALS.

Mr. S. C. Mott and family arrived this evening from Teel's Marsh road. Also Mr. Creaser, from Carson, whose big team will reach here on Friday with freight for this place and Bishop Creek. Mr. Sangunetti is sick in Carson, but is getting better and will be home soon.

SNOB.

LETTER FROM LONDON.

LONDON, July 7, 1874.

MESSRS EDITORS: The sight of your dear familiar paper, regularly received through the kindness of a friend, reminds me that during my wanderings in this part of the world I ought for "old acquaintance sake" occasionally drop you a line; a resolution that I now carry out regardless of any and all liberties taken by me with the established rules of English grammer and composition, but which, if disposed, you have my permission to correct without the fear of being reprimanded.

CONCERNING OUR INTIMATE FRIENDS.

You will excuse my not telling you how your very intimate friends Queen Victoria, the Prince of Wales, the Crown Prince of Prussia (now in London), and others of the same stamp, are getting along, their numerous inquiries after your health, etc. And you will also pardon me for not boring you with a description of the principal sights in this gay little village, in running after which strangers and visitors completely wear themselves out. I might tell you how charming "Patti" looked and sang the other night in the grand opera, or dot down my thoughts about her queenly, silver-throated rival Nihlson as she appeared on the stage of the Royal Drury Lane Theater. I shall do neither, but will, for your special edification simply inform you that I have just dined. Nothing extraordinary in that you will remark, for do we not dine every day? Admitted; but then there is in dining and dining. You can satisfy the inner man at the Miners' restaurant (San Francisco) in ten minutes at an expense of ten cents; or, if in funds and so disposed, you can saunter in at "Martin's" or the "Poodle Dog," and enjoy (if possessed of a very healthy appetite) your luxurious three-hour dinner, sip your wine or black coffee and puff your Havana. As in San Francisco, so in all parts of the world, only a little more so in larger cities like New York, Paris or London. But let me tell you. I received an invitation from a friend to dine out, and knowing him to be a connoisseur in such matters and thoroughly posted about the city, I accepted the kind offer, placed myself under his protection and sallied forth. Starting from near the Bank of England, we literally forced our way through the dense crowds that are continually thronging the busy thoroughfares of Cheapside; passed the noble cathedral, St. Pauls; the gloomy walls of that gloomiest of prisons, Newgate; crossed the famous Holborn Viaduct, one of the grandest improvements of this vast place, and soon arrived at the handsomest restaurant in England, known by the not very euphonious name of

THE "HOLBORN,"—WHAT IT WAS.

Only a few years ago the building was occupied as a "Casino;" a favorite resort for London's gayest of the gay, hundreds of whom assembled nightly to dance the mad gallopade or revel in the mazy waltz to the most exquisite music. The price of admission —one shilling—was not exacted from the fairer sex, provided they were young pretty and dressed up to the mark. Toward midnight, when the champagne flowed freely, the scene was brilliant and not calculated to improve the good behavior of the country cousins who for the first time in their lives were "doing" the sights of London. Affairs in the "Casino" were getting on "no better so very fast" even for this wicked place that the Lord Chamberlain, who has the morals of the English people under his fatherly care, suddenly opened his sleepy eyes, declared such things in sober England should be tolerated no longer, and, by stopping their license, closed the establishment. Fast young London gazed with bitter regret at the bank doors, and kindly but very earnestly invited the aforementioned Lord Chamberlain to march in double-quick time to every other place in existence but heaven. Two years afterward an enterprising American, at an expense of $100,000, fitted it up for a restaurant on a scale very grand, but so very expensive that in a short time he had to retire therefrom a sadder, poorer and perhaps a wiser man. Gordon & Co., who own some six of the most extensive and finest dining rooms in the city, then took it in hand, and at a further vast outlay remodeled, decorated, and so improved the "Holborn" that to day it is probably the most favorite resort for all hungry, well to do metropolitans.

PRETTY WAITER GIRLS.

Before entering the grand saloon we pass by the bar, very finely fitted up and presided over by several pretty girls, who attend quietly, quickly and in a rather dignified manner to the thronging, thirsty visitors, who gulp down their beer and cobblers in a manner as easy and graceful as the same feat is performed in any part of the United States. Ourselves not drinking [Oh!] we passed on into the dining room, where the scene presented is quite brilliant. A vast hall, from the ceiling of which are suspended numerous chandeliers of prismatic glass all ablaze with light, reflecting time and again in huge cheval mirrors; pretty fountains surrounded by miniature gardens; vases filled with fragrant flowers; exquisite statuary, paintings and decorations, blending most harmoniously with the glitter of silver (or plated) service, presents a scene perfectly dazzling to one who, like myself, has for the past seven years been living in the land of sagebrush. Skirting the walls of the salon are cosy spaces for parties or families, who receive very special attention; the central portion is occupied by promiscuous cosmopolitans, and the gallery up stairs, overlooking the hall, is used for smoking, coffee and chess rooms. At the further end of the gallery an orchestra of trained musicians discourse delicious music from 5 till 8 o'clock in the evening, the most fashionable time for dining. An excellent meal of the best fish, flesh and fowl is served for about one dollar, the system of attendance being also very good, and prices of extras, such as wines, etc., very moderate.

Dinner over, we cast a lingering glance at the palace dining room, listen to the last strains of a pretty waltz, slip a sixpence into the hand of the waiter, pass out into Oxford street and are soon lost amid the ever surging crowds of the busiest, noisiest, wealthiest city of the world—London.

SAGEBRUSHER.

[CONCLUDED FROM FOURTH PAGE]

a woman under such circumstances; but they said that they urged her strongly to flee with them, but she refused. We then started off in pursuit of the Indians, who numbered over a hundred, and we had fifty-six men all mounted. We overtook them near Owen's Lake, where, being surprised by us, they were mostly driven in the lake and over half of them shot or drowned. A few made their escape and the remainder we captured and took to Fort Independence and turned them over to the army officers. One Indian girl was found buried in a sand-bank, where she had secreted herself so nicely that only her nose and chin were visible. We recovered some two hundred and fifty dollars in gold from the Indians, also the clothing they had stolen from the murdered family.

A HUSBAND'S DESPERATION.

When the unfortunate husband returned and found his wife and children slaughtered, his grief made him desperate. His name was Wright but he has been wrong ever since, as many of the Indians have found to his sorry, for with a crazy zeal he fought everything in the semblance of an Indian, whether friendly or not, whenever he had an opportunity. I restored him the gold and the clothing they stole from him, when he smiled on me with grateful looks for my services, and with fearful oaths vowed to have his revenge. Finally he was arrested by the United States officers for killing friendly Indians, and confined at Fort Independence as insane; but death came to the poor man's relief in a few months, for his last days were spent in mad ravings and bitter cursings of the Indian race.

Not long after we had routed these Pah Utahs, a party of Mexicans were on their way to Saline Valley for salt, when they were attacked and all but one killed by the Pah Utahs. This man came into Lone Pine and reported the massacre, when I started with my company in pursuit of the Indians, the escaped Mexican going with us as a guide. On arriving at the place of attack we found nine dead Mexicans, and three dead Indians were found near by buried up with stones. On the third day of our pursuit we overtook the Indians and hemmed them in at the base of an almost perpendicular mountain, where they could not escape. We killed fifteen of them, when the remainder, numbering over two hundred men, women and children, surrendered. When the chief gave himself up, he said he was anxious for peace with the whites. He could speak Spanish tolerably well, and told me his name was "Big Foot." We took away the bows and arrows and a few guns they had with them, and marched them as prisoners to Fort Independence, the chief promising to call in all his warriors who were out under different leaders. In the meantime they had attacked a place called "Hog Rogers' Ranch," near the foot of the lake. When the news reached us, I left with my men, accompanied by this chief, he promising to call of his men and deliver them to the officers at the fort. On our arrival at the ranch, Rogers and his dog (who was a powerful and vicious animal) had killed three Indians and the others had left.

ROGERS KILLS BIG FOOT.

This man Rogers was a noted desperado, and as soon as he saw the Indian chief with me he raised his rifle and shot him dead. I then, to satisfy the tribe, took Rogers prisoner, and carried him back to the fort, leaving two men in charge of his ranch till he could have his trial. He was tried by the officers and bound over to keep the peace. There was another Indian at the fort calling himself second chief who was then promoted to head chief, and they gave him the name of

JOE BOWERS.

Bowers succeeded in uniting the scattering warriors in the neighborhood of the fort, and was furnished a passport from the officers for his safety among the whites. When they were all gathered they were placed on a reservation near Fort Independence, where they now are, I presume, and to the best of my knowledge have remained friendly ever since.

To Be Finished.

The Los Angeles Star says: There remains no doubt whatever as to the intention of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to complete the road from Los Nietos to Anaheim. As soon as practicable, the construction force now at work in Kern county will be transferred to Los Angeles, and the connection made at once. The railroad company see the necessity of checkmating the diversion of trade and freight which would be effected by the completion of the Bolsa Chica wharf.

Gratifying.

We are much pleased to know that there is soon to be a road to connect this section with Panamint. As will be seen by reference to proceedings of the Supervisors, Messrs. Briggs, Passmore and Walker have been awarded the right to build a toll road on the line of the late survey, and they intend to have the road finished by the 1st of January. As the tolls are quite reasonable, this is a good deal better plan than for the county to undertake to construct a free highway, which it could not do without incurring a large and illegal debt. But the benefit to accrue to the county in various ways—mileage of officers, jurors, witnesses and other direct benefits—would have amply justified the expenditure, provided it could have been made legally. This road will render available a good market, which we could not otherwise have, for all our surplus farm produce and lumber, and in that way it will be of great advantage to those interests. It is quite certain that by another year the taxable property in Panamint will be well up to a million of dollars. In addition to the Jacob's company, whose mill will soon be in full blast, and other important enterprises only yet in contemplation, it is quite certain the Jones company will erect a large mill as soon as men and money can do it, and expect to expend at least half a million of dollars in simply preparing for permanent work. From this a partial idea may be formed of the probable value of that district and road to this county. It is to be hoped the boys may make a fortune out of their venture.

Capt. Hobb's Story.

We devote a good deal of space (rather too much in fact) to an extract from Captain Hobb's "Wild Life in the Far West," a poorly told narrative of the author's own adventures, a good portion referring to this section, and consequently of much local interest. In this extract, as well as some others still more interesting, some of which we shall hereafter reproduce, the Captain relates actual occurrences, but gets the circumstances connected therewith so terribly mixed up as to entitle him to the distinction of being a first class romancer, to put it as politely as possible. However, we won't undertake to point out his little discrepancies in the chapter given. It is proper to remark we have adhered strictly to his own phraseology and spelling of names.

Local Option.

It will be seen that Bishop is to hold a local option election on the 18th proimo. There is but little question but what "Local Option" will win in that township, which includes Round Valley, provided no new conditions arise, particularly a possible decision by the Supreme Court declaring the law unconstitutional. That Court was to have decided the question last Monday, in which case the result ought to reach us next mail. Pending that we shall not indulge in any speculations or arguments on the question at issue. But we will state that the temperance folk wish it understood that they propose to pay all the expense of holding this election should the Supreme Court decide adversely to them, otherwise the county to foot the bills as the law requires in other elections.

Bonds Filed.

W. C. Smith, Mining Recorder and Notary Public at Panamint, has been paying our burg a visit this week. At the May term the Supervisors appointed Mr. Smith Justice of the Peace for Panamint, but this is his first opportunity to come forward to qualify. In that capacity His Honor is preparing with blanks, books and documents to legally snatch the obstreperous chaps out there bald headed if they lay themselves liable, as they are very certain to do in as flourishing a camp as that is to be henceforth. Mr. Smith will make a popular and very efficient officer.

How It Is.

We are fully aware of the fact that it is a delicate and unpleasant subject to talk about, and one that we wouldn't think of broaching if we had been Jas. Lick's heir, but the truth is we stand very much in need of every dollar that is due us for subscriptions, advertising and other printing, and respectfully ask all those knowing themselves indebted to us to come forward with the cash or its equivalent as soon as they can.

J. L. Ward & Co.

One of the most enterprising and reliable commission houses of Los Angeles is that of J. L. Ward & Co., whose new advertisement appears in this issue. This firm has always manifested a great interest in Inyo enterprises, and is entitled to a liberal patronage in return.

Lumber and Goods.

A day or two since Omie Mairs loaded a large team at Rothschild & Co.'s with liquors, lumber and other articles for Connelly & Lake at Panamint. The route he will have to travel is down by way of Indian Wells, which makes it a pretty long one.

Deputy Sheriff Appointed.

Sheriff Moore has appointed F. P. Ball, late of Lone Pine, his deputy for Panamint. Mr. Ball goes out next week to go into business out there, with a view of permanent location. For the present his family remains in Lone Pine.

Another Appointment.

County Clerk Hammarstrand has appointed Geo. H. Hardy his deputy.

Piute District.

We have the following account of a number of the ledges in this promising district, which bids fair to do big things ere long for the upper end of the county: The "Golden Era" is a 20-foot ledge of free gold, cropping out for a length of 1,500 feet. The "Golden Chariot" is 8 feet wide, free gold, the ore ranging from $50 to $300 per ton; has a water power sufficient for 20 stamps. This, we presume, is the power Mr. Johnson will use for his five stamp mill, which is to be built right away. The "Sage Hen" is a four foot ledge of free gold. The silver ledges are: The "Belle Stanley," 20 feet wide, assaying from $55 to $200 per ton. The "Stonewall Jackson" is another 4-foot ledge, very rich, assaying from $600 to $800 per ton. The "Juniata" is a little larger, average assays giving $69 in silver and $18 in gold. The "Susquehanna" is another 20-foot ledge, running from $25 to $200. "Wm. Penn," 3 feet wide, assaying from $300 to $500. The "Babe," quite a large ledge, assays still better, running from $250 to $1,000, as also does the "Columbia." The new arastra is running constantly, and is doing well on free gold ores. The number of prospectors in the camp is increasing somewhat, and will doubtless do so still more rapidly when the chances offered by this easily accessible district are better understood. We will again state that the district lies in the Inyo or White Mountain range, 10 miles northeasterly of Bishop Creek. About opposite on the eastern slope of the mountains, is the White Mountain District, where Mr. Moffatt and a large number of others are operating. The developments in the Moffatt mine are said to be very encouraging.

A Chinaman Fatally Shoots a Thieving Hoodlum.

A short time since a sporting hoodlum named Roberts, alias Belcher, and his chum, name not given, arrived in Cerro Gordo from Hot Springs. On the 19th Roberts felt the need of a little ready money. About 11 o'clock at night he walked into an establishment occupied as a wash house by Chinamen whom he drove out, and then quietly proceeded to go through trunks, boxes, etc., in search of something to relieve his necessities. He found a small box containing about $150 with which he started to walk off when one of the Johns gave him a mortal dose through the sixth vertebra, shooting from the rear. The alarm was given; Dr. Grant, being called, pronounced the wound inevitably fatal, a fact which gives general satisfaction, as the wounded man had spent the day looking for "any s— — — — who thought that he was as good as he, that he might shoot his eye out," besides the self-evident fact of this daring robbery. He did not ask for an examination, and refused to give any statement of his acts immediately preceding the reception of the shot. He is of California birth, 23 or 25 years of age, and belongs in San Francisco. On complaint of the Constable two of the Chinamen were arrested for the shooting. John Alexander volunteered to defend them as having the courage to defend themselves and property, and succeeded in getting them off, for which he is entitled to commendation. At this writing the wounded hoodlum is yet alive.

A Good Arrangement.

From and after this date the Telegraph Stage Line, and we believe the Northern Line, propose to run their stages every other day, without reference to the day of the week, making three and a half trips per week instead of but three as heretofore. The Telegraph Stage will leave here at 4 A. M. and arrive at Bakersfield at 6 P. M. next day, there connecting with the cars, so that passengers will make San Francisco in just 52 hours and the return trip the same. Another point to be noticed is that the trip across the Sierras is made in the daytime both ways. A daily line is to run between Bakersfield and Havilah, and purpose doing the same thing to this place soon. As soon as arrangements for the connections can be perfected with the Northern Line the new order will be duly advertised for both lines.

Cerro Gordo.

A friend writes us from Cerro Gordo that times up there are about as usual, both furnaces running steadily. He is much in hopes the Potosi tunnel enterprise will be carried out as soon as possible, and is confident that it will prove a property of immense value, about which there can scarcely be a doubt.

Stage Line to Panamint.

We are told that it is a settled fact that the Telegraph Stage Company will put on at once a semi-weekly line of stages from Indian Wells to Panamint. Such a line is a much needed institution and will doubtless prove a paying one.

Caught Up.

The teams are now square up with the furnaces in the matter of getting away the bullion they produce, though they still maintain their average rate of 400 bars (200 each) per day.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening at the usual hour.

Want it Stopped.

The Cheyennes, Comanches and Kiowas are becoming alarmed at the formidable preparations for their punishment, and, like all Indians when they find themselves overpowered, they want the thing to stop.

—"All's well that ends well," as the comet said when he left and took his tail with him.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Board met in special session, Monday, August 17; all the members present.

A. K. Briggs, Thos. Passmore and A. Walker filed application, with map of route, for right to construct a toll road from a point 10 miles southeast of Owens Lake, via Darwin Canyon to Postoffice Springs (Panamint), on the line of survey reported and filed by the appointed viewers.

It satisfactorily appearing to the Board that the county could not construct a county road to Panamint district without creating a large and illegal debt, and as conditions agreed upon with the applicants were mutually satisfactory, it was Ordered, that application be granted, conditional on final acceptance of road after inspection by Commissioners appointed under the law for the purpose. The Commissioners appointed were Deputy Surveyor Seeley, W. J. Lake and F. P. Ball.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.:

Saturday,..... August 22, 1874.

reported that the Indians toward Death Valley were dying rapidly of cholera. The same party of twenty-four men soon returned to Death Valley taking the old Indian with us, and we found quite a camp of dead Indians laying around not far from where the poisoned provisions were left. We then told the old Indian to show us the missing men or their bodies or suffer instant death, and he led us along the hillsides to a place where we found good water, and we encamped that night near the spring. Here the Indian made an attempt to escape, but was shot and killed by a man on guard.

MORE DEAD INDIANS.

The next day we continued on in the same direction the Indian was leading us, and soon came to another Indian camp where there were nine more dead Indians. From here we went to the "bitter water creek" at the foot of the hills, where Mr. Honn and I had discovered good gold indications, which turned out so well that we remained there several weeks, when finding our supply of water failing and our provisions giving out we returned to Belmont.

An excitement was now raging here relative to minerals in the

and all who had anything to say spoke well of the wonderful quartz of the mountains, with its occasional veins of almost pure metal. Mr. Honn and myself packed our jacks with provisions and started for the place, full of hope and excitement. On our arrival we found several prospecting parties already at work, and before long we discovered a few scattering veins of silver ore not over two or three inches wide and very thin. They were rich enough, but were imbedded in hard rock which could not be worked without stamp mills, crushing apparatus, etc. I then went to Independence with a small party to get some of my specimens assayed, leaving Mr. Honn to take care of things and continue prospecting. At Independence they pronounced some of my speimens as yielding five thousand dollars to the ton of rock, which simple announcement made a great stir in that vicinity. There was an English stock company here operating in mining with machinery, and they offered me two hundred dollars to show them where I obtained my specimens, to which I consented, as I had no means to work a mine in the way it would be necessary to work this.

THE ENGLISH COMPANY TAKE STOCK.

With two of the English company and several employees I started for the White Mountains, and after eight days reached the mines and showed them the small veins of silver, which pleased the English gentlemen, for they concluded that though small and unimportant, these veins led some where to the mother vein, which would prove of great value. They sent to Independence for machinery and tools, and employed me as foreman over twelve Cornish miners to superintend the work at one hundred dollars per month and provisions found, while my friend Honn took a contract for getting timber from the mountain for house building. I advised the company not to expend much capital in buildings nor in working the mine, but they thought they knew best. They worked the mine three months, and laid out in all two hundred thousand dollars before they gave up that it was a non-paying concern. They admitted as they abandoned it, that my advice should have been followed.

Mr. Honn and myself returned to a place called Lone Pine, on Owens river, eighteen miles from Cerro Gordo. Lone Pine is not far from a remakable body of water which always remains at the same hight. Owens river and various smaller streams empty in this lake, and there is a peculiar oil-worm that inhabits its waters, and drifting ashore in large numbers they are used as food by the filthy Indians in the vicinity. Scientific men have analyzed the water and pronounced it strongly charged with borax, and it is considered beneficial in cutaneous diseases to bathe in it freely. After bathing in it, however, it is necessary to wash in pure water, or the skin will peel off as if burnt. In washing clothes it requires no soap, but clothes washed in it must be rinsed in pure water or they will be destroyed. On this lake a small steamer, and afterwards a flat-boat, were launched for taking supplies across to the miners; but in six months the steamer was rendered unserviceable by the action of the water.

INDIANS HOSTILE.

After we had been in Lone Pine awhile, the Pah Utah Indians grew very hostile, and we formed a company of the miners for protection. About this time we received information that a family had been murdered by the Indians at a place called Hayway Meadows. We started immediately for the scene of the massacre, and found the woman and two children of the family killed. The husband was not at home at the time of the massacre, and three hired men who were working there ran away. The woman defended herself until the Indians set fire to the house. We found her body lying in front of the house with three arrows sticking in her breast, and the children's skulls were crushed. We buried the remains of the woman and children, and soon discovered the three men servants returning from their concealment on the hills, who told us in what direction the Indians had gone. One of the men was slightly wounded in the back of the neck by an arrow. I told them they ought to be ashamed to run and leave

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

DR. RADWAY'S
Perfect Purgative Pills,

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's
CALIFORNIA VINEGAR
BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. LEAVES FROM MY DIARY WHILE CROSSING THE ATLANTIC.

BY "SAGEBRUSHER."

Written for The Independent.

May 30. 1 o'clock P. M. The deck of the noble steamship "Spain," of the National line, the second largest that crosses the Atlantic, lying at Pier 4, New York, is literally covered with people of both sexes, of all ages, of every hue of beauty or homeliness, dressed in a bewildering glitter of colors and material, with all the passions so plainly delineated on their countenances that you could tell at a glance who were gay and who were sad. Those who appeared to be bidding a mournful farewell to country, relatives, friends; those who were eager to depart for foreign lands, and those who didn't care a cent whether they went or not, taking it cooly as though crossing the Atlantic was a mere matter of ferrying it over to Brooklyn. An hour later and the throng of passengers and visitors have so increased that at one time there could not have been less than fifteen hundred people on deck, all chatting, laughing, crying, shouting, shaking hands, kissing, wishing one another "good-bye," giving gratuitous advice how to act in case of sea-sickness—when, amid general confusion, the steamer's whistle shrieks its first warning for visitors to depart. Another shake of the hand, still another kiss, a few more warnings and then a general rush for the gangway. For fully ten minutes hundreds were crowding themselves over the frail wooden bridge, and ran for eligible sites around on the pier where they can have the last glance of the ship and its occupants as it glides out oceanward. Precisely at 3 o'clock P. M. the word was given and the monster engine began to move. At the pier the scene was one of joyful excitement. Shouts to friends, the waving of handkerchiefs and cheers given by a thousand throats, resounded in our ears till we had gotten under weigh and New York began to recede gradually from our view. Almost simultaneously with us had started for Europe five other steamers, with every stateroom taken, which will give some idea of the amount of travel between America and the Old World at the present day.

At the start the day was most delightful, but when nearing Sandy Hook some three or four hours later, a dense fog set in, and we had the mortification of having to lay over for twenty-four hours, during the whole of which time fog whistles shrieked and fog bells rang incessantly from ships innumerable in our own immediate vicinity, warning us to keep at a respectful distance.

May 31. Five o'clock P. M. The fog lifted itself most gracefully and took its flight to the regions above, where all good fogs naturally belong. Again—amid the peculiar and not unmusical song of the sailors—the anchor is raised and to the satisfaction of all hands we are once more cutting through the bounding Atlantic. Everybody having taken possession of their staterooms, things in general assume a settled appearance. Later in the evening the musical talent aboard (of which more anon) began to show itself. The saloon is pretty well filled, and listeners to well-executed music on piano and violin are quite enthusiastic in their applause. At half past ten our embryo concert is abruptly terminated by the inexorable officer who, strictly obeying the ship's rules, in the most nonchalant manner turns out the lights.

June 1. Fog, rain and heavy rolling sea exhibit a miserable failure on the part of the weather clerk in putting up our first day of Summer. The bugbear of sea travel has began to show itself in a decidedly apparent manner. The spray dashing over the bulwarks has kissed the delicate rouge laid so artistically on fair cheeks, or perhaps the bloom of health has fled for the time being from the pretty faces of their possessors. The table of the grand saloon, with seats for one hundred and thirty, appear like the feast of Banquo's ghost. Stewards and stewardesses are in great demand, as also are receptacles for the lately swallowed meal, which rebelliously refuses to perform its intended mission. Your old resident Davison (formerly of J. S. R. & Co.) is at my present writing reclining on a couch in our joint state room with a most pitiable look of disgust depicted on his countenance. I try to console him, but to my fraternal tones he will not listen. I proffer him martel, lemonade, castor oil, refreshments medicinal, refreshments invigorating, but my thoughful kindness is only rewarded by a wish, most decidedly expressed, to go to the——bottom of the sea.

June 2. A bright, beautiful morning, with a cold north wind tempered by a June sun. Nearly everybody is up on the clean deck, and pencil in hand your correspondent, regardless of consequences, takes stock. First, with a handsome florid face of the true British type, a manly figure, slightly inclined to corpulency, a most genial smile playing in his roguish eye and on his flexible lip, is Capt. Grace, commander of our home for the time being, the steamship Spain. When I assert that this ship has carried as many as sixteen hundred souls aboard, one can imagine the responsibility resting with its commander. In fine weather, chatting agreeably with the passengers, or presiding at the head of the table dispensing social courtesies as gracefully as a polished young lady; but when Boreas shrilly pipes in sea-song, and lashes the waves into foaming mountainous billows; when the fog hangs over the sea and ship like a funeral pall, then is Capt. Grace a different being. Day and night without rest on the "bridge," peering ahead with anxiety, although perfectly cool, seemingly defying thunder, lightning, wave or wind to hurt one plank of his darling ship. Chief Officer Pierce is quiet, courteous and efficient. D. and I occupy his state room, which next to the Captain's is the finest on the boat. Head Steward Jones, Chief Engineer, Purser, Dr. Ring and the lesser lights of this big ship are all very agreeable gentleman, and altogether devoid of that overbearing self importance so often and justly attributed to the attaches of large and wealthy companies.

June 3. Weather still pleasant enough to bring to the deck's surface, in strong force, the notables, of whom I beg "pardonne" for my poor attempt in penciling. Every ship has a bell (e), even when deserted by the fair ones, but with a steamer crowded with both sexes the chances for comparison and criticism are multiplied. To Miss G. of New York, we—all—of the sterner sex doff our hats, and swear by the mast-head that she is very charming, very beautiful and highly talented. Petite in stature, apparently light as a fawn, with features bearing the most favored impress of nature, large, lustrous eyes, ruby lips, sufficiently enticing for a god to kiss and a pleasant smile ever playing over her really pretty face, is my very inadequate picture of Miss G., who is en route to Italy to finish her musical education. Reclining on one of those luxuriously easy ocean chairs, which, when unfolded, yield easily to the steamer's motion, is Mrs. M., a star actress of some considerable note. Although inclined to embonpoint, and way out of her teens, she is still handsome, very agreeable but rather reticent.

June 4. A slight head wind; weather still fine, and we are going at the rate of 11½ knots an hour. Games of shuffle-board, ship quoits and chess on open deck, whist, cribbage and other games of cards in the smoking room. The sufferers from Old Neptune are all gradually forsaking their close state rooms and assembling on deck to inhale the fresh salt air, leisurely and languidly perusing the leaves of different "Guides to Europe," the latest novels, etc.; while your humble "observant" amuses himself, e'cu if he don't your readers, in still taking items of prominent persons. Near the stern of the vessel, seated by themselves, are three rather pretty American blondes, by name the Misses W., by profession actresses of the lighter or variety style. The elite of the cabin hold themselves aloof from the sisters, an act, to my simple mind, displaying taste of a rather haughty style totally adverse to my cosmopolitan way of thinking that one and all should make themselves as agreeable as possible during the few brief days occupied in crossing the Atlantic. But tastes differ, and the writer is probably short-sighted. I notice, however, charming married ladies, with pretty babies and pretty nurse maids, all chatting and enjoying themselves in the open air, while most of their husbands grow hilarious in the stifling atmosphere of the smoking-room. The query naturally presents itself to my mind: Why do the male population on board a vessel prefer the unwholesome air of a room reeking with the fumes of tobacco and drink to the delightful society of their own dear wives? The murmuring waves seem to yield the answer of, "Quien sabe."

June 5 and 6. The Atlantic is on its best behavior. With the merest apology for a swell it bears our noble craft over its surface in a manner so steady that the ship's motion is barely felt. We are already beginning to speculate and make inquiries when we may reasonably expect to arrive at Liverpool and start from thence to our various destinations on Continental Europe.

A buzz of excitement has suddenly sprang up. Mr. F. Dorrington, a scenic artist of Wallack's Theater, New York, has been canvassing the musical and dramatic talent of our ship, and enlisted sufficient volunteers to give a concert in aid of the Sailors and Orphan Asylum of Liverpool. I herewith append the programme:

Doors open at 8 o'clock. To commence soon as they are ready. Children with arms not admitted—if they are loaded. Parents not allowed in the gallery. N. B.—Carriages may be ordered at 10:30 P. M. with their horses' heads turned towards Liverpool.

The above is an exact copy of the musical bill of fare posted up in the ladies' cabin. Everybody is on the qui vive for the evening's fun, anticipating which the hours drag their weary length along. At eight bells we sally into the large saloon, one end of which is tastefully draped with American and English flags, the flags forming a dressing or retiring room for the artists who have so kindly volunteered for the general amusement of the passengers as well as for the laudable purpose of doing something for the widow and orphan of poor Jack.

I am no musical critic, but feel assured that many grand concerts attended by me in bygone years have proved miserable failures when compared with the elegant entertainment gotten up on board the Spain. The Raynor Brothers, professional artists formerly of Christy's Minstrels, and who have performed in all parts of the civilized globe, understand their business thoroughly, went into the affair heartily and done superbly. The violin solo, "Sweet Spirit Hear My Prayer," by H. Raynor, was a masterly rendering of that exquisite piece of music, while the "Duet on Bells" by the brothers, as well as a fantasia on English airs on the concertina by C. Raynor, were deservedly applauded and encored. The ballad singing of Mr. Claire was very good, he (Mr. Claire) possessing a fine tenor voice. The Weston Sisters, who sang duets and glees, were also vociferously applauded. But Mr. Dorrington's comic songs of "Complaints" and the "Cork Leg" kept the audience in a perfect furore of laughter. During the concert quite a sensation of rather a ludicrous character was created by the appearance of a lady possessing a decidedly Ethiopian skin, dark as jet, but with an exuberance of the blondest of blond hair, who, tray in hand, handed sandwiches and dessert to her numerous admirers. A dark moustache, hardly perceptible through the darkness of the skin, plainly proclaimed who the blonde darkey was, and the head pantry man certainly added one more laugh to the numerous risible explosions of the evening. The concert concluded, as concerts on good British ships should conclude, with the singing of the national anthem, "God Save the Queen." The collection during the evening amounted to about $40.

June 7. Sunday. Weather fine and sea calm as possible for the Atlantic to be. Razors and ribbons are in demand. Razors to tone down the grizzly beard of men who have not shaved for a month. Ribbons to add to the charming appearance of the fair sex who are going to attend church. Our church cannot boast of its Gothic style of architecture, with steeple, crypt, stained glass, glorious chimes, imposing beadle, etc. Nay, simply of the saloon, a liberal supply of prayer books, men and women impressed with God's power as they watch the blue water dashing past the windows, and our preacher, the Rev. Mr. Kay, who reads the Church of England service and delivers a short but impressive sermon in a manner that surely ought to reclaim all us wicked sinners.

June 8. Monotony on deck inspired me to visit the regions below. In company with Chief Engineer Reed a party of ladies, their escorts and myself inspected the machinery department. With a kindly warning to the ladies to care for their silk dresses, white skirts and elegant kid shoes, we descended the iron ladder to Room 1.

Steam and oil, oil and steam, here pervade the atmosphere so thoroughly that you cannot help but inhale it, feel it, taste it. But the giant arms of steel work beautiful and most regularly. The Chief Engineer, our guide, hands us lighted oil lamps, and we follow him still further down the steep iron ladders into Room 2. The heat here after coming from the fresh air on deck is at first almost stifling, yet the thermometer shows only 104°. The machinery here has not the same appearance of elegant finish as in Room 1, but power reigns supreme. The ladies of our exploring party, with more regard for their toilets than love for the wonders of steam, beg to be further excused, and are gallantly escorted to the upper deck. Yet another flight of iron steps and we are at the bottom of the vessel where the screw, like some irrepressible iron monster, suffering fatigue neither by day or night, impels us onward to the wished for land. We follow our guide through low iron tunnels and stand in front of glaring, roaring furnaces, where the fear of freezing may be entirely dispensed with, for twenty-four fierce fires, consuming between sixty and seventy tons of coal every twenty-four hours, generates the steam that sets in motion the ponderous and complicated machinery; and 'tis well passengers in general know so little of the volcanoes beneath them, otherwise methinks they would not sleep in their beds so assuredly safe.

June 9 and 10. Weather cloudy; sea calm. The ocean has been so kind to us since leaving New York that the eager wishes of some very innocent travelers to witness a good storm has not been fulfilled. May their wishes in that direction be never realized when fate or fortune make my traveling on the sea imperative, and it is just barely possible that ere they get back to their native home their particular desire for "grand storms" will be toned down to my way of thinking.

A few mirth loving individuals have arranged another "Entertainment" for the evening. Everybody is invited to take a hand. It being of the free and easy style everything—songs, speeches, poems, recitations, conundrums, music are all in order. No programme this time. Jolly Mr. Dorrington, with his usual theatrical skill, acts as manager. C. Raynor presides at the piano, and his talented brother wields the bow—to our ears at least—as well as Ole Bull or Vieuxtemps. We listened and laughed at comic songs, ditto recitations, a poem in which all the ship's notables, from the Captain down, were portrayed in the broadest humor, imitations of stump speeches, by a very clever mimic, wherein the American Eagle and the British Lion were made to mingle together so intimately that you couldn't tell which was which. The gem of the evening was a "Lullabye" sang and played by Miss Gaylard, whose clever manner, splendid voice and good elocution called forth such applause that the saloon fairly resounded with the noisy enthusiasm.

The usual anthem by the company, and we just have time to disperse ere the inexorable rule for putting out the lights at 10:30 is carried into execution.

June 11. The bright, green hills of Ireland, rising from the sea like glittering gems are in sight, and bustle and bustle and excitement is the order of the day while nearing Queenstown. Our family party of the last eleven days is preparing to break up. Trunks, some of them very healthy looking ones, have been brought up from the ship's hold. Stylish suits taken therefrom have been donned by their owners, who appear slick, smiling and happy. The little puffing tug-boat approaches, U. S. mails, passengers and baggage for the Emerald Isle are soon transferred, and with screaming farewells from the steam whistles, cheering from the occupants of either boat and waving of handkerchiefs we separate and again proceed toward Liverpool, where we arrive next morning.

We bid good-bye to the dear old ship and the friends made for the time being, and as we step on English soil congratulate ourselves for the delightful voyage that will ever remain in our memory bright and green as one of the pleasantest periods of our existence.

An Indian Scare.

Last Sunday during the Indian fandango at this place, says The Winnemucca Register of August 7, about twenty of the braves, dressed in breechcloths and war paint, visited the depot when the Western bound train came in and went through the gyrations of a war-dance for the amusement of the crowd. It happened that a company of soldiers were aboard, on their way to fight Indians in Arizona. When the Captain saw these braves he came rushing out, and with breathless anxiety inquired of the crowd "if those red devils were on the war-path; if they were he would turn his men loose on them." Taking into consideration that the platform at the depot was crowded with women and children who paid no attention to them, except to laugh at their antics, the absurdity of the fighting Captain's eager inquiries are made painfully apparent. When he arrives in Arizona he will probably learn that Indians, when on the war-path, do not make a circus of themselves to gaping crowds at a railway station.

—At a recent prayer-meeting of colored people at Erie, the decency and good order of the meeting being disturbed by a negro named Brown, whose prayers in public were only incoherent ravings, the pastor inquired, "What fool nigger's dat praying down dar nea, de do'?" A dozen people replied with one voice, "It am Brudder Brown, sah." "Den," said the pastor, "Brudder Brown subside, and let some one pray dat's better 'quainted wid de Lord."

The Scandal.

Moulton's squelcher has been published. It appeared in The Graphic which paper sold over 100,000 copies as fast as they came from a lightning press, and then the demand was not satisfied. The squelcher is not much of a squelcher after all, though it leaves a smudge Henry Ward will have to carry a long time, notwithstanding the committee report him not guilty on any of the counts. Tilton has entered libel for $100,000 worth of damages, but how such a creature as he can be damaged more than he damages himself is past finding out. Beecher will reciprocate by a counter libel for perhaps an equal amount, but Treasurer Spinner, if he was to give his whole attention to it, couldn't issue greenbacks enough to offset the damage Beecher and the world has sustained in this miserable business. We can't yet believe that he is such a deliberate liar as even but a partial vindication would make him out. But we are to have some more of it, so we pass for the present.

A Geological Freak.

In the bottom of the main shaft of the Virginia City Company, El Dorado Canyon, Lyon Co., Nev., has been encountered the trunk of a tree four feet in diameter, a lone relic of an ancient and extinct forest. Where cut through by the shaft this old tree is found to be perfectly carbonized—turned into coal. Outside the old log is completely crusted over with iron pyrites, many of which are so bright that the crystals shine like diamonds. These pyrites also extend into the body of the log, filling what were apparently once cracks or wind shakes, and even forming clusters about what was once the heart of the tree. This relic of an old time forest lies far below the two veins of coal the company are about to open. The finding of this old trunk is evidence that the country was at some time, ages and ages ago, covered by a forest of large trees; though the native timber growth, when the country was first visited by the whites, and as far back as the traditions of the Indians extend, was nothing but a scrubby species of nut pine.

A Call for a National Sportsmen's Association.

The "New York State Association for the Protection of Fish and Game" have issued a call for a National Convention of sportsmen, to meet at Niagara Falls on the 9th of September, to devise some plan to procure "intelligent and efficient legislation for the protection of game, birds and fish." The object in view is certainly most commendable, and the sporting men of this State ought by all means to encourage the undertaking and send representatives to this convention.

The Duello.

The duello seems to have lost none of its peculiar attractions for the people of the sunny South. A few days since two "gentlemen" met in Louisiana, and at the third fire both fell mortally wounded, and it is presumed both are now gratified at the result. At last accounts Moseby and Payne, of Virginia, were both endeavoring to evade the peace officers for the purpose of putting a quietus one upon the other.

Austin Swept By a Cloud Burst.

On the evening of the 18th Austin, Nevada, was visited by a cloud-burst which destroyed full $100,000 worth of property in the town, but fortunately the people were warned in time, so there was no loss of life. The Reveille says the wall of water, mud and rubbish first seen rushing down Main street was ten feet high.

The Spanish Republic.

It is officially made known that England, France, Austria and Russia have recognized the Spanish Republic. This will make it harder for Don Carlos, but he is a Spaniard and of a people that will not voluntarily accept Republican or foreign rule.

Tuolumne Valuation.

From a report given in The Sonora Independent it appears that the property valuation of Tuolumne is now less than that of this county. Its total value of all property is $1,464,890; that of this county is $1,589,730.

Base Ball.

The English cricketers seem to be taking kindly to that particular Yankee notion known as base ball. Over a dozen base ball clubs, on the Yankee plan, have lately been organized within five miles of the Strand.

—It is more difficult to frame an excuse than an oil painting, though they are both works of the imagination.

THE LOCAL OPTION TEST.

The Sacramento Record (which, by the way, is an able temperance journal), publishes a full report of the Local Option test case before the Supreme Court, and from the report of the very lengthy arguments of the respective counsel, it is difficult to see how the judgment of the Court can be other than favorable to the constitutionality of the law, the point at issue. The decision was to have been rendered last Saturday, but up to this Friday no report of it has reached us, although we have exchanges of Tuesday last.

The case has excited a very great interest; the court-room was literally jammed with eager listeners. In San Francisco, on Sunday, bets were even as to the judgment of the Court. In Oakland the whisky men say they will not close their saloons, no matter what the decision. If unfavorable to them they will keep cases before the courts on various available pretexts, and thus manage to keep their mills running. They say they can foot the bills of continuous litigation and still make money in the business. No doubt they can and will do both, but, by such contumacy we have not a doubt they are only speeding the day when the curse of whisky will be swept from the land. Its tenure now is, not the better judgment of even those who deal it out, but a question of mere expediency for the time being, and a factions contest in support of that expediency, and in the sole interest of the few at the direful expense of the many, will surely produce a general waking up of the vast army of the now indifferent, and enlist their decisive energies on the side of law and morality.

It is quite out of the question for us to give even a brief synopsis of counsels' arguments, but a pretty fair idea of the whisky side may be gathered from this bit of twaddle offered in illustration by Mr. Patterson:

Another illustration at the expense of my learned friend, Mr. Reay: Mr. Reay dies, leaves four gallons and three quarts of Johannisberg, worth $50 per gallon. He owes debts. The statute says you must sell all his personal property, in order to pay them; but this statute says because there is but four and three quarters gallons you cannot sell or give it away.

Again, execution is issued to the Sheriff. He finds some old Pioche brandy in the possession of the defendant, worth $50 per gallon. His execution is only for $200. The brandy is worth all the execution calls for and the defendant has nothing else in the world. The Sheriff levies upon it, and the plaintiff on execution says, "Sell it." "No, sir, I won't sell it." "Why?" "Because the statute forbids me selling any less than five gallons at a time." He could not sell it. He could not give it away.

As an argument equally as valuable, we would suggest that that Sheriff could and probably would have got over the difficulty by adding a quart of water. Judge Sanderson on the other side, said that it was in no sense a law to settle or prevent the settlement of the estates of decedents, nor for the settlement of debts or gifts between living persons, but a law directed against a particular business, to prevent it from interfering with morals and decency. He showed that there was an exact analogy between this and the old law which prohibits the sale of liquor without a license. That both were strictly constitutional as were municipal laws put in force by a vote of the people of any town to close certain houses or places of amusement at certain hours, or the school, fence, county-seat and other local option laws existing by act of the Legislature, but to be put in force or not in certain cases, only by a vote of the people locally interested. Such powers must be delegated to the people by the Legislature, and, like those referred to, depending on subsequent contingencies like a local election, if they became laws in fact.

Another Road to Panamint.

From The San Bernardino Argus (an X we are glad to see) we learn that Barney Carter had contracted to deliver 200 tons of freight in Panamint for the Jones company, and in view of this, had found a new route for a road shorter and much better watered than the one now in use. The road goes to San Bernardino and will require about $1,500 to build it. Henry Jones and R. C. Jacobs each agree to give $500 of the amount and the rest will soon be forthcoming in San Bernardino as, according to The Argus, the road will benefit that valley full $500,000 a year.

The "Story of Our County."—Some Corrections.

BISHOP CREEK, Aug. 25.

MESSRS. EDS.—In your article from Capt. Jas. Hobb's "Wild Life in the Far West" there are references to myself in connection with a trip to Death Valley that are somewhat erronious, therefore I shall offer a few corrections in relation to that portion of his story, and also some others.

First, Mr. Hobbs states that (after arriving at Cerro Gordo), "I [Hobbs] soon commenced to work for Belshaw and Elder in the erection of a smelting furnace." Mr. Hobbs arrived in Cerro Gordo about the 19th of January, 1869, on which day I was introduced to him by my then mining partner, F. K. Miller, who had come up with him from Lone Pine. Now, over four months previous to this to my certain knowledge I helped to construct and set in operation Belshaw & Elder's reduction works, the furnace referred to; that was early in September.

Next, "I became acquainted with a man by the name of Honn, * who proposed to me to go with him to prospect Death Valley. * We then bought two jacks and loaded them with provisions, etc., and started for Death Valley in company with a man named Hunter." This was the veritable C. F. R. Hahn, Wheeler's lost guide. The two jacks were owned by Hahn, he having purchased them early in 1868, a year previously. John Ryan, who then traded at Fish Springs, named them "Brigham" and "Heber," after the two Mormon celebrities, Young and Kimball. "Arriving at Death Valley we found the skeletons of the party of emigrants who had perished there in 1852, all but one of whom had died. This man during those wanderings had discovered the 'Gun Sight lode,' etc., and meeting him, we tried to induce him to go with us." Now, on this trip when I was along, Hobbs was not nearer than 15 or 20 miles of Death Valley, nor did we meet or see any person whomsoever. But Hahn and I went on into that portion of the valley that heads between Palmetto and Gold Mountain; passed along western edge a few miles, and over a ridge toward camp, wading through snow hip deep. Descending from this elevation we went down a bluff nearly perpendicular where we had to hang on with fingers and toes in the crevices of the rock to secure ourselves from falling. Hahn was given to the selection of such routes as this when easier ones were available, and I strongly suspect some such procedure ended the career of that energetic prospecter, C. F. R. Hahn, whose bones whiten some lonely nook in the mountain fastnesses.

"My friends left me at a small pool of water which we fortunately found, and started on a prospecting trip. On the fifth day discovered a man on the plain; found it was Honn; took him to camp, gave him food and water, and then followed his tracks three or four miles back to where I found Hunter lying asleep with his head on his gold pan. When aroused he looked wildly around, and attempted to escape. But I caught him, when he became rational, and said he had given himself up for lost." We did not find a particle of water after leaving Willow Springs in Saline valley. Hobbs had to melt snow both for ourselves and the jacks to drink. It was not Hobbs but Hahn who met me with food and water, and only about a mile and a half from camp. I was proceeding deliberately along, as I usually travel, and toward camp. True, I was weak and faint, having traveled nearly the whole of the preceding 30 hours with nothing whatever to eat or drink. I had no gold pan.

Hobbs says that it was 100 miles to Cerro Gordo, and that we had to start at once to reach it as our provisions were about gone. It was not over 40 50 miles, and we had "grub" sufficient to permit two days' further prospecting going there. Arriving at the base of the mountain east of Cerro Gordo, there was nothing said about my remaining there, nor did do so, and of course, was not "overjoyed" at Hobbs' return with "flour and whisky." But Hobbs remained in that camp, while Hahn went to W. L. Hunter's cabin in Belmont, three miles east of Cerro Gordo, while I went on to the latter place, neither of us finding any ice or snow to obstruct our way, the cause assigned by Hobbs for leaving the jacks at that camp. D. E. HUNTER.

The Wallula Narrow-Gauge.

A correspondent of The S. F. Christian Advocate gives the following encouraging description of how a wooden-strap-iron railroad works:

There is something which is called a narrow-gauge railroad, which runs from Wallula, on the Columbia river, sixteen miles, terminating in a desert. It is a novelty. The rails are of strap-iron, and for considerable distances the iron is beside the track rather than upon it. The ends of the rails are turned up into "snake-heads" at many places; it is used principally for the transportation of freight. I was told that they run try-weekly trains, which was said to mean that they go out one week and try to get back the next week. A lady who rode over the road told me of a little dog running ahead of a train, and suggested that the little dog might be kept to clear the track of cattle in advance of the train. But a better day will come. Railroad facilities are a necessity, and a not remote certainty, and will, when they come, bring this section of the country into prominence and importance.

A weekly line of stages by this company now connect at Indian Wells for the Panamint Mining District, leaving the Wells Thursday next, then the Wednesday following, then Tuesday. The increase in travel to our mining districts has necessitated this increased accommodation on the part of the stage company. And as soon the cars cross the river stages will leave in time to pass over the mountains by daylight, an improvement on the present time. Travelers will make a memorandum of this information.—[Bakersfield Californian, Aug. 20.

Tax Redemptions.

The Code amendments made at the last session of the Legislature leave it doubtful as to whether property sold for delinquent taxes at the last sale is redeemable within six or within twelve months. If within six, the time is nearly up. Considerable inquiry has been made on the subject recently from interior counties, where mining and other property has been sold for delinquent taxes. A stitch in time saves nine, and it is better to be on the safe side and redeem within six than take any chances on twelve months.—[S. F. Chronicle.

Look Our for Squalls!

As some of our readers are aware, Father T. J. Taylor of Bishop, with his household gods recently emigrated from these regions for fear he and everybody would soon be washed away by floods or, escaping that damp fate, be swallowed up by a very superior earthquake. He had dreamed these things, as he stated in one of his later sermons, and deemed it his solemn duty to impart and impress this warning that all not given wholly to their idols might follow Lot's example of old, and flee this Gomorrah of Inyo before things got uncomfortable.

And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters, and said, Up, get you out of this place; for the Lord will destroy this city: but he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.—Gen. XIX, 15.

As Father Taylor was in dead earnest and did act on his belief, we are constrained to think that in his religious fervency his mind has been thrown out of its true balance, and certainly, we intend nothing disrespectful to in this. Soon after he started the floods came sure enough—some ahead, all around and behind him, and in these he doubtless thought he saw the beginning of the end, and made his team scratch gravel accordingly. But not so with every member of his family, as we infer from the fact that, reaching Belmont, his step-daughter dared the fate of Mrs. Lot, and of getting herself in a pickle, by a very backward look in this—she got married then and there. But no petrifying or typical salty results ensued therefrom up to August 24, under which date Father Taylor writes us from Palisade, on the Humboldt, in words as follows: "Mr. Editor INYO INDEPENDENT:—Sir; When you have a flood that will make the people get off the river, then look out for one of the most sanguine earthquakes that ever visited the country since it has been inhabited by a civilized people. The highways will be so obstructed that you will have to resort to pack animals for your supplies. Sir, you will have regular volcanic cones [where] you now are. When the flood comes you may be sure and doubly sure of the latter. Truly, if you don't want to publish this please lay it on file. Yours truly, T. J. T. Graberd." On account of a press of rejected patent medicine advertisements and poetry we hadn't any room on the "file," and so publish the warning for the benefit of everybody.

Will Get Over It.

It appears that Roberts alias Belcher, the hoodlum who was supposed to have been fatally wounded last week at Cerro Gordo while robbing a China house, is likely to recover and serve a short term at San Quentin. On the first examination it was thought that the ball had gone directly through the intestines, but a subsequent examination proved that it had turned from its direct course and that the wound, though a bad one, was not necessarily fatal. He is now at the County Hospital, Lone Pine. There is a bit of a mystery connected with the shooting that is not yet cleaned up and perhaps never may be; but there is one point on which there is no difference of opinion, so far as we have heard, which is he deserved all he got, no matter from whom received. The fact of the robbery and the general bad character of the hoodlum stands as first reported, and is susceptible of proof independent of the evidence of Chinamen; but it now transpires his real name is John Clover.

For Yosemite.

Our friend D. P. Macarter, of Cerro Gordo, passed through here Wednesday en route for Yosemite and the "other side." He is accompanied only by a young Indian, who is dying with curiosity to see the big waters, fire canoes, fine horses and saddles and the many other wonderful things he has heard exist on the other side. Dan and his untutored Lo will be gone about a month.

Strike in the Omega.

We learn that an immense body of rich smelting ore has recently been struck at the lowest level of the Omega Tunnel, Cerro Gordo. Pending some arrangement of the company's affairs, however, orders have been received from New York to suspend work in the mine for the time being. Superintendent Van Arsdale is now in that city.

Buried Up.

Through the effects of one of the numerous cloud bursts of a few weeks ago, the Duval spring, formerly the principal source of the Cerro Gordo water supply, is buried deep under the debris, and with it a pumping engine. Mr. Beaudry had purchased this property but a short time previous. At the time the spring was buried up Duval's house was washed away, and he and his family barely escaped with their lives.

From the Mountains.

Judge Hanson, L. McClure, John Baxter and J. T Graves returned last evening from an extended tour in the Sierras, over about Mineral King and that vicinity. They made some mineral discoveries, but whether of value or not remains to be seen. McClure got a dose of poison oak that nearly "ruinated" him, but is now getting all right.

Fruit.

The fruit crop in this valley is much more abundant than ever before. Many new trees are in bearing for the first time, particularly apples and pears Peaches sell at 12½ cents per pound at the orchard, and are plenty.

The Wilton Troupe.

Our citizens, everybody, turned out en masse last night to welcome back this really superior troupe. They had played during the week at Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo, and in both places, particularly Lone Pine, the house was literally packed every night. Of their troupe here last Winter we observe but one familiar face, which is Davy Jones (not he of the lower regions), and the improvement manifest in his acting is truly remarkable. His rendering of "Remy," in the "Foundling of Paris, or the Reformed Drunkard," is excellent. This is a play that ought to be witnessed by every one. It is as good a realistic temperance lecture as Gough himself ever enunciated. In their respective characters in this as "Bertrand" and "Madelein" Mr. and Mrs. Wilton can take rank as star actors. They have few superiors in any cast. Dan Taylor, late of the Alhambra, is as good an Ethiopian "as wears burnt cork." The music is by Rice & Young's band, good musicians and very gentlemanly players on the stage. An entirely new sensational comedy, "The Wife of the Period or the Victim of Circumstances," with other comicalities, is to be put on to-night, and everybody ought to go. The troupe will take a trip to the northward, we believe, but return here again the latter part of next week, and perhaps play in Lone Pine again during the Mexican and Chilean celebrations next month.

Personals.

Fred. Sacket, with Code, Elfelt & Co., extensive fruit packers, etc., of San Francisco, has been paying our section a visit with a view of an extension of their business....Justice W. C. Smith started on his return to Panamint on Monday; he thinks that is going to be the biggest mining camp "as never vas."....After shedding the effulgent light of his countenance over us for a week but too short, Josiah Earl departed last Sunday for the beatific regions of the cow counties. During his stay he made a formal transfer of the Register's office property to Register McCallum.... Special officer "Dad" Moore returned last week from his trip to the Stockton Asylum with A. C. Matlack....Of Cerro Gordoites we note visits by M. W. Belshaw and W. L. Hunter; from up the country divers and suudry persons, among others, Harry Wright of the Taboose, T. J. Goodale, and Squire Campbell....Of absentees we learn that Bennett, Reddy and Beaudry are highly taken with the many wonderful sights and enjoyments of San Francisco, and can hardly think of tearing themselves away just yet. Major Egbert is in command at Fort Yuma. Our junior and his family are still in Virginia City, but expect to return to this place and regular business in a month or so.

A Splendid Strike.

The most important item of local news we have to offer this week is the confirmation of the big strike in the Virginia Consolidated on Kearsarge Mountain. The 218 foot tunnel now cuts through a ledge of good ore throughout of 27 feet in thickness, the perfectly defined walls being that distance apart. This is at a depth of 200 feet. The ledge is pronounced a perfect Comstock. The value of this strike can hardly be over estimated. The ledge is all quartz, and scarcely any of it that will not go at least $50 per ton. The boys working at the mine celebrated the confirmation of their discovery by those gleaming bonfires we saw from here so high up on the face of the mountain Thursday night.

Pine Mountain District.

John Chastine is just in from this district, and says the prospecters are are all driving away with very encouraging results. C. Albert and his partner are taking out quantities of unusually rich smelting ore. They have begun on a tunnel that will open the mine to such a depth as will prove it is or is not a mine in fact, and have no fears of the result. The tunnel on the Moffatt ledge is being driven as rapidly along as three regular shifts can do it. In a few weeks a number of these mines will be sufficiently developed to determine their worth as regards the erection of reduction works.

An Event.

In the temperance line we are promised an event of considerable importance. This is a course of lectures by Jabez Walker, Grand Lecturer of the State of California, and P. G. W. C. T. Grand Lodge of Scotland, said to be a man of great learning and a most entertaining and effective speaker. He is expected here in about three weeks, but previous to his arrival due notice of time and place of his lectures will be given.

Improve Your Stock.

Henry Muller offers (see his advertisement) to sell his fine thoroughbred bull "Switzer Boy," and this is an opportunity stockmen who take the right view of things will endeavor to avail themselves.

Preaching.

Church services at the school house to-morrow evening; Sunday School at 1:30 P. M.

Beans.

Plant a sunflower in each hill of beans and you will get suitable bean-poles; the stock grows in advamce of the vine and makes an excellent support. You not only obtain a good bean-pole gratis, but you have a large amont of valuable seed for your fowls in the Fall.

Left.

Glendenning, the Rev. scoundrel of Jersey City who seduced Miss Pomeroy, was notified by the citizens to leave or take the consequences. He left in a hurry. Miss Pomeroy had died a few days previously.

Panamint.

The location of these mines, according to the official map and survey establishing the northern boundary of San Bernardino, are in San Bernardino county, THE INYO INDEPENDENT to the contrary, notwithstanding. If THE INDEPENDENT man runs his boundary line just as he wishes it to strike the boundary line of Nevada, viz: at Kingston Mt., then we will admit these mines are in Inyo—but this is not the boundary line according to the official survey and map we have examined, but runs in a northeasterly direction from Walker's Pass to the boundary line of Nevada and California, which throws the Panamint mines in this county. —[San Bernardido Guardian.

That "official map" was doubtless a very valuable one a couple of years ago, but now its chief value is to mislead editors who dont't read the Code. Suppose, Mr. Guardian, you devote a little of your valuable space to the publication of Section 3942 of the Politcal Code, just to show your readers that it was not THE INYO INDEPENDENT that robbed your county of its most promising mines by making the Sixth Standard South (due east from the corner of Tulare through to Nevada) the boundary line between San Bernardino and Inyo. This done, then get a copy of Surveyor Krause's map of Panamint, compiled from actual U. S. surveys of adjacent towships, and you will find that camp in township 20 south, range 45 east, which is 24 miles north of the said boundary. By reference to that map we find that we were misinformed as to the district being in 18 south, as it is in 20. Otherwise, in the settlement of this vexed question, it is "phifty-phour phorty or phight."

The Wedding.

[COMMUNICATED.]

MESSRS. EDITORS: It is commonly said that matches are made in heaven, which I presume is meant approvingly. Yet, considering the many illy matched parties, I incline to the belief that if a record is kept there at all, they are as fond of scandal and gossiping as we are.

I have, however, to record a wedding which took place last evening at the house of N. Rhine, which I believe may be vouchsafed as one of those that will be approvingly recorded in both worlds. The worthy couple are Henry Fehrman, a well-to-do farmer of our valley, and Christine Muller, formerly with Mrs. Rhine.

The ceremony was performed by his Honor Judge Hannah in his usual good style. At the conclusion of this ceremony a party of friends, invited by the groom, set down to a sumptuous supper prepared by the hostess, Mrs. Rhine, and everybody including the Judge, enjoyed themselves. Under the leadership of Mr. Jacob Vagt, some very nice songs of the Fatherland were indulged in, and the party broke up at 2 o'clock A. M. in the most pleasant spirit. The new mraried couple deserve and enjoy the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

In conclusion I would say that Mrs. Rhine's house seems to act as a sort of talisman to single girls as it has been observed that but very few in the employ ot that lady ever left her except to step into matrimony, a fair warning to those who shun it.

Gen. Custer.

Gen. Custer tells in an amusing way why he did not graduate with his class at West Point. "Ludlow" (now Col. Ludlow), he says, "was a greeny, but had pluck; and one evening, when I was officer of the day, some upper classman pitched on to him, and he showed fight. The boys encouraged them until they got into a good square out and outer, just as I was going my rounds. Instead of sending both of them, as I should. to the guard-house, you know, I pushed back some fellows that were trying to trip Ludlow, and said that there must be fair play. It was a good one, and Ludlow was getting the best of it, when the boys began to interfere again. I was just getting my hand in again, when old ——, instructor in artillery, came around, and, instead of arresting Ludlow and the other fellow, he locked me up for allowing the fight to go on, and I was in the guard-house when my class graduated. But they wanted soldiers at Washington just then, and they sent me on. I never went back there again."

A Cure for Rattleshake Bites.

In view of the numerous cases of rattlesnake bites being almost daily reported by the interior press, the following receipt from The Trinity Journal may prove of some benefit: A physician in Texas was recently bitten by a rattlesnake, and, in order to test the efficacy of iodine as a remedy, he waited until the swelling in his leg and the pain compelled him to lie down—about twenty minutes after being bitten—when he took half a teaspoonful of saturated tincture of iodine, repeating the dose, in diminished quantities, at intervals of fifteen minutes for an hour. He also applied the tincture to the wounds and the whole surface of the swollen leg; and in five hours the pain had so far subsided that he fell asleep and slept for several hours. On waking he was entirely free from pain, though the leg was fearfully swollen and tender to the touch. He used no other remedies and in a few days was entirely well.

How Pleasant.

What can be pleasanter than the life of a Missouri farmer? At daylight he gets up and examines the holes around his corn hills for cut worms; then he smashes coddling moth larvæ with a hoe handle until breakfast. The forenoon is devoted to watering the potatoe bugs with a solution of Paris green, and after dinner all hands turn out to pour boiling water on the chintz bugs in the corn and wheat fields. In the evening a favorite occupation is smudging trees to discourage the curculio, and after a brief season of family devotion at the shrine of the night-flying coleoptera, all the folks retire and sleep soundly till Aurora reddens the east, and the grasshoppers tinkle against the panes and summon them to the labors of another day.

—Now we begin to see why Don Carlos' exchequer is always so low. It takes all the money he can raise by indemnities and captures to pay his wife's traveling expenses.

FLOUR.

BISHOP CREEK FLOURING MILLS,

Bishop Creek,

Inyo County, - - - Cal.

HAVING BEEN THOROUGHLY OVERHAULED and refitted with new machinery complete, the above popular institution is now as perfectly prepared to do the best of work as any mill in the State, and from GOOD WHEAT will turn out the ever produced in Inyo county.

Very Best Flour

☞We run all our feed through a windmill and over a sand screen, cleaning our feed thoroughly and making it werth from 50 to 75 cents more per one hundred pounds than feed not cleaned.

BELL'S MILL.

AS THE HARVEST IS NOW APPROACHING, I earnestly ask the farmers to look well to the cleaning of their wheat, especially to keeping it

Clear of Sand and Gravel,

as it is impossible to clean it out by any machinery that has ever been invented, and I cannot make good flour out of wheat that has sand and gravel in it.

Having clothed my bolt reel with a

Fine New American Cloth, and made improvements otherwise, I hope to do better for my patrons this year than I have done since I built the new mill.

The firm of Bell & Bro. having been dissolved by mutual consent, the business will hereafter be conducted in my own name.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES; SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints,

Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. WORMS—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, MASS., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

MURDER OF "HOG" ROGERS.

Another Chapter of Those Lies.

[From Capt. James Hobbs' "Wild Life in the Far West."]

A short time after the treaty with the Pah Utahs, a man calling himself Delaney, and claiming to be a Methodist preacher, came to live with Hog Rogers, and entered into partnership with him for the purpose of fencing a farm at the foot of Owens Lake. After being with him some three months Rogers was missing. Teamsters going up and down the road made Rogers' house their stopping place for refreshments, and in answer to their many inquiries concerning his absence, Delaney told them he had gone to the mountains prospecting. After a time the teamsters found the ranch deserted, and suspecting foul play, they told the circumstances to the miners at Lone Pine. A party of six, including myself, immediately set out for the ranch to investigate the matter, and on our arrival at the ranch found it deserted, as there was no living being there, except Rogers' faithful dog, his hogs and his poultry. The dog, who was a large and ferocious animal stood guard over the house, and would not let any of the party enter, and we could not make up our minds to shoot or injure the faithful creature. After trying in vain to coax him so as to let us pass, I secured him with a lasso, and tied him to a post. This faithful guarding of the house convinced us that if Rogers had been foully dealt with it was by no stranger, as the dog was his constant companion.

We searched the house and stables, but discovered no clue to the mystery; but on returning to the house I saw under the edge of the bed a blood stain. We then took up two or three floor planks and found the dead body of Rogers, who had been shot with a pistol ball through the head. The body we took up and buried decently, and returned to Lone Pine and reported the facts to the authorities.

I was then appointed Deputy Sheriff and as there was no doubt of Delaney's guilt, was sent in pursuit of him, with two good friends who volunteered to assist me. About one hundred miles from the town of Lone Pine, we heard of a man answering to his description who had passed through a small mining town called Tail Hold. We followed on to a place called Visalia, hearing nothing further of him, and had nearly given up finding him; but on going about two miles we came to a grove where a camp-meeting was being held, and stopped to make some inquiries for the man. Here we found him preaching to the people from the stand. I could not be mistaken in the man, for I had often seen him at Lone Pine and at Rogers' ranch. I made my way to the stand, and placing my hand on his shoulder informed him that he was my prisoner. Recognizing me as coming from the vicinity where his crime was committed, he attempted to draw a pistol from his pocket. I had my hand on my revolver when I touched him on the shoulder, and I at once struck him on the head with it, knocking him down.

Great excitement now existed all over the camp-ground, the brethern asking me for what reason I was treating a brother in that manner. I then ran my hand in his breast pocket and secured his small revolver, which I held up to the astonished gaze of the people, and asked them if it looked very ministerial to be preaching with such a weapon in his pocket, and informed them that I had a warrant for his arrest as a thief and murderer.

They asked Mr. Delaney if he knew me, when he answered that he had seen me at Lone Pine in Inyo county. I placed him in charge of my two friends while I went to my saddle bags to get a pair of strong handcuffs, which I placed on him. We then started for Visalia with the prisoner, as the brethern by this time saw they had been deceived by him, and would not interfere to save this wolf in sheep's clothing. At Visalia he was handed over to the authorities and placed in jail.

The next morning I took the prisoner in charge and our party started for Lone Pine. When we had reached the outskirts of the town, he informed me that he had some money and some clothing and some clothes at the house of the Methodist preacher, and begged permission to return for them. We went back and got the clothes and five thousand dollars in gold. This man was very indignant at having been so deceived, and told Delaney he had been the cause of breaking up the camp-meeting, and had done vast injury to the cause of religion, and inquired what he had been guilty of. Delaney excused himself by saying that a false charge had been gotten up against him, but he should vindicate himself and return there to make matters straight. I told the preacher that he could bid Delaney good bye, for in all human probability he would not come back there.

We then resumed our journey to Lone Pine and got as far as Portersville that night, where I was obliged to put the prisoner under a strong guard, as there was no jail in the place. The next morning the guards informed me that Delaney made desperate attempts during the night to remove his handcuffs and escape. On learning this I went to a blacksmith's and procured a pair of shackles and placed them on his ankles. For greater security and speed I put the prisoner and the money on board the regular stage for Lone Pine, and took my seat opposite him, while one of my assistants sat beside him, and our animals were led by the other assistant behind the stage. The morning we left Portersville I discovered that the prisoner had a knife which had escaped my notice in the search I made of his person; this I immediately took possession of.

Before arriving at Hog Rogers' ranch Delaney offered me the five thousand dollars, and as much more which he claimed that he had buried on Rogers' premises, if I would allow him to escape. He told me that the other five thousand dollars were buried at the corner of the spring house. I informed him I would see about his offer when we had dug up the other money.

At Rogers' place we found my friend Mr. Honn, and two other men, whom the authorities had placed in charge. I told Delaney to show me the place where the money was buried, and he did so. My friend Honn finding a spade dug it up. With the money were one gold and two silver watches. One of the silver watches had been stolen from a Mr. Nadieu, who had stopped at Rogers' house over night. The money being mostly in silver coin, it was too heavy to be carried by him when he left. Mr. Honn now informed us that Rogers' dog had lain on the grave of his master since he was buried only leaving it occasionally to get food. Mr. Delaney secretly asked me if I was not going to allow him to escape in consideration of so much money, etc.. I answered his impudent proposition by saying I was a sworn officer and bound to do my duty. We arrived at Lone Pine, which was some twenty miles from the ranch, at eight o'clock that evening.

When I was handing the prisoner over to the authorities there was great excitement throughout the place, people collecting from every direction shouting "Hang him! Hang him!" They succeeded in getting a rope around his neck, dragging him a short distance; but I defended him and appealed to the crowd to preserve order, at the same time cutting the rope by which he was being hauled on the ground. A squad of soldiers who were at Lone Pine here interposed to assist me in my duty and took charge of the prisoner. Delaney then confessed that he deserved death, but that he wished to make a confession before he died.

The excitement continued through the night, some of the miners being very boisterous and demanding his execution without delay, telling Delaney that his time had come. I handed over to the authorities the money, watches, pistol and knife taken from the prisoner, excepting the gold watch, which I told them I would keep till I found an owner; and also told them that the silver watch found with the money belonged to Mr. Nadieu, as his name was on the inside of the case, and Delaney had confessed to me that he had stolen the watch from him. My fees and those of my assistants were paid out of this money.

The following day Delaney had his trial, and confessed that he had killed Mr. Rogers for the purpose of securing his money, which he had ascertained was concealed under the hearthstone in his house. He said also that Delaney was not his name, but that his real name was Smith; that he was born in Indiana, and had been married four times. He requested three or four days' time in which to write a history of his crimes, which was granted him by general consent; for the public mind had become quite interested in these developments, and felt disposed to let the villain unburden himself and free his mind by confession. The chief points of his confession were as follows:

When he was twenty-one years of age his father was hung in Posey county, Indiana, for shooting one his neighbors. To avoid the obloquy that would attach to him as the son of a murderer, he left home soon after his father's execution, and made his way to Springfield, Illinois, where he married a respectable girl by the name of Knox, with whom he lived about six months, and getting possession of her property, about ten thousand dollars, left her and went to Little Rock, Arkansas, where he lost all the money except five hundred dollars in gambling. Here he again married a respectable girl, and after living with her about six months, he obtained some three thousand dollars from her in cash, when he left her and went to New Orleans, and there married a French Creole girl. From New Orleans he went to Fort Leavenworth, taking his wife with him. Here he said his wife left him, as she had fallen in love with a United States officer. He remained in that vicinity some time with the determination of killing her but she was so closely guarded he was not able to accomplish his purpose. From Fort Leavenworth he went to Salt Lake, where he said he married a Mormon girl, and after robbing her of what money she had, he went to California. During the time from his leaving home he had changed his name four times, and thought himself unfit to live longer. He confessed that the gold watch I had in my possession belonged to Edward Hatch, a man that he had killed in Virginia City, Nevada, under the following circumstances: They were at work together about four miles from Virginia City mining, where he killed Mr. Hatch, and buried him in a shaft which they were excavating. He had taken his gold watch and about four thousand dollars in money which Mr Hatch had in his possession. He wished me to write to Mrs. Hatch (for the murdered man left a wife and two children) and inform her of the fate of her husband, which must have been a cause of much anxiety to her, and also of the fate awaiting his murderer. This I promised to do. After this murder he made his way to Lone Pine, where he became interested with Hog Rogers in fencing a farm; and his career from that time is known to the reader.

When he was taken out to be hung he requested the privilege of speaking to the persons assembled. He said his career had been a sad one from his youth up. He had commenced with deception and stealing, and now was about to suffer for murder. He admitted that his sentence was just and that he deserved death for his many crimes. He ended his address by urging all present to be warned by his fate. He then bade them all good-bye, and in another moment, the rope being adjusted about his neck, strong hands turned the rough windlass that was in use there for hanging up beeves when slaughtered, and was now used in place of a gallows, and after a little struggling all was over with this hardened criminal. After a while the body was taken down and buried.

Some four days after this I met my friend Mr. Honn, from Rogers' ranch, and he told me that Rogers' poor dog Jack had died from grief, and that he had buried him by the side of his master. Rogers' real name was John, but he had received the name of Hog Rogers for stealing hogs some years before, and he took pride in being familiarly called by the name the teamsters had given him.

The authorities at Lone Pine advertised extensively in the United States and Mexico for heirs to Rogers' property, but no one appearing to claim it, the money found by the confession of his murderer, and the proceeds of his real estate, which was sold at auction, were used for building school houses in that vicinity.

—The late advices from England are to the effect that the harvest of Europe for this year will be excellent.

THE BLACK HILLS.

A special to the Bay papers from Bear Buttes, Dakota, gives the text of Gen. Custer's report of the Black Hills survey. He describes the topography of the region at some length. When near Bear Buttes the expedition was stopped by a range of high, impassable hills. The expedition attempted to effect a passage, but in every instance was led into deep broken canyons, impassable even for horsemen. It followed Elk Creek stream and discovered a gap in the rocky barrier on the northern boundary, through which the expedition passed. It then camped for the last time in the Black Hills region in a delightful pasture, with the grass and foliage as green as May. The interior was like a beautiful park of thousands of acres of pasturage. Behind them were the plains, before them was a dry, arid waste. They then marched to Bear Buttes. The health of the expedition is excellent. They expect to reach Fort Lionel on the 31st of August. The expedition explored the major portion of the interior of the Black Hills. No portion of the United States can offer richer pasturage, purer water, more beautiful temperature or a more advantageous region for the farmer or stock-raiser. Building stone, fuel and lumber are inexhaustible. Rains are frequent. Grain would yield abundantly, especially wheat. Gold, iron and plumbago have been found; also inexhaustible beds of gypsum. In some water courses every panfull of earth brings out gold in paying quantities. Deer, elk and bear are plentiful. The expedition had no trouble with the Indians.

Still Lives.

It was stated about a month since that Sutton & Co., The Aldine publishing company, had been forced to suspend. Such is not the case. Their splendid journal comes regularly, as bright and beautiful as ever. "Superb" is the only word which fitly characterizes the numerous illustrations of the September issue. The Aldine company has determined to establish an Art Union, similar to the well known Art Union in England, and distribute its works of art, both sculpture and paintings, which are constantly collecting, among its subscribers. Art premiums, valued at $2,500 dollars, will be distributed among each series of 5,000 subscribers. Subscription tickets, at $6 each, entitle the holder to The Aldine for one year, to the new chromo and to a ticket in the distribution of art premiums.

Cause of the Defeat.

In addition to the causes already assigned for the defeat of the new Ohio Constitution the local journals charge that the Roman Catholic interest was arrayed against the proposed Constitution on account of its free school clause, To be sure, it is claimed that no essential change was contemplated, except that women were to be made eligible to any office under the school laws; nevertheless a vigorous address against what was called "a godless system of education" was put forth by the "Catholic Central Association," of Cleveland, and was read in many, if not all of the Roman Catholic churches of the State. This was one of the severest obstacles with which the new Constitution had to contend. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that they were defeated.

Telegraph Finished.

Silver City, Idaho, now rejoices in a telegraph, the line from Winnemucca, 200 miles distant, having been completed a few days since. A railroad is soon to follow. The Avalanche is to come out as a daily at once, and altogether the Idaho goose (nothing personal to old Hill) hangs away up. We have seen it when it didn't.

Kept Busy.

Thirty-six trains are at present run daily over the Virginia and Truckee Railroad, between this city and Carson. and when the mines commence to lay in their Winter supplies the number will be increased to forty.—[Virginia Chronicle.

Inyo Freights.

The Los Angeles Star of August 28 says there are large quantities of goods at the depot in that city awaiting shipment for Cerro Gordo and Panamint.

No Such a Thing.

The report of Gen. Custer's huge fight with the Indians is flatly contradicted. We suspend judgment till all the evidence is in.

—The fool seeketh to pick a fly from a mule's hind leg. The wise man letteth out the job to the lowest bidder.

THE SANITORIUM.

It seems as though Los Angeles had about made up its mind that the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad project was too much of an undertaking, or that her own prosperity was now sufficiently great without further effort to increase it. That village goes to bed dreaming that on the morrow she will wake up a great city, requiring no further effort than to dream. She argues that she has four railroads already, and hearing their whistles, fancies she is a center of a vast railroad system, and all without a single effort on her part. If anything more is lacking it will come in due time, as did that which she now has—without worriment to herself. A breakwater, water-works on a dead level and three or four railroads, the longest extending a mile or two beyond the suburbs, all built by private or foreign capital, is a good deal for one town only twenty-five years old to boast of, and what's the use of worrying about the future. If outsiders done that much for her in the past twenty-five years, wont they do as much more for her in the next twenty-five; and wont her glory and profits be in the same proportion? Why should her rich men shorten their siestas planning furnaces factories and railroads of their own only to have the smoke ruin the reputation of their celebrated sanitorium? Didn't they go there because they were sick, and now are they going to risk a relapse through over-exertion all by a display of energy such as is necessary to build a city? Not much. Better to let Stanford, an Alden fruit-dryer, the orange groves, a distant tan-yard or two and time build the city, if they can but for themselves they must have their regular siesta and take care of their weakened constitutions, and at the same time keep an eye on the cash now in the safe; they would really be pleased to live in the second city on the Pacific, but their nervous systems are indeed too much weakened to permit the exertion.

"What's wealth and glory to health," say they. "Suppose we do lose rich tribute from a whole inland empire because we won't spend a million or two and risk our health to secure it, won't somebody else do it for us after awhile and won't we then be in a condition to enjoy it? Isn't this a great sanitorium? Look what we have done already, and our city is only a quarter of a century old—a breakwater, a fruit-dryer, a tan-yard and all these things, and with our glorious climate what's to prevent us from still greater progress? Don't worry. Let's rest."

And they do rest and dream and smell at the posies, and take things quite comfortably, and note the arrival of another health-seeker, and are very thankful for the many blessings vouchsafed them, and wonder how long it will be before the rusty miners from Arizona, Southern Nevada and all the "back-country" will find a shorter road to the Bay City, and after awhile they will die and be buried, or cremated, without having to go miles into the country to find room, and one village bell will answer for all—but not one of those rusty miners will ever hear it, save he happens to visit the sanitorium to recuperate his shattered health.

Lost Near Death Valley.

The Borax Miner of August 22 relates the following:

A short time since a party composed of James Fitzgerald and Thomas Brannan of Lida, a young man named Ashim aud another named Chaffee, who are from the neighborhood of Eureka, accompanied by two other men, whose names we could not learn, started out from Lida Valley with the intention of going by way of Death Valley to the Panamint mines. It is supposed that the distance by the route this party were to travel is about 100 miles, and the danger of the trip consists in the uncertainty of finding water at safe distances. In going through a long canyon in search of water, it appears that one portion of the travelers rode considerably in advance of their comrades, and upon arriving at a fork in the canyon the advance party took one fork of the canyon and the rear party took the other—there being no trail. After some hours they became conscious of being separated, and each party commenced a search for the other, until from fatigue they were compelled to retrace their way to Lida, where they all finally arrived on last Tuesday, some of them having suffered severely. It is said that had it not been for a search made by some friendly Indians the young man Ashim would have perished.

Incorporation.

There were filed Saturday in the Secretary of State's office articles of incorporation of the Northern Belle Mill and Mining Company; object, to carry on a general milling and mining business in Columbus District, Esmeralda county, Nevada; term of existence fifty years; capital stock $5,000,000, in 50,000 shares of $100 each; principal place of business, San Francisco. Directors: J. C. Bateman, A. J. Holmes, B. G. Hazelton, H. H. Allen and John H. Boalt.—[Sacramento Record, August 24.

Historical Facts.

LONE PINE, Sept. 8, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: A word concerning that "Story of our Country," from Capt. James Hobbs' "Wild Life in the Far West."

During my life I have read a number of fabulous narratives, romances founded on the semblance of facts; but after reading that little yarn of Capt. Hobbs' published in THE INDEPENDENT of Aug. 22, I am compelled to say that of the many stupendous frauds submitted to an enlightened public, this story of Hobbs' eclipses anything that ever has been written. Had Capt. Hobbs given his story a reasonable semblance of truth it would have been more palatable. His history of the discovery of the Cerro Gordo mines, and his trip of vicissitudes to Death Valley (which should have been his last) and all other discoveries which he claims, may possibly be true to some extent. But I must say that any person who is familiar with the history of this country will give no credence whatever to any of Capt. Hobbs' stories. I will endeavor to correct that portion of the Captain's story which refers to the massacre at Haiwai Meadows. My version of the sad affair can be verified by a number of persons who were participants in the pursuit and fight with the Indians, some of whom are now residents of this county. The following are as nearly as I can now remember:

Early on the morning of January 1, A. D. 1865, one Walter James and a German, whose name I do not recollect started from the lower or south end o Big Owens Lake for the purpose o reaching Haiwai Meadows before breakfast. They arrived there between daylight and sunrise, and found that the house had been burned and Mrs. McGuire and her son murdered. They were laying side by side some one or two hundred feet from the house. Mrs. McGuire had received thirteen or fourteen arrow wounds on her person, the little boy had received seven wounds. The mother had drawn six of the arrows from the body of the boy and had broken them in pieces. The little boy had (when found) a small stone firmly grasped in his right hand and had doubtless tried to defend his mother and himself to the best of his ability. There was an ax-handle lying close to Mrs. McGuire, and appearances indicated that she had tried to defend herself until she was literally pierced to death with arrows. Mr. James and the German removed the bodies and placed them in an old wagon-box which was close by. James then went south (down the road) in order to ascertain whether the Indians had or had not captured some of his ox-teams which had passed down the road the previous day. The German hastened back to Big Owens Lake, dispatched a party for the bodies of the victims, and sent a messenger to this place (Lone Pine) to notify the citizens of the massacre. The messenger arrived at Lone Pine about 11 o'clock A. M. of the same day. Immediately after the news was received, a party numbering 13 or 14 men STARTED FOR THE SCENE OF THE MASSACRE.

In the meantime the bodies had been recovered and sent to Lone Pine for burial. Our party was under command of W. A. Greenley, and stayed that night at Hog Rogers' ranch, near the south end of Big Owens Lake. On the 2d day of January, 1865, we arrived at the scene of the murder, and carefully examined the premises. We tracked the Indians from the scene of the murder across a flat and out among the sand hills. We found from the tracks that the Indians numbered about 15 or 16, all told; we followed their trail until they separated, about one-half of them going in the direction of Kern river and the remainder going towards Big Lake. We then returned to Haiwai Meadows and went in search of the two men who were known to have been in the house at the time of the attack by the Indians. I will here state Mr. McGuire was not at home at the time of the murder; he had gone to Big Pine settlement, and had requested two men who were at his place to stay there and keep his wife and child company until he returned.

We found the tracks of the men and traced them to where they had thrown away a loaded rifle; a little further on they had dropped a loaded revolver and still further on they dropped a double-barrelled shot gun, one barrel loaded the other I think had no load in it. We arrived at Little Lake station, at which place we found the two men who had so shamefully run off and left Mrs. McGuire and the little boy, and from them obtained the story of the massacre, which to say the least was very unsatisfactory to our party; consequently we advised them to take up their line of march, and to the Owens river country again.

On the morning of the 3d of January we started for Coso mines in order to ascertain whether the Indians had or had not attacked that camp. On our arrival we were not very cordially received by the denizens of Coso, but all our party being old frontiersmen (after the chilly reception ws met with), we had things pretty much our own way so far as forage and food for man and beast was concerned. On the morning of the 4th we started to return. On our return we found which were readily identified as the same we had previous y traced from the scene of the massacre. We followed the tracks to within a short distance of the Indian camp at the mouth of Owens river. We were satisfied that part of the Indians concerned in the murders were in this camp, but we passed on to Lone Pine without molesting them at that time. We found the citizens at Lone Pine, on our arrival, holding some Indians as prisoners. Relating what we had seen and done, the Indian prisoners and attempted to escape. The consequence was that the most of them were killed on the spot.

THE TRACKS OF THE INDIANS,

BECAME VERY RESTLESS,

We then decided to attack the Indian camp. On the morning of January 5th, 1865, thirty-two citizens under command of W. A. Greenley attacked the camp, and after a spirited little fight, which lasted several minutes, we drove the Indians from the camp into the lake. Very few of them got away alive. This was

THE LAST FIGHT WITH INDIANS IN THIS VALLEY.

No Indians were captured and sent to the Fort; no coin was recovered; "Captain" James Hobbs was never in this country until four or five years after these occurrences.

From the foregoing facts, all of which can be corroborated by eye witnesses yet in this valley, I leave the public to judge whether Hobbs is or is not a liar.

Another Short Road.

The patients down at the Sanitorium must be regaining health and energy at a most encouraging rate, or if not that, have been advised to take another dose of short railroad mixed with sea breezes, which Dr. Stanford assures them, is much better for debilitated systems than copious inhalations of lead and silver fumes from the "back country." The latter, he fears, might prove too suddenly and lastingly invigorating, ending in unwieldy obesity and consequent prostration of the dew claws and general scratching apparatus, which last in a place full of fleas, must certainly produce suffering and possibly death. As the doctor has before successfully physicked this and every other railroad town on the coast, and is willing to do so some more at the usual rates, his Los Angeles patients willingly accept his prescriptions and pay for their own pills. He has a diploma and they hope for better results than when they took their first quack dose of L. A. & S. P. R. R., which passed from them so quick as to greatly prostrate their nerves. Following is the latest prescription, dated Los Angeles, August 31:

Articles of incorporation of the Los Angeles and Coast Railway Company have been signed and acknowledged to-day. The incorporators are nine of the prominent citizens of this place The company propose to build a railway from this city to some point about fifteen miles from San Pedro. They say the road will be built without delay

Our Sentiments Exactly.

Commenting upon the Jersey City horror, The Pioche Record expresses itself as follows in relation to the Rev. Beast known as Glendenning:

The telegraph informs us that Glendenning, the pastor who debauched and caused the death of the unhappy girl Mary Pomeroy, now declares his intention of meeting the charges his unfortunate victim made against him when her lips were faltering in the soul-piercing throes that inexorable fate forces upon all mankind. How generous, how unselfish, how courageous is this act of this reverend scoundrel; how characteristic of the religious mountebanks of the day! This disgrace to manhood, this libel upon his brethern, this thing, whom it were base flattery to call a scoundrel, avails himself of his position to debauch a weak-minded, credulous member of his church. She pays the penalty of transgression with her life. And now comes this caitiff, while the poor, deluded girl he deceived lies cold and stark in the clutches of death, and declares that he is ready to meet the charges recorded against him by the wretched girl whose lips were then distorted by the pains of death. Out upon the villain! The rigid seal of the grave prevents the tongue from stirring of the only witness against him. The loathsome coward, as villainous as he is base, knows this, and now comes strutting forward and declares his desire to meet the accusations the poor soul made against him. Brutal and base as he is hypocritical and cruel, he now seeks to defy the ordeal of public opinion by that brazen effrontery which is one of the marked characteristics of men of his stamp. He may say and do what he may, a credulous, weak-headed congregation may exonerate him; but in the cemetery, on the headstone marked with the simple words "Mary Pomeroy," will be found a witness that will steadily testify as to his guilt and demand his punishment.

Specimens Wanted.

The Land Office of the Central and Southern Pacific railroads have issued a circular to the following effect, and to which we would call the attention of all miners particularly:

The Land Department of the Central and Southern Pacific Railroad Companies is preparing to place on exhibition at the Philadelphia Centennial specimens that will illustrate the products of the railroad land and other lands on this coast.

Contributions from farmers, mine superintendents and others will be gladly received, and due credit will be given for all articles so furnished which are placed on exhibition. Samples of all articles enumerated below will be of especial interest.

Grain of all kinds; both the kernel and the sheaf with stalks of full length, including roots.

Fruits of all kinds, fresh preserved in alcohol or dried.

All kinds of vegetables will be required in due time of the crop of 1876

Almonds, walnuts, etc., giving age of the tree and kind of soil.

Castor beans and olives, with specimens of the oils, hemp, cotton, ramie, soap root and jute.

Tobacco and hops.

Wool, goats' hair, furs and skins.

Specimens of soils, with a description of the locality from which they were taken; and remarks on their adaptability to different products.

Minerals, ores, coal, peat, clay, borax, salt, etc.

Building stone, brick, cement, etc.

Wines, brandies, etc.

Shells, fossils and antiquities.

All specimens should be marked with the name of the locality, and full address of the donor; and should be accompanied, if possible, by a short description. It would be of especial interest if with specimens of grain or other agricultural products, there be sent a description of the kind of soil where the same were grown, the mode of cultivation, the time of planting and harvesting, the yield per acre, etc.

The co-operation of all who feel interested in making a successful exhibition of this kind is respectfully requested.

Agents are authorized to forward free such articles or samples as they may collect. Consigning the same to C. P. R. R., care of B. B. Redding, Land Agent, San Francisco.

Of Value to Musicians.

Sherman & Hyde's "Musical Review" for August is full of original and selected matter of a high order of merit. Among the more notable original articles are, "Gleanings from the Musical Literature of Germany," "American Artists," "Ecclesiastical Music," "Criticism," "Music for the Public Schools," and several pages of Art Notes, Musical Criticisms, etc. The number also contains five pages of new instrumental music, and a beautiful song, "Departure," by Stephen Leach, of San Francisco, as sung by Mrs. Marriner at the Bohemian Club. The subscription price of The Review is only $1 per annum.

Finished.

The grading for the railroad is finished on this side the river, so far as required, unless the work is continued on through Tehechepi Pass. The engineer in charge hopes to complete the bridge by October 1. When that great work is complete, track laying, etc., on this side will soon be accomplished, not till then will we feel the full benefit of the road, and realize the change effected in our situation.—[Bakersfield Courier, August 29.

—Vice-President Wilson says he is opposed to a third term for the Presidency, for Grant or any other man no matter what his merit may be. And he looks on the movement as the tail-end of the rebellion.

Her Dying Words.

"The Lord has called me, and I must die. I want you to take my dying words. Rev. John S. Glendenning is the father of my child." Thus spoke Miss Pomeroy on her dying bed. And where was Glendenning the while? At Saratoga, sipping the waters and dreaming of ameliorating the moral condition of the heathen in far Cathay.

Indian War.

It seems as though we are having a general Indian war, and in dead earnest. On the 28th of August Gen. Davidson had a most bloody battle with a large body of Kiowas and Naconees in the Indian Territory. The savages were repulsed with heavy loss.

Not Guilty.

The Beecher Committee have summed up the evidence and rendered a formal verdict of not guilty, in which we think they are fully justified.

NOTICE.

THE DELINQUENT LISTS OF THE VARIOUS Counties of the State, for the Twenty-Fourth and Twenty-Fifth Fiscal years (1872-3—1873-4) are now in my hands for collection. Many persons are delinquent for small sums on personal property, and are urged to examine the rolls in the hands of the Tax Collector of their respective counties and to make immediate payment. The law is imperative, that the payment of the State Tax for these years must be enforced, and unless voluntary payments are made at once, heavy costs will be incurred by the delinquents.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY VIRTUE OF AN EXECUTION ISSUED OUT of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, in the suit of John C. Morrison, Jr., against Wm. G. Squires, upon a Judgment rendered in said Court on the Sixteenth day of May, A. D. 1874, for the sum of One Thousand and Fifty-nine and 13-100 dollars, in U. S. Gold Coin, besides costs amounting to the sum of Ninety-nine and 90-100 dollars, duly attested the First day of September, A. D. 1874, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of $1,139 03-100 in U. S. Gold Coin, besides costs and interest, I have levied on all the right, title and interest of the said defendant, Wm. G. Squires, in and to the following described real property to-wit: Lot number Twelve and Ten, and the southerly half of Lot number Eight, in Block number Sixteen, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, together with the buildings thereon known as the Inyo House, the Gem Saloon, and the Drug Store now occupied by Dr. Flair, and all other buildings and improvements on said lots. Notice is hereby given that on MONDAY, THE TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D. 1874, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 5 o'clock P. M., to wit: at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, in front of the Court House, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, I will sell all the above described property, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy said judgment and costs, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash in U. S. Gold Coin.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

School.

There is a probability that a six- or eight-months' term of the public school will begin here in three or four weeks. The length of the term depends upon the liberality of the contributions of the citizens, as, under Bolander's beautifully conceived school law the whole amount of public money the district can have under any circumstances is but $500. This will maintain the school about four months and a half. But at the same time the same intellectual statute requires that it must be maintained not less than six months, or work a forfeiture of all its public money next year. But so long as this county-seat is satisfied with its old disgraceful shell of a school house and less than a ten-months' term each year the law is good enough as it is. Aside from the positive pecuniary benefits that would accrue to the place generally, and the duty we all, parents or otherwise, owe the rising generation, the credit of the town demands that we should have a decent school house and a first grade school the school year through. As we have some citizens who, we know, are willing to do a reasonable share toward the accomplishment of these ends, it is quite likely enough such can be found to carry them out. At all events an effort in that direction will be made as soon times become a little more propitious which won't be long.

The Facts.

W. L. or "Dad" Moore furnishes, in this issue the true version of some interesting incidents in the early history of the county, an account of which Capt. Hobbs pretends to give in his lying narrative as part of his own wonderful experiences. We also present one more chapter (and the last we shall find room for from his book) of Hobb's lies as he tells it, touching the remarkable circumstances attending the murder of Hog Rogers. We have understood it to be an actual fact that his murderer, King, served him up as beefsteak to more than one teamster who asked entertainment at the station. But the veracious Hobbs don't mention this, probably deeming that part rather too fishy for his pretended truthful record. It is needless to say so far as most of our local readers are concerned that there is not a word of truth in Hobb's story as he connects it; but as the principal events on which he bases his lies did occur, we hope for the truth of permanent record W. L. will also furnish us a correct version of this somewhat interesting chapter.

See Them.

Among the new advertisements is a notice from Controller Green worth the attention of those to whom it is addressed. Al. Wapelhorst, who, quiet as he is has a great many friends, also takes a position in the same column. The traveling public will note the change of sailing days for the stages of the Northern Line, which company are now sending their stages through faster than they ever did before.

What She Thought About It.

The other day two small Indian muchachas called at the residence of one of our neighboring ladies, the mother of a little three year-old Miss who didn't want her mother to let the dusky visitors come in, and shut the door in their faces. She was ordered to open it and let them in, which she did with spiteful reluctance, saying, "Yes, I will if you think more of them nasty 'chachas than you do of your own children!"

Yet Sick.

We are sorry to learn that Major Egbert is still quite unwell, on which account he has not been able to leave San Francisco to rejoin his command, as we were told on the best of authority some three weeks since, were his intentions. We would be better pleased to see the Major in command of a big mining company in Waucoba.

The Wiltons.

This popular troupe will play here to-night, and probably on Monday. We are promised one of their very finest pieces to-night, and it will justify everybody to go and see it. The troupe has been playing at Lone Pine during the week and to good houses every evening.

Well Pleased.

Dr. R. P. Chase, President of the Virginia Consolidated, arrived from San Francisco on Tuesday, and went up to the mine the same day. Taking a look through the mine he started on his return home the following day, very highly pleased with the new developments.

For San Luis and Around.

J. N. and Sam Newlon, of Bishop, passed through here yesterday bound on a trip to San Luis Obispo and other coast counties, with a view of finding a better country than this for permanent settlement.

The Best.

We have to credit T. J. Goodale with decidedly the best flavored peaches we have seen in this market. They are from his place near Fish Springs.

Personal.

Mrs. I. Harris arrived home Thursday from her extended visit to the Bay. Also, Mr. C. A. Walters from his trip to Stockton where he went in charge of a demented relative.

Postmaster Appointed.

James Bridger has been appointed Postmaster at Lagunita, the junction office for Panamint.

Mail Muddle Settled.

It will be remembered that the mail contract from here to Lida and Gold Mountain was at the late opening of bids awarded to M. S. Clark, and that a short time after, as it appears, one of the honestest clerks happened to find another and lower bid which somehow had been overlooked. This was J. Blackmore's, alias our own Josiah's, bid, and this latter fact being brought to the attention of the Postmaster-General that officer saw at the first glance that Josiah's newly resurrected bid would have to be allowed or that remarkably honest man would be mad and have him removed. So it was done that way, but the Postmaster-General wasn't sure but what there was yet a vestige or two of wrath in the great man's pericardium, or place where the heart ought to be, and not knowing what might be the consequences he went out of the office and wouldn't be Postmaster-General any more. Meantime the clerk officially notified Postmaster Rowley at this office that Mr. Blackmore would be around some day after the mail and if he come to let him have it. Acting on this authority Rowley couldn't let any new contractor have the sack, notwithstanding Parson Orne, sub-contractor under Clark, has driven up every Monday morning since the beginning of August and offered to take it right along every week; but all of Rowley's looking for Blackmore, pursuant to orders, went for naught for that man of straw came not at all, notwithstanding Josiah had got wagons for him and harness and all that was needed for him to get along very well—everything except he forgot to file the required bond, though he didn't forget to charge up a $1,000 to his backers at home on the regular annual bribery account. But there came a change of clerks at Washington so this immense sum was lost, likewise the Blackmore contract, and more sadder still the expected alternate contract that was to revert to Josiah at the highest rates when the clerk got tired of waiting for the men of straw. It came to pass, however, that M. S. was smarter than Josiah, because he got the contract at last, and without having to lie or bribe or steal or punch anybody in the ribs and proceed with such cunning blinkings as to convey the idea of weak eyes and brains, or hinting at things which, if kept dark, might be made mutually advantageous, you know. And Rowley has new orders and don't await the coming of Josiah Blackmore any more.

Another Report.

It is stated, but on what authority we know not, that John Simpson has perfected the organization of his Potosi Tunnel Company for Cerro Gordo hill. We consider this one of the most promising enterprises on the tapis in this county. Long before final completion there is every reason to believe it would cause an increase of fully 100 tons in the daily product of lead bullion, and may do much more. But, as a consequence of a recent law suit, it is quite possible a question of title to the tunnel right may arise to cause trouble and delay. Simpson testified in a suit last Spring that he had cut 400 feet of this tunnel in trust for the O. L. S-L Co., and on that, gained his suit, the company, or some of its members being the defendants. But we hope it may be in a situation for him to go on with his proposed work, for he can put it through in good shape if anybody can.

Another Big Mining Suit.

It is reported that Wm. Watt et als. has entered suit against Belshaw & Beaudry to recover the value of ores alleged to have been extracted through the Union workings, belonging to the latter, from the Omega belonging to plaintiffs, and perhaps other damages in all amounting to $100,000. The report may be true but no papers have been filed in the case here as yet. Belshaw has gone to the Bay.

For Panamint.

John B. White started on Thursday last on a business prospect to Panamint. Quite a number have gone out there from this part of the county, and we hear that the stages from the south are crowded with passengers for the same destination.

Farewell Sermon.

Rev. McKean preaches his last sermon here to-morrow evening, prior to his departure to attend the annual Conference of the M. E. Church South at Los Angeles.

Bishop Creek Items.

A Bishop Creek correspondent writes as follows:

Mrs. J. W. Inman, of Bishop Creek, regretting the lack of potatoes for the table, and wondering if there were not some in the hills of her own late planting, dug a little to ascertain, and soon unearthed one potatoe that weighed nearly two pounds, and three that weighed good four pounds, besides several others that were by no means "small potatoes."

THRESHING

at Bishop is now progressing at a fair rate under the administration of B. H. Roberts. There is not enough out to judge what the average yield of grain per acre is, but it is considered fair.

ARRIVED.

A brother of Mr. J. Garrison, late of Independence, and Mr. McCall arrived at Bishop Creek last week from Eureka, Nevada.

A RUNAWAY.

A few days since as Thos. McLeod, et als., at Bishop Creek, were hauling hay the team ran away with the wagon and part of a load, and seriously if not ruinously injured a valuable horse.

HORSE RACE.

Hutchison's black horse came off winner in the race run Saturday with Steve Gregg's horse. There were also a goodly number of fights and headbuildings, the indispensable incidents and concomitants of whisky selling.

—Somebody has noticed that nineteen out of every twenty newspaper men have straight noses.

—In a state of health the pulsations per minute of the horse are 32 to 38, ox or cow 35 to 42, sheep 70 to 76, goat 70 to 79, dog 90 to 100, duck 130, hen 140, cat 110 to 120.

—Some one who would seem to know, says the women are housewives in Germany, queens in England, ladies in France, captives in Italy, slaves in Spain and coquettes in America.

—The Government offers for sale at auction seven of the turret monitors and five ironclads. Two of them—the Shawnee and Wassue—are to be sold at the Charlestown Yard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES: SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. WORMS.—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, MASS., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF SALE.

WHEREAS, UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF a decree or judgment of foreclosure rendered by the District Court of the 16th Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, on the Ninth day of March, A. D. 1874, in a certain cause therein pending wherein Frank Broder was Plaintiff and E. Chaquette was Defendant, it was among other things ordered, adjudged and decreed that sale should be made by the Sheriff of Inyo County in the manner prescribed by law for the sale of real estate, of all and singular the property therein described; that is to say, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit: Lots 1 and 2 in fractional northwest quarter of section number Five (5), Township number Thirteen (13), Range Thirty-five East, Base and Meridian of Mount Diablo, or so much thereof as might be necessary to pay the sum of Fifteen Hundred and Fifteen 45-100 ($1,515 45-100) dollars in United States Gold Coin, besides interest and costs and expenses of sale, of which decree a copy duly certified under the seal of said Court has been delivered to me. Now, therefore, I hereby give notice that on MONDAY, THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D. 1874, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, I will sell the said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash in United States Gold Coin.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Indian Agents and Reservations.

[From The Arizona Miner, August 24.]

The criticisms upon the management of the Colorado Indian reserve, which appeared in a recent issue of this paper, demands the serious consideration of every citizen interested in the amelioration of the Indians, or opposed to the ill-considered and extravagant expenditures of the public moneys. It is charged, and the evidence offered in substantiation of the charges is competent and trustworthy, that Indians reported there exist only on paper; that while rations are drawn for over 800 Mohaves, scarcely 200 are fed; that the Government is put to great expense in paying salaries to employes who, under the high sounding titles of doctor, schoolmaster, head farmer, perform in a perfunctory manner the onerous and responsible duties of drawing rations and pay from a credulous nation; that the ditch, in which thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been buried, will never hold water; that the agent shows what he knows about farming by converting to his own use and sending to his own ranch cattle and agricultural implements furnished for the benefit of the Indians; that what leisure can be abstracted from the improvement of his own estate is spent in traveling to and from Washington at Government expense; that the "school" exercises consist in making the Indian children water the grass plat in front of the agent's residence, and that no effort is being made to educate these children, who are allowed to grow up in the same ignorance and vice as their fathers have done; that false representations were made by Tonner to the Interior Department at Washington, by which he succeeded in having transferred to his own reserve the Hualpai Indians, 600 in number, who, instead of finding the grassy valley Tonner reported was to be their home, are wretched, discontented prisoners on an arid desert, where neither grass grows nor water runs, and where they stand in imminent danger of contamination from the diseased Mojaves, every one of whom is now rotten with a disgusting distemper.

Further, we add, that Dr. Tonner, instead of executing his duties with affability and courtesy, as he should do, has disclosed his asinine derivation by indulging in threats against officers and citizens who ventured to differ with his lordship's opinions.

We might have borne with the inefficiency, ignorance and insolence of this agent for some time longer had not our eyes been opened to the astonishing progress made by the Apaches on the San Carlos, White Mountain and Rio Verde reserves, under the guidance of the army officers designated to take care of them by Gen. Crook.

A complete enumeration of what has been done for them would be beyond the limits of this article and is already familiar to most of our readers. We shall only say, that in another year, if undisturbed by insidious schemes of Colorado reservation leeches, the Apaches will be self-supporting and Government will not again be called upon to appropriate hundreds of thousands of dollars for distribution among the friends of such men as Agent Tonner.

We have great respect for morality and virtue, but where religion goes hand in hand with robbery, virtue with voracity and innocence with imbecility, we shall always endeavor to express in fitting terms our abhorrence of the hypocritical and unnatural conjunction and leave no stone unturned to discover the impostors who prostitute their agencies to their own emolument and the peril of our young settlements.

We call upon the Press of the country to unite with us in demanding from the next Congress an investigation of the Colorado reservation and a contrast between it and those supervised by the military arm of the Government.

Let the examination be made, not by sanctimonious representatives of the Indian Bureau, whose reports are written for them in Washington, but by reputable and prominent business men of the country. Let them take an engineer to pronounce upon the value of the ditch on the Colorado reserve, upon which, as before remarked, hundreds of thousands of dollars have been wasted, and that excavated at Camp Verde by the Indians themselves, under direction of army officers, which has not cost the country one dollar.

Then let our Pacific slope members combine to demand the record of the "Beale's Springs Court of Inquiry," too long stifled by the influence of the Indian Ring, and our word for it, neither Tonner, Colorado reservation nor Indian Bureau will last one month after the publication of the testimony the investigation will evoke.

David C. Broderick—Reminiscences of the Olden Time.

[From The San Francisco Examiner, Aug. 1.]

Several communications have reached us at different times, and various personal applications have been made seeking information in relation to the political difficulties of D. C. Broderick, in the past, which resulted in hostile rencounters. The principal question was: Did he ever fight two duels in California? To this, from our own knowledge, we have always been prepared to answer in the affirmative. But the particulars of his first combat we could not remember as to dates, incidents, etc., while his antagonist we could easily name. Being unable to reply with accuracy to our querists, we have put the question to a score, at least, of Broderick's most intimate friends and daily associates during his lifetime, and, as to the date of his first duel, while most of them recollected the occurrence, no two of them agreed upon the year in which it was fought, and none of them were absolutely certain in their remembrance of the month of the year in which the fight came off. At last, driven to desperation by the persistent curiosity of our subscribers and readers, we concluded to wade through the files of The Alta, the most ancient newspaper chronicler of facts on the Pacific Coast, and we give the result of our investigations which sums up thus: The first intimation of any difficulty between the subsequent belligerents is contained in the following card, published in The Alta California of March 17, 1852:

To the public: The undersigned begs leave to withdraw the card published by him in The Sacramento State Journal of the 10th instant, reflecting upon the character of D. C. Broderick. This withdrawal is for the purpose of removing objections existing as to another mode of resenting the offence offered to my father (ex-Governor Smith) by Mr. B. in the Senate Chamber.

J. CALEB SMITH.

San Francisco, March 16th, 1852.

Supplemental to this laconic communication we find in The Alta of March 18, 1852, the following, and nothing more:

THE AFFAIR OF HONOR.—The difficulties between J. Caleb Smith and D. C. Broderick, which have occasioned so much solicitude in our city for some days past, resulted in a hostile meeting between the parties yesterday on the Contra Costa. [This, of course, means that the duel occurred on the other side of the Bay of San Francisco, then known as the Contra Costa side.—Eds. Examiner.] Six shots were interchanged, one of them taking effect, striking Broderick on his fob chain, and slightly wounding him. A parley then ensued between the friends of the parties, and they left the field.

Just here we may remark that but for the "diplomacy" of Vi Turner, one of Broderick's friends, as we have often heard, that shot would have proved fatal to Broderick. It was not the chain of his (Broderick's) watch, but the watch itself that saved his life.

THE SECOND DUEL

of Broderick occurred on the 13th day of September, 1859. He and David S. Terry met in deadly combat on the morning of that day, Tuesday, at twenty minutes before 7 o'clock. The seconds of Broderick were J. C. McKibbon, Gen. D. D. Colton and Leonidas Haskell. The seconds of Judge Terry were Calhoun Benham and Thomas Hayes. After an exchange of customary ceremonies, the fight proceeded. The result was that Broderick was badly wounded, and carried from the field of contest to the residence of Leonidas Haskell, near the Presidio road, where he died on the 16th of September, 1859, at 2 o'clock in the morning, from the wound he had received on the 13th of that month.

General Custer.

[From Inter-Ocean Correspondence.]

He is a great man, a noble man is Gen. Custer, and one of whom most of the world—that part which does not know him—has a singularly wrong idea. I came here expecting to find a big-whiskered, swearing, ranting, drinking toper, and I found instead a slender, quiet gentlemen, with a face as fair as a girl's, and manners as gentle and comely as the traditional prince. In hunting for the drunken raider I found a literary gentleman in his library, surrounded by adjutants and orderlies, to whom he gave his military directions while he wrote and read. His guest for four days, I never sat with a more courteous host, or generous entertainer, or polished conversationalist. With one of the sweetest, brightest women in the world for a wife, his home is that of a cultured gentleman, instead of a roystering cavalryman as is generally supposed.

Gen. Custer does not drink, notwithstanding the prevailing idea of his intemperance. He believes in and practices total abstinence. The good temperance teachers of the day can use him as an example rather than an object of regret.

Gen. Custer does not swear. In his constant companionship for more than a week, under circumstances, too, that have been unusually trying, I have not heard an oath from his lips; and what is more, does not allow profanity among his subordinates.

But what, some one will ask, are his vices? His soldiers will tell you he has none, unless an almost inordinate love for the brute creation may be called such, for Gen. Custer has the best dogs and the best horses he can procure within the limits of search. His leash of hounds is probably as large and well bred as as any in the country, and his own and the horses of the regiment, the Seventh cavalry, are famous all over the States, while he has the reputation of being the best sportsman and the most accurate shot in the army.

LIEU LANDS, ETCETRA.

It may be of some interest to a few to know something about Josiah's present contemplated land grab. Of course it is understood that that good man would pine away and die if he could not have an intriguing fraud of some kind to work up, and thereby keep a few admiring friends doubtfully tagging at his heels looking for the promised crumbs. The matter now in hand is no exception to the rule, except that it may not prove quite so sweeping in its intended scope as his previous efforts and failures in the same line.

The object in view this time is to secure to himself and the usual number of the elect title to a large quantity more or less of school or lieu lands. His chums tell us that this grab this time is on the dead square, and must result very beneficially to the educational interest throughout the world and the pecuniary interests of Inyo in particular. For once Josiah has our best wishes for his succcess, for in that case a large number of signers of applications and powers of attorney will know more than they do now, and thus the educational interest will get a push forward. And if it should turn out that it was not a steal and that nobody was roped in, but was really a straight forward transaction,as soon as the good man realized that fact—that it was no steal even if there was money it, the chances are he would die of chagrin or settle elsewhere :thus the moral and pecuniary interests of the county would receive a small kick ahead. Yes, we are in sweet accord this time and hope he will succeed, though we confess it isn't clear to us how it is to be done, even with Houghton and Gardner both to help him, as we are assured they are always ready to do.

There is no doubt but there are a number of legitimate holders of school lands taking stock in this scheme, he merely playing the role of attorney before the State Land Office (where he boasts a telling influence), in perfecting titles for them. So far there may be no more fraud than usual. But in addition to those are many others who have been induced to make applications in their own names and to execute documents constituting J. Earl their attorney in fact. The chances are these have sold for less than the usual price. If they do not actually subscribe to a false oath in swearing that the land applied for is for their own use and benefit when it is not, they at least condone a fraud on the State. The truth of this will be seen by an examination of the law, which also makes clear the additional fact that if certificates of purchase issue on these applications (if to the maximum amount of 320 acres each), the applicant thereby exhausts his right to purchase of these lands for all time to come. The applications are made as prescribed in sections 3495 and 3500, both of which expressly inhibit the entry by any one person of more than 320 acres of a 16th or 36th section or any other school lands or any lands in lieu thereof. If such entry is made by agreement for the benefit of a third party it is a violation of the plain letter of the law and involves perjury and a liability to prosecution for fraud when the parties have made such a previous agreement, such as appear to have been executed in this pending fraud. The applicant has 50 days after approval of application in which to make the first payment of 20 per cent. The certificate of purchase then issues in the name of the applicant and no other; then,as the earliest period, it becomes transferable property, and may be turned over to a land grabber or any other person. If the applicant sells or gives it away (he may do either) he of course conveys title in his own name. This exhausts his right to such entries exactly the same as if he retained possession. He may abandon at any stage, but not convey title to any other person at any period, and at the same time keep intact his right for another entry If abandoned at any time the title reverts to the State.

As there are no vacant school lands in the county worth bothering about we are curious to know from what source Josiah expects his lieu transfers to cover other lands. In his report for 1873 Surveyor-General Gardner claimed that the State was entitled to lands in lieu of 16th and 36th sections in the mineral belt,amounting in all to some 2,000,000 of acres. But his opinion is not yet the law. From the same report we learn that the lands of the 500,000 acre, seventy-two and ten section grants have all been sold, so we get not an acre of lieu lands from any of these sources.

The act of Congress of May, 1853, gave each State the 16th and 36th sections for educational purposes, but expressly inhibited the right to lands in lieu of these on account of territory occupied by rivers, lakes, mountains or "soil unfit for cultivation," or for a fractional township except in its proportion. This is also the sum of Commissioner Hendrick's circular of April 12, 1858. So we get nothing on account of Owens Lake or river or any of these things.

Neither do we get anything in lieu of school sections settled upon prior to survey, because all the surveys, except Powell's and Receiver Payne's grab (and for which the latter was dismissed the office same as Josiah) on the mountains a year ago, were all made over twenty years ago, and previous to settlement. Neither can any be floated in pertaining to an adjoining land district until the vacant lands are first all located in that district, without violating the law of May, 1826, yet in force.

The question then arises, how is this good man to perfect his fraud and become a large proprietor of lieu lands in a county entitled to no lieu lands? With the lights now before us we see but one way, which is this: As he claims that he and State Surveyor. General Gardner both use the same quill (to write with of course), it is possible the latter gentleman has told our model Granger that the State must get land in lieu of the 2,000,000 acres school lands reserved as mineral—for which the State has received no indemnity as yet and possibly never will. It is this, probably, which has caused the flutter among the land grabbers, and set them to work to devise means to evade the State laws limiting each man's right to an entry not exceeding 320 acres. But if they can find dupes enough they will get along very well, and gobble up all the vacant land in the country.

For the information of settlers on school sections we will add that they are protected in their rights, first, for three months after the township has been sectionized in which to make settlement, and second, for sixty days more in which to file an application, which must lie sixty days more before it can be approved, and fifty days after that are given in which to make the first payment of 20 per cent. and first annual interest on the remainder. Where these matters have been attended to in time the title is good enough; otherwise it is as it may be.

OUR BENTON LETTER.

BENTON, Sept. 9.

MESSRS. EDS.—As a kind of duty whether mutually interesting or otherwise, I will give your readers a limited idea of how things are running about this place and vicinity. Also an occasional personal puff, since such things causes your paper to be much sought after—pilfered for an hour or two, just to see "who is hit this time." [That's on account of the learned character o the editorials, we suspect, as, to be appreciated, they have to be digested in quietness which requires about the length of time mentioned.—EDS.]

is somewhat livelier than usual; for the last week or two the stages have been pretty well patronized. The mail between this place and Columbus has been discontinued, but is carried direct from Aurora to Columbus and vice versa.

BUSINESS.

We have no reason to complain of dull times, as everpbody seems to have a few "Benton bits," consequently, plenty to eat, drink and wear. The mills are running steadily, and making their regular shipments of bullion every week. Mr. Wetherill shipped nine bars last week, weigeing 100 pounds each, and worth $12 per pound.

THE MINES

are all looking very well, except the Yellow Jacket and that is looking better. Mr. Mitchell, Superintendent, informs me that they have struck quite a large vein of ore, and that it is rich is understood as it is Yellow Jacket.

AMUSEMENTS

are quite plentiful lately. Johnny Mack entertained us two nights last week. To-night we are to have a panorama of the Modoc war, etc., and Saturday night the Wilton theatrical troupe.

PERSONAL.

Our old friend, Keltner, who has been here for the last two months repairing watches, etc., started for the East this morning. He was highly esteemed as a fine old "Deutcher shentleman," and his work has given general satisfaction. Mr. Sangunetti returned from Carson last Saturday, and was warmly welcomed home by a score of friends who met him at the Postoffice. He has been quite sick for some weeks, but is recovering fast. His troubles with his amiable pard have not been settled yet, on which account he says he will sell his property cheap, so as to get rid of the old pard, and thereby save a great deal of "fagling up." The undersigned makes himself scarce since those threats. SNOB.

THAT MAIL MUDDLE AGAIN.

It seems that Postmaster Rowley thinks we put some sort of a slur upon him in our remarks last week in reference to mail matters. Reviewing the article, we can see no good grounds for such an impression on his part, and certain it is that nothing was further from our intention. We took especial pains, as we thought, to present the circumstances of his connection with the matter in a light showing that he had simply performed his duties according to the plain letter of the law, of and pursuant to orders and duty. Substantially we stated, first, that Postmaster Rowley had been notified that the award had been made to J. Blackmore. Save in the matter of the initial this was true. Second, that Clark (who had also been notified to complete his bonds) had applied to him for the mail at the stipulated time (August 1), but that Rowley declined to give it to him. No exceptions could be or was taken to this refusal for the other orde had not yet been cancelled, nor had he (Rowley) received any official notification that the contract had been awarded to Clark. So far, with the exception above noted, our reference was strictly correct, and was certainly no reflection on Mr. Rowley, in any manner. But the concluding statement in these words that, "Rowley looked in vain for the man of straw," was an error, and is the portion we believe that was considered derogatory to our worthy Postmaster, though why we can't see. Knowing, as we did, full well that no actual bonds had ever been filed on the Blackmore or Earl contract, we supposed of course that the old contractors, Earl and Darrah, would continue to carry the mail until the bonds of the new one, whomsoever he might be, were duly filed and acknowledged. But such was not the case. The notification in favor of Blackmore, above referred to, was Rowley's authority for delivering the mail to his order, and was of course the authority by which he could alone act, and accordingly the mail was so delivered, so that we were wrong in stating that "Rowley's looking for Blackmore went for naught." In point of fact the Department ordered the mail delivered to a contractor in advance of the filing of any bonds, and from the first of July (we are not certain as to exact dates) down to within about two weeks of the present time the Independence, Lida Valley and Gold Mountain mails have been carried by a contractor under no bonds what ever. But, referring once more to the objectionable article, we concluded with the statement that "Rowley now had new orders and did not await the coming of Josiah Blackmore any more." This true statement in plain English meant that Clark's bonds had been filed and approved, and that Rowley having been officially notified of the fact was now delivering the mail to Clark. With this explanation of what was said, and another emphatic denial that anything was intended to implicate Rowley in Josiah's underhanded operations in this mail matter, we will take a look at some of the latter gentleman's management in relation to it. That it was a straw bid perpetrated in the name of a third party, and in all probability without his knowledge or consent, appears pretty evident from several circ. circumstances. First, the award had been duly announced in favor of Clark in the published list. His bid was pronounced by his friends here as being altogether too low; but a few days thereafter it is cancelled in favor of another still lower, which had suddenly been resurrected no one but a clerk perhaps and Josiah knows how. This bid was announced to "J." Blackmore. There was no "J." Blackmore in this county. In the final notification to Postmaster Rowley here, and the one above referred to, the letter "B" was substituted for the "J" and thus was made to represent a worthy citizen residing at Big Pine. But after rectifying this important error another (proving very conclusively how much Josiah was hurried in preparing this safety steal) appears in the official order to Rowley. This was in favor of "B. Blackmore, a resident of Cerro Gordo in Inyo county." When a man of intelligence makes out an application deliberately and with bona fide intentions there is not the slightest probability that he would either mistake his own initials or place of residence, nor is it a possible thing to attribute such mistakes as appeared in this to simple clerical errors of Department clerks as explained by some of Earl's chums. Ben. Blackmore has few superiors as a penman, and his writing cannot be misread by any clerk however stupid. But whatever the original intention, the mails, by order of Department, were delivered to the order of B. Blackmore, J. Earl having made a sub-contract to have them carried.

It is worthy of remark here to notice how well they have been carried. From a statement forwarded to the Department by residents of Gold Mountain, the terminus of the route, it appears that during the last three months prior to the time when Clark entered upon his contract, J. Earl's sub-contractor has never more than once or twice gone a mile beyond Lida Valley, leaving the Gold Mountain office to get its mail as best it could. Of course nobody is responsible for this dereliction of duty, because there is or was no bondsmen to fall back upon. But no doubt this service which was never performed will furnish good grounds for a back-pay steal next Winter. "My friend Houghton" is just the man to work up steals of this kind, whether the Postmaster at the other end of the line certified to the service or otherwise. We wish to give the devil his due, however, and will state that, other circumstances being equal, parularly in the matter of fair dealing, Earl would be entitled to the contracts on this and some other routes so far as the fact of getting them established would give that right for the second time—he did get all the benefits of the first contracts and at high rates. But it is as impossible for him to do business of this kind without attempting a steal (and making a blundering failure of it) as for him to take rank as an honest man among those who know him best. Not satisfied with the prospects of a legitimate contract he, obviously by misrepresentations, got the Department to establish the Columbus, Piper's Ranch (Oasis P. O.), Lida and Gold Mountain route, one half of the distance of which, viz.: from Oasis to Gold Mountain, being on identically the same route as that from this place. He also secured the contract on that route, and of course could afford to take this, by reason of the double pay on that portion, at pretty low figures, provided the Blackmore straw bid couldn't be made to work. But it probably would have worked, this straw bid, all well enough but for two reasons. The first was that about that time Congressman Luttrell had entered upon a crusade against the mail contract swindles, in an effort to have laws passed rendering swindles a little less possible and outrageous. Of course he called down on himself the bitterest animosity not only of the standing mail contract swindlers and their backers, but likewise that of every other thieving ring and newspaper that heard of it, no matter in what particular line of public thieving they might be interested. The consequence was that Luttrell failed in the passage of the law, but succeeded in putting the Postmaster-General on the qui vive, thereby checking some of the evils. But it was in the knowledge of his inability under existing laws to check it entirely, that induced Cresswell to resign his office; at least it was so asserted at the time; It did not matter how well, morally, he might be satisfied that any contract bids were obvious swindles the law gave him no power to upset them, so, in one sense, he was forced to become a party or resign.

But the principal cause of Josiah's failure in this instance was the simple fact that Clark took some business, legitimate precautions, such as could not be ignored by the Department if proper bonds were not filed in the lower bid.

Finding at the last moment that the Blackmore bonds must be filed or lose the contract, Josiah fixed up the bonds here not only for that but for some six other routes, including that of Darrah's in Arizona, and now claims that they were forwarded all together and in ample time to reach Washington before the expiration of the limited time, to wit: at 12 M. on the 1st of June. But they didn't get there till the 5th, so that Darrah, who had in good faith stocked the routes in which he was interested is financially a ruined man by reason of this "careless" act of Josiah's. It should be understood that the bonds were not forwarded through the regular channel, the mail, as is usual in such cases, but through Wells, Fargo & Co., which mode was deemed the speediest and safest. But it didn't prove so this time, and hence other bidders got these several routes.

But Josiah now proposes to get even some way. He will apply to Houghton, on whom he counts in everything, for a relief bill next Congress. This is merely a presumption of our own. But on another authority it is asserted he will try to make it even by having that portion of the route from Piper's to Gold Mountain, belonging to Clark's line, discontinued, and the service awarded to the later creation, the Columbus route. But in the meantime he demands restitution from the United States for his own negligence, and thus having a tangible cause of complaint he is very happy.

—An exchange asks: "Where does the cotton go?" We know where a good deal of it goes, but don't like to tell.

An Adroit Thief.

[From The Borax Miner, August 29]

About seven weeks ago a young man named Robinson Smith Irving, better known as Bob Irving, was employed in the Pioneer Hotel to assist Mr. Carrigan in conducting the business of the house during the absence of Mr. David Holland, who is sojourning at the Bartlett Spring, in California, for the purpose of recruiting his health. Since Mr. Holland left Carrigan has been for a large part of the time confined to his bed with rheumatism in his feet, and on Monday last went out to Aurora, thus leaving Irving in full charge of the business. Last evening on pretense of being overworked and sleepy, he asked Dick Tone to take charge of the house for the night, to give him a chance for rest. He then went to Tone's cabin, where he had previously lived, having been supported by Tone up to the time he got work at the hotel; but instead of going to sleep, he "went through" the cabin, taking Tone's blankets and a coat and vest, and a canteen belonging to John Turner. From the hotel, so far as we now know, he took $100 in money and two Colt's pistols. He borrowed $10 from E. D. Barker, $15 from Robert Franklin, the cook at the hotel, and drew $60 from J. S. Jameson, which has not been accounted for, and this morning he has gone from our gaze. There is a suspicion gaining currency this morning that this fellow Irving has had something to do with the recent bullion robbery—he having become perfectly familiar with the premises while living at Tone's cabin. Another circumstance which gives color to this suspicion is this: About two months since a comrade of Irving, named Frank French, who, like Irving is a deserter from Camp Independence, Inyo county, California, left Columbus for Teel's Marsh to work at the Smith borax works. Some two weeks since French left Teel's Marsh, and was not again heard from either there or in Columbus until last night he was seen here, and this morning he too is gone. Irving was born at Newcastle on Tyne, England, and is about thirty years of age; sandy complexion; light hair and blue eyes; moustache and side whiskers; about five feet six inches in hight; pleasing address, with slight English accent. Frank French, his companion, is a very slight built man; about five feet five or six inches high, has extremely light complexion and and almost white eyes. Their trail was struck by an Indian, and Dick Tone, armed with special authority for the occasion, started in pursuit. Up to the hour of going to press, however, nothing further had been heard from this pair of rascals.

Pacific Coast Directory.

Henry G. Langley is preparing his seventh issue of the Pacific Coast Directory for immediate publication. This edition will be the most complete of any yet produced. It will contain the names, business and address of over fifty thousand merchants, manufacturers and professional men in the States of California, Oregon and Nevada, and the Territories of Washington, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Arizona and Alaska and British Columbia, with a gazetteer of the counties, cities and towns in the above named States and Territories; the names of the officers governing the same, Federal, State and Municipal, and the returns of the United States of 1870 referring therto; also, lists, with appropriate references, of the commercial, agricultural, manufacturing, mining, railroad, telegraph, banking and insurance companies in operation at the present time in the above States and Territories; to which will be added an exhibit of the resources of each State and Territory of the Pacific Coast, and such other items of information as will render the work a valuable and reliable medium of reference, and one of quite as much value to Inyo business men as any others. A fair share of space will be devoted to this county. The price of the book is only $5 coin Address, Henry G Langley, 612 Clay street, San Francisco.

NOTICE.

THE DELINQUENT LISTS OF THE VARIOUS Counties of the State, for the Twenty-Fourth and Twenty Fifth Fiscal years (1872-3—1873-4) are now in my hands for collection. Many persons are delinquent for small sums on personal property, and are urged to examine the rolls in the hands of the Tax Collectors of their respective counties and to make immediate payment. The law is imperative, that the payment of the State Tax for these years must be enforced, and unless voluntary payments are made at once, heavy costs will be incurred by the delinquents.

Dead on the Desert.

From Mr. Eph Harrington we have the following in relation to an unknown dead man found last week by the station keepers at Indian wells. The body was lying in the desert less than two miles from the station, the hat drawn over the eyes as if to shield them from the sun or moon; on the arm was a blood stained bridle, and near by was a canteen and revolver; in the pockets were found $30 in coin, and an account book but containing no name or means of identification other than some entries relating to Benton, Mono county, from which it was inferred he had lately resided in that place. He had on a pair of duck pants, patched with blue drilling. He was slightly gray about the temples, and appeared to have been a medium sized, rather slender man; his teeth were very white, even and perfect. The body was too much decomposed to determine whether he had died from violence or from lack of food or water, but it was deemed very probable that it was from the latter cause, and while in pursuit of his horse that had likely got away from him out on the road to the Mohave. Some two weeks previously a man, supposed to be this one, came out from Panamint and stopped at El Paso. He was riding a small bay horse; said he was going to cross the desert to the Mohave, but did not know the road. When advised by no means to try it knowing nothing of the watering places, he talked rather flighty, among other things, saying he could make it but if he found he could not he would shoot his horse and then himself. It is likely this and the dead man are identical, and that being crazed, he did shoot his horse and possibly himself.

Cutting Affray at Big Pine.

An affray occurred last Sunday at Big Pine in the course of which Tom Callahan cut the other party, P. Sheridan, in the neck and body with his sheath-knife, inflicting wounds likely to prove fatal. One of these cuts almost entirely severed the wind-pipe; the other was a severe, though perhaps not dangerous gash in the side or ribs. Dr. Middleton, of Bishop, and Dr. White, of the Post, were both sent for as soon as possible. Dr. Middleton reached the wounded man first, and proceeded at once to stitch the wounds, which operation he had about completed by the time Dr. White arrived. But notwithstanding the skillful attention from the two physicians it is scarcely possible for the unfortunate man to recover. The affray was the result of a "josh" about some trivial matter of no importance to either of itself, and, what is more singular still, whisky had nothing whatever to do with it. Both parties are rated as very respectable and peaceable men. At Sheridan's desire Callahan was not arrested, nor will not be prosecuted if his desire is complied with. We have not heard which was the aggressor.

Grand Preparations.

The preparations for the Mexican celebration at Lone Pine on the 16th indicate that this will be the grandest affair of all. A large new hall has been built directly in town, a Mexican theatrical troupe has been organized, which, with Wilton and the Panorama and the balls, promise entertainment enough for the nights, while processions, speech-making with (we believe) a bull fight or two and riding and similar operations will do as much for the days. It is understood that all the Mexicans in Cerro Gordo and elsewhere in the county will take stock in the celebration at Lone Pine, and no doubt with them and all other nationalities the attendance there will be very large.

Conference Matters.

Rev. M. W. Pratt writes us briefly from Reno, Sept. 7, to the effect that Rev. Geo. Jennings will take charge of this work in Mr. Pratt's place. He does not state where his own charge will be. He expresses gratitude to his friends for their kind interest in his behalf and expressed desire for his return, regreting that, in regard to the latter it has been otherwise ordered. Mr. Pratt is an earnest and zealous worker in the cause of religion; perhaps over zealous in some respects, but whereever he may be ordered he has the best wishes of all those of the Owens river people who know him best. His address for a time, at least, will be Janesville, Lassen Co., Cal.,

The Wilton Troupe.

This troupe has now gone up the country probably as far as Benton, playing en route at Big Pine and Bishop Creek, but intending to return and give a number of performances at Lone Pine during the Mexican and Chilean celebrations, beginning on the 16th. Of all the plays presented by them in this place the most effective and best best rendered was "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," put on last Monday night. We are told by those were present it was a most telling piece throughout. Mrs. Wilton acquitted herself particularly well.

Stages to Lida Mountain.

By advertisemen elsewhere it will be seen that there is now a regular line of stages between the above mentioned camps and this place. In fact there has been stages running there heretofore, but on what days, where from and how nobody knew. Mr. Clark runs a number one four-horse Concord wagon, and the accommodations that way and at stations are fully equal to those of any other line in this region.

Among the Ranchers and a Suggestion or Two.

The other day we took a brief run among the farms about Fish Springs, and have to report the crops generally as unusually promising. The corn on T. J. Goodale's place looked as fine as it ever does on the Mississippi bottoms, and will, barring early frosts, yield very nearly as well. T. J. thinks he has the prize crop and farm of the valley, and his claims certainly appear to be well founded so far as our knowledge extends. Westerville, and others in the same vicinity, also have very promising crops of corn, for which the soil there is better adapted than in any other locality we have seen. Goodale is seeding considerable ground to alfalfa, which yields most wonderfully. He will have quite a quantity of the seed for sale as soon as it is threshed out. Alfalfa, with stock to eat it, must certainly soon prove the most profitable and the safest crop that can be raised in this valley and if farmers will permit us to advise they will give it their fullest attention. Whatever the effects of a railroad upon the usual staple crops, it can never disastrously effect stock raising, which can only be successfully carried on through such crops as alfalfa. And while in this strain we would earnestly advise the Grangers all through the valley to undertake some general plan to exterminate the despicable cockle-burr, which is springing up everywhere—in fields, gardens, along the roadside and every other place. A little timely action with this object in view can certainly prevent this scourge from completely overrunning the valley. It will take less work to destroy the growing burrs than to clear them the rest of the season from the manes and tails of horses and hair and wool of other animals, certain to be loaded with the ripened nuisance. And another good work the Grangers can inaugurate and carry out better than the general public, though with the assistance of the latter, is a general war of extermination against hawks. The destruction of such birds of prey will not only effect a vast saving in domestic fowls, in the aggregate amounting to thousands of dollars in value every year, but by thus protecting the small birds orchards, vines and fields are, through their aid, also protected against destroying insects of all kinds. The little birds nip a peach or a berry now and then it is true, but if it was not for their protecting care as regards insects which infest and destroy trees and vines, it would be bnt a year or two when there would be no peach or berry for anything to nip, not even the frost. Let each Grange district the territory under the jurisdiction of its members, appoint an officer for each to carry out the plan, and by asking the co-operation of all within it, go for the cockle-burrs. While this is being done, offer a premium for each hawk killed in the county, first asking the public generally to contribute to the fund for the premium. It won't take very many dollars in this way to accomplish a work of very much more value than is generally supposed. If the Grangers can kill off such "middlemen" as cockle-burs and hawks, they have done a good thing, whether the other kind of middlemen do or do not receive any attention.

Mining News.

Mr. Darrah has just returned from a visit to Sylvania and Pine Mountain. The Marrotte Bros. and Kincaid, in Sylvania, expect to fire up their little furnaces for a brief run the coming week. No new developments of importance have been made in that camp, yet the general outlook is more encouraging than ever, as regards the value and ease of working the ores. Mr. Darrah's visit was in the interest of capital ready to put a furnace in operation at once, provided satisfactory terms could be arranged with the owners of the mines to supply ore for a fixed time or mines be bonded that the company could have long enough to thoroughly prospect. If reasonable expectations are realized, and large quantities of the ores are developed, which can only be done by considerable expenditure of money, Sylvania would at once loom up as one of the very best mining camps in this whole country. There are no ores any easier of reduction or richer, or any camp with better natural facilities generally. The only question is as to the extent of the bodies of the ore. We are truly sorry that Mr. Darrah failed in perfecting the proposed arrangements, for it would undoubtedly have resulted immensely to the general advantage of this entire section if he could have inaugurated the work he proposed. We consider him a throughgoing, reliable gentleman and competent furnace man, so, with the capital he commands, but a few months would have been required to have satisfactorily determined the future status of the camp. But, as before stated, nothing could be done, as the mine owners have the most implicit faith in the great value of their prospects, and want to work them up to a consummation without any third party contingencies. At Pine Mountain about the same condition of affairs exist. Moffatt & Co. are running three shifts constantly on their tunnel, but do not expect to strike the ledge for some weeks yet. Albert & Berry are taking out quantities of splendid ore, and have a mine considered worth not less than $30,000.

Grand Panorama.

We are promised quite a treat next Monday evening in the shape of a grand panorama. Among other interesting views are 24 of the Modoc war, 32 of the Franco-Prussian war, mostly relating to the siege of Paris, and 24 views of the world-renowned Yosemite Valley, besides many miscellaneous pictures. A good lecturer will explain each as it is presented, and altogether we are inclined to think that this exhibition will be found to be very entertaining and instructive to all. A social dance will follow.

Will Recover.

Some weeks since one Kirby shot a man named Norton out at Panamint fatally, as was then supposed, but as we now learn he is likely to recover. The particulars of the shooting, which we now learn for the first time, are about as follows: Kirby and Norton got into a dispute concerning a game of cards and Kirby slapped Norton's face, drawing his revolver at the same time. As soon as he could Norton, who is in no sense a bully or desperado, went and armed himself and returned to the saloon where Kirby was, quietly seating himself in a corner to await developments. As soon as Kirby became aware of this fact he drew his pistol and fired, inflicting the wound with which Norton has since been laid up. Wounded as he was, Norton returned the fire, advancing on Kirby, who run, as such "roosters" always do when they smell real danger. Unfortunately, however, Norton missed him. Taking refuge in a tent, he waited for Norton to stagger close enough for him to shoot, and raising up the edge of the tent he was drawing a bead point blank on the bleeding man when Recorder Smith, who saw his stealthy movement, drew his own revolver and ordered Kirby to drop his pistol or he would kill him in an instant. Kirby dropped it and before any one was aware of the fact cut the camp. This Kirby was formerly a chum of Morgan Courtney of Fish Springs notoriety, and who a few months since got his deserts out at Pioche. Kirby is a bad man, and likes to boast of the fact that he is a "little rooster, and if you don't believe it just draw and toe a line."

School Closed.

The Irving (Bishop Creek) district school, C. Wainwright teacher, closed a five months' term on the 4th instant. The closing examination was largely attended by parents and others, all being much pleased at the manifest progress made by the pupils under Mr. Wainwright,s teaching. Of the prizes awarded the first, a nice cage with two birds, was awarded to Nettie Smith; second prizes, two finely bound books of poems, one each to Rhoda Smith and Katie Mallory; third, Milton's poems in gilt, to Jennie Smith, and fourth, a story book to Lizzie Vickers

On the Move.

Harris & Waltz loaded up A. B. Kitchen's team with their tools and traps and started this morning for Panamint, where they propose to open a shoemaker's shop, and, from all accounts, with very fair prospects. This leaves our town without any zapatero.... Al Briggs was here during the week in connection with his toll road enterprise. The importance of that road to this portion of the county is becoming more and more manifest, and it is much to be hoped it will be put through; but our business men will have to assist to some extent if it is, and this the most of them are willing to do.

Dead.

P. Sheridan, of whose wounding mention is made elsewhere, died on Wednesday. He was terribly gashed up, much more so than we were at first led to believe. His assailant, Callahan, was put under arrest. District Attorney Snelling and V. A. Gregg, the latter as counsel for defense, went up to Big Pine to see to the examination before Justice Campbell, We have not heard the result. This is the second man on whom Callahan has used his knife, it appears, the other some months ago in Nevada.

Panamint.

From a private letter to a friend here we learn that the town of Panamint is "looming up" raprdly. Lots are in great demand, selling at good prices; in one instance $1,000 was paid for a choice one. There is one store, five saloons and a butcher shop now in full blast. People are coming in by the dozens each day. Henry Jones was expected to return there in a few days to inaugurate some extensive works for his company.

From the Colorado.

We are pleased to see "Eph" Harington among us again. He has just returned from the Colorado River Indian Reservation, where he has completed some extensive contracts for Agent Tonner, about whom we have some facts of interest which we shall endeavor to publish next week, since so much is being said about Tonner. Mr. Harrington proposes to become an honest farmer down at Los Angeles, where he has bought a ranch.

Frosty.

The nights are getting quite winterish, and it is feared a considerable portion of the crops will suffer material injury from frost. Some damage in that way was done Sunday night last.

Takes the Prize.

We award the first prize to D. B. Curtis, Esq., for the biggest and best watermelon we have seen this season; weight, 33 pounds.

Petroleum in Ventura County.

The production of petroleum in Ventura county promises to become, at no distant day, one of the most important industries of that county. New and important discoveries are being made from time to time, and capitalists in San Francisco and other places are organizing for the development of the various oil springs. A few weeks ago some new springs were discovered in the northeastern part of the county, on a branch of the Sespe, about twenty miles from the coast. They are situated on a branch of a gulch, and within a distance of three-quarters of a mile there are at least one hundred flowing wells, from which the oil flows in such immense quantities that it stands in pools in the gulch from one to three feet deep. It is estimated that there are now at least 150 barrels of good oil in the gulch which could be saved without any trouble. By opening the springs it is believed their capacity could be increased to 100 barrels per day. They have been taken up by a party of gentlemen from San Francisco, who will commence operations at once. —[Santa Barbara Index, August 27.

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of

Redwood,

the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF SALE.

WHEREAS, UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF a decree or judgment of foreclosure rendered by the District Court of the 16th Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, on the Ninth day of March, A. D. 1874, in a certain cause therein pending wherein Frank Broder was Plaintiff and E. Chaquette was Defendant, it was among other things ordered, adjudged and decreed that sale should be made by the Sheriff of Inyo County in the manner prescribed by law for the sale of real estate, of all and singular the property therein described; that is to say, all that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit: Lots 1 and 2 in fractional northwest quarter of section number Five (5), township number Thirteen (13), Range Forty-five East, Base and Meridian of Mount Diablo, or so much thereof as might be necessary to pay the sum of Fifteen Hundred and Fifteen 45-100 ($1,515 45-100) dollars in United States Gold Coin, besides interest and costs and expenses of sale, of which decree a copy duly certified under the seal of said Court has been delivered to me. Now, therefore, I hereby give notice that on MONDAY, THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D. 1874, at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of the Court House door, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, State of California, I will sell the said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash in United States Gold Coin.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

A String of Lies.

The subjoined is a specimen of fine writing indulged in by some of the contributors to The Overland Monthly. This article has been going the rounds for some months, and, coming from such authority as The Overland, is no doubt accepted as gospel truth. Now, on the authority of dozens of our friends, well acquainted with the "Gehenna" in all its length and breadth, we assert that this description of Death Valley contains scarcely a word of truth in it from one end to the other It is a matter of daily occurrence for both men and animals to cross it. All the beef cattle consumed in Panamint are brought across it, as over any other barren stretch of fifteen or twenty miles of desert. The whole story of its terrors are magnified by this writer to such a degree that the whole thing amounts simply to one huge, absurd lie. "Birds do not fly over it." "Animals do not enter it." "Wagon-tires unrusted; gun barrels bright, untarnished." We wonder if The Overland obtains its "facts" from Capt. James Hobbs? Guess not, though, for Hobbs does get in a semblance of truth now and then, which is more than can be said for The Overland in such stuff as this:

In the northwest corner of San Bernardino county, lying partly also in Inyo county, and by the newly surveyed line partly also in the State of Nevada, is a region paralled by few other spots on this earth. We say the world is instinct with life. Here, if the phraseology may be pardoned, is a place instinct with death. A huge basin, whose rim is the ancient hills, stricken with the barrenness of desolation; whose bosom the blasted waste of the desert—treeless, shrubless and waterless, save a few bitter pools like the lye of potash water; surrounded by mountains that tower thousands of feet above the sea-level, itself lying 300 feet below the sea. It is a very "Gehenna"—a place of death and bones. Birds do not fly over it. Animals do not enter it. Vegetation cannot exist in it. The broad sands absorb the heat, the bare mountains reflect it, the unclouded sun daily adds to it. Ninety degrees in the shade (artificial shade, there is no other) means Winter; 130° and 140° is Summer.

The hot air grows hotter, wavers, trembles with heat, until nature, goaded to madness can endure no more; and then the burning blast rouses itself—rouses in its might—rouses as an angry beast, and with a hoarse, ominous whisper, sweeps mile after mile, on, ever on,—over the broad reach of the desert, bearing in its black, whirling bosom—black as the midnight—dust and death Sometimes a murky cloud gathers upon the mountains above; then there is a rush—a warning sigh of the winds—low rumbling in the air; the hills quiver, the earth trembles, and a torrent, half water and half mud, bounds from the hills, leaps into the desert plowing chasms like river beds in the loose sand. The clouds scatter, the sun comes again—the eternal thirst of the desert is not quenched. The raging river is only a dream.

In the year 1849 a party of emigrants entered the basin. Day after day they toiled on thirsting, dying The pitiless mountains hemmed them in; no escape. One by one they dropped and died. A few, abandoning everything, scaled the mountains and escaped. The others lie as they fell, dried to mummies—no birds even to devour their flesh, no beasts to prey upon them. Wagon-tires unrusted, gun-barrels bright, untarnished. Such is the place. Mile after mile silence reigns; silence and—death.

Mrs. Tilton's Story.

[From The New York Tribune.]

"I understood very well," said she, "that I was not to have the attention that many wives have. His talent and genius must not be narrowed down to myself." She was nothing in her own eyes but a commonplace little woman, and it was enough if a stray beam of the glory which radiated from her hero's presence fell across the humble figure following reverently behind him. If he left her unnoticed while he was making fame, and filling his little world with beautiful phrases, she accepted her lowly lot in meek contentment. If he bade her go with him into public places she obeyed without a word, and stood aloof in the midst of the throng, that she might not disgrace him with her simple manners and her homely speech. To watch her lord and master shining in the company of brilliant talkers, and wits, and essayists, and poets, was happiness enough for her. To make a luxurious and refined home for this gifted being and his grand friends she was willing to go cold and hungry. Whatever may have been her faults, it easy to see that she had a tender heart and a sympathetic nature. How many sad hours must there have been as she looked back to those early days when the young reporter knew no woman more accomplished than his girlish wife, no pleasure more intoxicating than her society, no glory greater than to win her love. But she never complained that he gradually forgot his quiet little worshipper while he was busy setting the world to rights, and "making a name for himself." She never blamed him because he told her to keep away from him when his fine company came, or scolded about the uncongenial atmosphere of home, where there was nobody but a simple wife and children to minister to his ambitious spirit. This was no common man. It was a creature whose "talent and genius" must not be "narrowed down" to the ordinary domestic duties, a being destined for the pride of the lyceum and the admiration of advanced tea-tables, and privileged in consequence to be moody, cruel and dissatisfied at home.

Poor woman, how she nursed his selfishness and vanity! Little by little he got farther and farther away from her. He needed literary companionship, and she was not literary. He yearned for the society of bold thinkers, and radical reformers of every eccentric variety, and she was only an old-fashioned body who cared more for the fireside than the crowded hall, and wanted somebody to love her. Loud voiced women came to confront her at her own table. Blatant prophetess made her parlors hideous. The man who had taken her for better or for worse began to discuss her failings and to question her honor in the company of salacious social revolutionists. Anybody might have foreseen the end. The hero stalked through two cities, exhibiting his sores, and praying the world to behold how he was dishonored, while the wife ran heart-broken to the cemetery and threw herself upon the graves of her children.

To learn the lesson of this domestic history it is needless to know who has sinned or how much has been forgiven. The first fault is plain enough. There is no such thing as social prosperity and happiness which does not rest upon the purity and union of the family. What shallow charlatans are those who seek to raise the condition of women by crushing their own wives, while they turn neat phrases in the newspapers and round sonorous periods on the platform. What poor fools are the giddy orators and essayists who look for the golden age of a renovated society, while they waste their domestic fortunes and flout the domestic duties that lie at their very hand.

Punctuality at Death.

Mr. Higgins was a very punctual man in all his transactions through life. He amassed a large fortune by untiring industry and punctuality, and at the advanced age of ninety years was resting quietly upon his bed waiting calmly to be called away. He had deliberately made almost every arrangement for his decease and burial. His pulse grew fainter and the light of his life seemed just flickering in the socket, when one of his sons observed:

"Father, you will live but a day or two, is it not well to name your bearers?"

"To be sure, my son," said the dying man, "it is well thought of and I will do it now."

He gave a list of six, the usual number, and sank back exhausted upon his pillow. A gleam of thought passed over his withered face like a ray of light and he rallied once more.

"My son, read me that list. Is the name of Mr. Wiggins there?"

"It is, father."

"Then strike it off!" said he emphatically, "for he was never punctual, was never anywhere in season, and he might hinder the procession a whole hour."

—The total amount of pig iron manufactured in the United States in 1872 was 2,854,558 tons; in 1873 the amount rose to 2,868,278 tons.

A Monster Gun.

The manufacture of the eighty-one ton gun at the Royal Gun Factories in the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, is slowly progressing, and every step in its growth is watched with considerable interest. The largest of its coils except one was welded under the great steam-hammer recently, and afforded a very interesting sight to a large number of spectators. This coil weighs nearly twenty-six tons, but it was manipulated with the greatest ease by the expert forgemen of the Royal Gun Factories, although it was larger by five tons than any coil that has ever been made. Another, nearly double the size, will, however, have to be prepared for the same gun, and some special machinery is being constructed for its manufacture. The progress of the gun has, in like manner, necessitated alterations of the plans in most of the work-shops of the department. The lathe in which the steel tube is being bored has had its head carried about ten feet through the wall into the next shop, being so much longer than any tube which has previously passed through the boring mills. Its length is nearly twenty-five feet, and its weight about sixteen tons. At the first boring a rough cut of eight inches is to be taken out, the calibre being enlarged by subsequent cuts of eleven, thirteen and fourteen inches.

—It is said that the importation of absinthe has largely increased during the past few years.

Right of Pre-Emptors to File More than Once.

Hon. S. S. Burdett, Commissioner of the General Land Office, addressed the Register and Receiver at Humboldt, California, as follows, on June 29, 1874:

Gentlemen—Referring to the Register's letter of May 29, 1874, in reference to the case of Thomas J. Whitlow, I have to say that by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States at the December term of 1871, in the case of Johnson vs. Townsley (13 Wallace, page 72), the fourth section of the act of March 3, 1843, concerning two declaratory statements by the same pre-emptor, is confined to pre-emptions upon land subject to private entry.

It is therefore held by this office: 1st. That the pre-emption law does not restrict a pre-emptor as to the number of filings he may make upon unoffered land prior to his perfecting a pre-emption claim. 2d. A pre-emptor may abandon a filing upon one tract and make a subsequent filing upon another tract, or he may make the said second filing without abandoning the former. 3d. A pre-emptor exhausts his pre-emption privilege by proving up and making entry even of the smallest legal subdivision, after which he is not entitled to file.

The Black Hills.

Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan has issued orders to Brig.Gen. A. H. Terry directing him to prevent the entrance of explorers and prospectors into the Black Hills country, and ordering him to use therefor all the force at his command. Gen. Sheridan orders that in case the companies organizing at Sioux City and Yankton trespass on the Sioux Indian Reservation that their wagons are to be burned, the outfit destroyed and the leaders arrested, and if they succeed in reaching the interior they are to be pursued by a force of cavalry.

Progressing.

A well-equipped surveying party of the Southern Pacific Railroad left here on Tuesday for the purpose of laying out the route of the road from this point to San Fernando. It seems now more than ever probable that work will be actively pushed forward until connection with Los Angeles is made. Grading on the line of the railroad in the direction of Tehechepi Pass is still progressing. The advance corps of laborers is now said to be in the vicinity of Jesse Stark's ranch.—[Bakersfield Courier, Sept. 5.

Destroyed by Fire.

The greater part of the town of Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras county, was destroyed by fire on the 5th instant. The estimated loss of property is given at $173,000. This is another sad misfortune to that old and once prosperous town, it having passed through the same visitation on two or three occasions before since its first settlement by white people in the early days of gold hunting.

Good-bye Poland.

A dispatch from Rutland conveys the news that Poland, the Press-gag Congressman, publishes his withdrawal from the field as a candidate for re-election to Congress. Even-handed justice has commended the ingredients of Poland's poisoned chalice to his own lips. May all back-pay grabbers, Credit Mobelier whitewashers, Presidential salary augmenters and public press muzzlers come to a similar fate.

Another Proposition.

The Santa Barbara Index is advocating the building of a railroad from that place to Bakersfield. A number of prominent citizens have taken hold of the matter, and the project is being thoroughly discussed. It looks as though something would be done. The Index thinks this is the most important enterprise before the people of Santa Barbara.

For Life.

Geiger, one of the murderers of Mrs. Strong, case known as the "Mendocino murder," has been sentenced to prison for life—instead of which he ought to have been hung, if hanging is ever indulged in. Carpenter, the other party concerned with him, was acquitted for reasons best known to the jury.

Vasquez Case.

The trial of Tiburcio Vasquez upon three indictments for murder has been postponed until January 5th, to allow the bandit an opportunity to produce a number of witnesses who he thinks will exonerate him from all complicity in the Tres Pinos tragedies.

Wholesale Murderer.

The bodies of five murdered miners traveling from Utah, have been found in the mountains of Colorado, and a man named Packer, their murderer, has been arrested.

—A German paper says that not a Frenchman is now to be seen at the German watering places.

THE THIRD TERM OGRE.

The Sacramento Union is of the opinion that the third-term proposition in favor of Grant is so far a fixed fact that it cannot longer be safely ignored. In counting up the chances of Grant's success, should he come out for a third-term, The Union figures up something like a million of votes. First in the list of those certainly, in its opinion, bound to his support, comes the influence of the army officers. Second, the postmasters, counted by tens of thousands. Third, the customs and internal revenue brigade, making other tens of thousands. Fourth, the naval employes of the different yards and stations. Fifth, the great army of Government contractors, who command some hundreds of thousands of votes. After these Government parasites, the next most available force in favor of a third term and life term of the Presidency, or absolute dictatorship, is found in the South—disappointed and sore-headed rebels like Toombs, disgusted with the the Republic that conquered them, and, wishing to destroy it in revenge, will do anything that will tend to imperialism. After them come the jobbing railway corporations and swindling grabbers of all kinds, all of which count on the President as their reliable friend, which, in their vocabulary, means fence. All these and many more, such as back-pay stealers, Mobilier, Finance and press-gag brigades and their hangers on are anxious for a third-term—a Tiberius or Augustus Grant to lend them an imperial hand of protection while they rob the people, the riff raff, the plebians.

The influence of the army and navy officers and postmasters cannot be counted as a unit in favor of a third term by any means. The personal gain to themselves will rarely be looked upon as sufficient to stultify their better judgment. The ring thieves and grabbers of all sorts are always for the best market and, no better offering, may be counted to a man as third-termers, and the same remark will likely apply to contractors and all the remaining lists. But against them we have the better sense of all true-hearted patriots regardless of party claims or former prejudices, favorable to Grant both as a military officer and President for two terms, which will oppose this movement with a bitterness that would flame into revolution rather than permit its success. These, constituting by far the larger portion of the American people, look upon a third term of Grant or any other man as an ogre in fact, and one that must be destroyed at every hazard. The people are not yet tired of the republic, and do not propose to let Grant, should he be fool enough to undertake it, carry out this certain method for its destruction. This is the sentiment expressed by many who, we know, up to the inception of this third term movement, have been Grant's warm friends and supporters. But whatever their faith in him and admiration for him heretofore, they do not propose to countenance him for one instant as a proper person for our next President. They look upon his very candidacy, however remote his chances for election may appear to be, as the first note in the death-knell of the Republic. Should he permit his name to be used as a candidate for a third term, against all precedent, against all necessity, the patriotic and sensible portion of the people will see in it evidence enough that he is the tool of the army of harpies who surround him, and as such will oppose him with might and main. The American people have not yet so degenerated that but one man and one only among its millions can be found possessing the necessary qualifications to preside over the country's destinies.

Mismanagement.

The execrable mismanagement of the Pioneers' excursion yesterday was a disgrace to the Society and to the city of San Francisco. With commendable generosity the Pacific Mail Company had furnished the fine steamship Great Republic, free of charge, together with refreshments for the excursionists. The steamer was calculated to accommodate not more than 1,300 persons, and the Pioneers' committee knew of the limit. Their duty was plain enough. They should have issued tickets to every member of the interior Societies and then distributed the remainder among their own members. Not a single ticket over the specified number should have been issued. That any tickets should have been sold for the occasion is the most disgracing feature of all.—[S. F. Chronicle.

The Difference.

Mr. Jacobs, of Panamint, who was here last week, informs us that the distance between that place and Los Angeles is 225 miles, and Bakersfield 155 miles with a better road. This fact has determined him to have all his supplies sent by this route, and he thinks his example will soon be followed by everyone else.—[Bakersfield Courier.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: The last two weeks passed in England I devoted exclusively to visiting various places in Wales especially noted for their beautiful and romantic scenery—ruins of old castles and abbeys, as well as the flourishing towns of Swansea, Cardiff, Newport and Camarthen. I was kindly shown over the principal smelting works of copper, iron and silver, and the different processes explained while being conducted from one department to the other. The furnaces extend for miles along the sea-coast, and thousands of tall chimneys continually emit thick clouds of black smoke, impregnating the very atmosphere with a mineral odor. Yet these localities are considered very healthy, statistics proving that sickness is less prevalent here than even in the agricultural district. Bidding adieu to the most charming portion of England, a few hours' ride took me to Liverpool, where I embarked on the splendid ocean steamer Egypt, and after a pleasant run of twelve days again landed on American soil.

Since my arrival here I have, in company with my kind friend Morris Phillips, Esq., the genial and accomplished editor of The New York Home Journal (who, by the by, was taking his Summer vacation) visited Saratoga, Long Branch and the various places of interest on the Hudson river. The favorite resort appears to be Long Branch, principally, I presume, on account of its fine and extensive beach, where may be seen daily hundreds of either sex, dressed in the most ludicrous of bathing costumes, disporting themselves in Neptune's lap. Mr. Johnson, champion swimmer of the world, brought over from England by Prof. Schumann, has just won the three-mile aquatic race and the accompanying purse of $2,500. Mr. Johnson is engaged here for the season to teach the art of swimming, and keep a sharp look out for those who may need help in the foaming, boiling surf, where sad accidents occasionally occur. Only a few days ago the leader of Schilling's orchestra, a very promising young man, while bathing, was seized with a cramp, and seen to go down. Johnson was immediately notified, but was unfortunately directed to the wrong place, where another bather, but excellent swimmer was cutting up antics in the sea, and who, from a distance, appeared to be struggling in the water. Before the error was discovered, Mr. Schilling, who only a few moments previously was revelling in youth and exuberant health, was brought ashore stark, stiff, dead.

I stopped at the Ocean House, kept by the Lelands. This, the largest hotel at Long Branch, with a frontage of seven hundred feet, magnificent dining and ball-room, splendid apartments, single or en suite, excellent table and attentive waiters, is the one most largely patronized, its capacity for accommodating the wants of eight hundred pleasure-seeking individuals being often taxed to its utmost limit. Yet, withal, the expense of running such a hotel for the brief fashionable eight-week season is so enormous that as a rule it don't pay. The beach for miles is studded with fine hotels and elegant private villas, notable among the latter being that of President Grant. Fast teams, with elegantly dressed occupants taking their fashionable afternoon drive, help to make the scene brilliant and gay.

This morning (having returned to the city) I went over to Blackwell's Island and visited the prison, lunatic asylum, and other charitable and correctional institutions. At one of which I had pointed out to me "Boss" Tweed, who was acting in the menial capacity of steward arrayed in the convict's garb. A large amount of sympathy for the fallen chief is displayed, because, say the New Yorkers, "he has been made the scapegoat of a whole gang of official thieves, every one of whom was equally as criminal, but have been allowed to escape." The prevalent opinion that Tweed will not serve out one-third of his sentence is likely to be verified if there is any truth in the old adage that "coming events cast their shadows before."

The Beecher-Tilton scandal still occupies a large portion of the daily press, and though the Plymouth Church committee, appointed to investigate the charges against Beecher, have pronounced him innocent as a lamb the verdict is not easily swallowed by a large portion of the community.

I have peeped in at the principal theaters, and find that, on account of the weather, which though fine is so very warm, they are not well patronized. Central Park is New York's principal attraction, and thither rush the city's thousands to enjoy its pretty bits of scenery of wooded hills, grassy lawns and sparkling lakes. Here for a couple of green dollars you can "do" the drives in a handsome carriage with your family (if you happily possess one), or romantic lovers can be rowed around the lakes, and whisper soft nonsense in each others ears for the insignificant price of ten cents each. Swings, goat carriages and indigestible cake for the little ones, are here in abundance, as likewise for those of maturer age are found, for a certain amount of stamps, ice-cream, lager-beer and the more solid refreshments. On Wednesday and Saturday afternoons Dodsworth's band of sixty pieces discourse ravishing music, eagerly listened to by crowds of elegantly dressed people, who throng around the pretty, raised, covered stand. Other parks on a smaller scale, in the very heart of the city, possess a very refreshing appearance, and it speaks well for the government, that while commerce is so rapidly spreading out its giant arms over this vast metropolis, a few acres here and there are still reserved for the pleasure and recreation of its overworked people.

SAGEBRUSHER.

Moulton's Last Story.

The New York Herald summarizes Moulton's last statement as follows:

First. He shows that he did render efficient counsel and aid to Beecher after the publication of the Bacon letter, and avers in this respect that Beecher told a willful falsehood.

Second. That he is not a blackmailer, and that Beecher was a blackmailer in that he availed himself of the power which Tilton had over Bowen to extort, through Chapin, from Bowen, a certificate of character.

Third. That the devices to which he (Moulton) resorted were Beecher's own suggestion, and made in an effort to help and save Beecher.

Fourth. He gives specifically in words the justification which Beecher gave to him for his adultery with Mrs. Tilton, namely this: That his physical expression of love was as natural as the words of endearment he used towards her. This, Moulton says, was the first communication of free love he had ever heard, and it therefore became deeply impressed upon his memory.

Fifth. That when he read to Beecher the letter of Tilton to Bowen the charge of rape made by Bowen, that Beecher deemed it necessary to tell him the truth with reference to the woman mentioned by Bowen—Beecher saying: "I didn't commit a rape, but it is true I had intercourse with the woman." Moulton said: "If you are on friendly terms you had better have a retraction, else you may be at Bowen's mercy." Beecher did go and obtain the best retraction he could, which appears in the statement. It appears, also, from Moulton's statement, that the efforts of Gen. Butler have been toward the safety of Beecher, in order to save him and the country from the shame that would ensue from the publication of the whole truth. He (Butler) has never appeared in New York on this question except at the suggestion of Beecher's counsel.

Father Taylor.

The Belmont Courier copying our notice of Father Taylor's letter to this paper and remarks as to the cause of his exodus, adds the following:

The above is clipped from THE INYO INDEPENDENT, of date August 29. Father Taylor, the subject of the article, in making his escape from the floods, earthquakes, etc., which he predicted would visit Inyo county, camped with his family in the town of Belmont on the night of the 28th of July. On the evening of the same night Judge Southworth was employed to unite in the holy bonds of wedlock—despite floods and earthquakes—M. A. Statham and Emma Elrod, the latter named being the step-daughter of Father Taylor, the ceremony taking place by moonlight, in front of the wagon in which the party were traveling—the pious Justice taking position at the end and the bride and bridegroom on opposite sides of the tongue, we mean the wagon tongue. On reaching this place the party of flood and earthquake refugees, learning of the disastrous Eureka cloud-burst, doubtless suggested to the young folks the importance of immediate marriage, lest they, too, might be swept down the stream of troubled waters before they were made familiar with and partook of the fountain of real life. If Father Taylor had become a little weak over his advanced theory, the young folks were ardent in the opposite direction

An Offering.

The Israelites of the United States, anxious to attest their affection for the Government of the United States and its free institutions, under which they have lived happily and prospered to a remarkable degree, have employed Mr. Ezekiel, of Cincinnati, to execute a monumental group, to be unvailed at the Centennial in 1876, and after exhibition placed in the capitol at Washington. The design is to be heroic and in every way worthy the Israelites. The Goddess of Liberty is the central figure. By her side is an ideal figure of a boy, holding aloft the sacred and eternal fire, typifying the grand idea of the whole—the universal belief in a higher power. On the other side is an American eagle, dropping from his beak the dead serpent of intolerance over the edge of a precipice. The group, it is said will be executed in Rome, out of one solid marble block, and will be double life size. The base will be twelve feet in hight, and will bear the date 1876 on its face, with the clause from the Constitution providing for religious liberty, and possibly, also, with this added inscription: "From the Israelites of the United States to the General Government."

Railroad Project.

The Express in speculating on the effects of the new railroad to the ocean, should it be built, closes the article with these words: "But there is another important result which we believe the building of the proposed new road will ultimately accomplish. The construction of that road by our people will show them what we can do in this line. It will give them a knowledge of their own strength, and will develop their capacity for large undertakings to such an extent that they will seize hold of the Cerro Gordo railroad project with an experience and intelligence which will not only insure the building of that important road, but which will further push it forward until it connects with the Southern Utah, 170 miles beyond Cerro Gordo. Then we shall be possessed of an entirely independent overland railroad. That will enable Los Angeles to become one of the largest commercial cities in the United States."—[Wilmington Enterprise.

The revenue cutter Oliver Wolcott, with Senator J. P. Jones, Gen. Beale and other distinguished gentleman, arrived at San Pedro this evening, and the party have just reached here on a special train. Senator Stewart passed through here yesterday afternoon en route to San Bernardino. A fierce assault was made on him in the leader of this morning's Herald in connection with his attitude in Congress on Central Pacific Railroad matters.

Getting Rich.

Stock and dairymen are making money very fast. A day or two ago Jim O'Niel, who has a large band of sheep on Date Creek, informed us that he considered his chances for a fortune real good. Well, they ought to be, considering the high price of wool and mutton, and the certainty that his sheep will do better here than in any other part of the Pacific coast. LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Borax Works.

Searles & Co., at Borax Lake on the Panamint road, now have eight vats in use, each capable of turning out about three-fourths of a ton of merchantable borax every seven days, that being the time required to effect the perfect crystalization of a vat of water from the heating apparatus. Sixteen more vats, making a total of twenty-four, are to be put in as fast as possible. The boiling apparatus is a most complete affair; it consists of a number of large vats or pans all heated by one furnace (fed with sagebrush for fuel), the heat being carried through the water in a series of ramifying pipes or flues, thereby effecting economy in fuel and space. These boilers have a capacity more than sufficient to supply the proposed complement of crystalizing vats. The company have excellent buildings and conveniences in place or course of preparation for permanent, thorough and rapid work. They have a life-long business and most valuable property, the supply of the crude material being simply inexhaustible. The borax is obtained almost exclusively from the borax water pumped from the marsh, that, as we understand it, being a more rapid way than by gathering the earth containing the crystals, though this is also done to a considerable amount. The supply of water for domestic purposes is carried from a spring two miles in pipes, and then hauled five miles further on wagons. These facts we learn from Mr. T. F. A. Connelly, who also states that the road from Indian Wells via the marsh to Panamint is among the worst traveled. For a heavy wagon to get an inch off the beaten track any where in crossing the marsh is for it to go down to the hubs without a possibility of getting it on again without unloading. After this is passed comes a mountain, the descent of which is at an angle of forty-five degrees; at all other times is heavy sand, so we infer that the teamsters on that road don't whistle and sing all the day through from sheer happiness.

Fine Fruit.

A load of the finest fruit, sent to regale the appetites of the crowd attending the Mexican celebration at Lone Pine, came from W. A. Baker's fine place above Big Pine. It consisted of peaches, plums and grapes. In size and superior flavor the two first mentioned will, we think, equal any grown anywhere in this State. The sample box sent us would be entitled to a prize at the State Fair. It is worthy of remark that Mr. Baker's farm is located, surrounded by low hills, at several hundred feet higher altitude than the generality of the farms of the valley, and yet is never visited by frosts to damage crops of any kind, as the lower lying places sometimes are.

Stage Matters.

Superintendent Horn and C. Navacovich, agent at Aurora, of the Northern Stage Line, are on the road putting everything in thorough condition for successful competition with the line south. Their stock and stages are the best obtainable, and traveling time and rates of fare are intended to correspond. Tuller & Cluggage, the principals, now own the line clear through from Cerro Gordo to Carson. Fare has been materially, reduced being only $30 from either Cerro Gordo, Lone Pine or Independence through to Carson, and passengers will be put through on the fastest time. See the new advertisement.

Notable Marriage.

From an invitation received we learn that Miss Minnie, daughter of Col. and Mrs. C. W. Wingard, is to be united in the bonds of wedlock with Mr. Michael Hook, ceremony to take place at St. Mary's Cathedral at 10 A. M. on the 28th instant, also the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of the Colonel and lady. With regrets for our inability to attend, the happy pair and parents have our best wishes and congratulations in advance.

"Whack's" Him.

As umpire or committee of awards in the matter of the biggest watermelon, the premium standing in favor of D. B. Curtis' 33 pounder is hereby withdrawn in favor of a 33¼ pounder from Supervisor A. N. Bell. If anybody thinks they can beat that without loading the vegetable with shot, as Mark Twain's Calaveras jumping frog was treated, now's the time to try it while there's an honest and impartial committee.

Another Celebration.

Yesterday, the 18th, was "the Fourth of July" for the Republic of Chili, and was duly celebrated by her citizens resident in and about Lone Pine. As the Mexican and Chilean population make common cause in celebrating the natal days of their respective countrys, there being but one day intervening, this celebration may be considered as a continuation of that of the 16th, and no less a success.

Quick Trip.

County Treasurer H. M. Isaacs arrived here on Tuesday last returning from his trip to England. He was but eight days from the starting of the car at New York till he stepped off the stage here, being a most remarkably quick trip. But his welcome from numerous friends was none the less warm on that account.

Welcome Home Dance.

A very fine dance came off at the Blaney House last night, given as a welcome home to H. M. Isaacs.

Concerning Tickets.

The ways of the law makers are nearly past finding out. For some reason totally beyond the ken of any person we have yet seen, our last Legislature, finding nothing else to tinker or alter in a good election law, resolved in its wisdom that it would be a good thing to make election ballots, already too large, a little larger. Accordingly an amendment was adopted adding one inch to the width, but without other change. Nobody has the remotest idea what this was done for, except to cause trouble, for which it is well adapted now when so many special elections are the order of the day, and especially in localities where the amended Codes are rarely or never seen. It is somewhat remarkable that, notwithstanding the numerous elections reported and discussed, no reference has ever been in any newspaper, to the knowledge of any person in this section anyway, that any change had been made in the form of the ballots or election law. But for the presence of Grand Lecturer Walker at Bishop just on the eve of the local option election there yesterday, it is quite certain that election would have been nullified by reason of the fact that every ballot of both parties was printed in exact conformity to the law of last year, and in blissful ignorance common to everybody concerned, were only four inches wide when the amended law quires them to be five! Here, we will remark, that neither party had taken any steps whatever toward procuring ballots until just four days before that of election, barely time to get them from this office, fifty miles away. This neglect was probably due to the fact that the expected decision from the Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of the law might put a stop to the election entirely. At the time mentioned and wholly unexpected to us, both parties sent in their orders for tickets, but without specifications other than the words each was to bear, and that they were to be conformable to law. By the merest accident we happened to have a small quantity of the legal paper (in use at last election) on hands, and were thus enabled to supply the ballots when otherwise, at that late day, they could not have been obtained in time by any possible chance from any other source. Well, they were printed as the law required (last year) and the night before the election were, as stated above, found to be of no account. The printer was responsible of course, since the matter of size had been entrusted to him by both parties, and though the secret of the error was the property of but one party, yet his professional honor under the circumstances made it imperative that proper ballots should be furnished the party yet in ignorance of the error, and it was so done and in time. Otherwise, the election must have gone by default in favor of the the temperance party, with which we take pride in being identified: but we don't suppose there is a Good Templar in this valley who would be satisfied with a victory won by such means as that. But it don't matter; neither that or any other cause or party ever will win a fight by our connivance in a dodge such as might have followed a stupid blunder like the wrong printing of tickets submitted on professional honor.

Drunken Indians.

From one end of the valley to the other we hear complaints of drunken Indians, and this fact is stirring up a depth of feeling in certain quarters that will cause somebody trouble before they are much older. Even squaws working at private houses have to be furnished their regular beer or whisky, bought for them by their employers. As a result two of these creatures at the camp west of this place got drunk Thursday last and one tried to murder the other, inflicting some severe wounds on the head with a stone. It is perfectly well known, whether susceptible of legal proof or not, that certain persons here and up the road a few miles are in the habit of selling whisky to Indians, and it seems strange nothing can be done with them by law. It is about time Local Option was put in practice all through this valley, as it will be if a stop is not put to this thing of furnishing Indians, large and small and both sexes, with the murderous stuff.

Honest Injun.

George Lalock (Indian George) don't read the papers, though he talks pretty good English, and by talk he lately found out that a quilt (a keepsake) had been advertised in this paper as lost some time ago. A day or two since George marched into the office with a bundle in his hand, and after tendering the grandiloquent compliments fitting the importance of his mission, gave us to understand that, "he heap fine 'um quilt; no see 'um paper; here he is," producing the article, at the same time explaining all the particulars, how he found it, but couldn't find any owner until this moment of supreme happiness, and, further, that by no possible means would he be induced to take a cent for his trouble and honesty—the fact is the quilt is too small for Mr. Lalock, and he has no young Lalocks; still, as he was not educated on a reservation, he is a very "honest Injun." The quilt awaits the owner's orders.

Breach of Trust.

There was an example of a mean, very mean breach of trust (which is the politer name for theft) down at Lone Pine a couple of days since. A saloon keeper, Peterson we beleive, employed a card sharp named Kelly to deal a game of faro for him. When the sum in bank had accumulated to about $150 Kelly excused himself for a time, and the last heard of him and the cash was at a point some thirty miles north of the game, and still going.

Lost Cows.

We would call attention to Martin & McClure's advertisement of two milk cows that have strayed or been driven away.

The Celebration at Lone Pine.

A friend furnishes us with a brief account of the Mexican celebration at Lone Pine, Wednesday the 16th.

The ceremonies commenced at 12 o'clock on the night preceding. At that hour, with music and firing of guns, the Mexican flag was run up, and saluted with an ode sung in good style by Misses Dolores Lopes and Delphino Padea and Mrs. Jesus Castro. Music and cannonading was kept up till day began to break, when there was a lull till sunrise. As old Sol's skirmishing ray first touched the summits of the lofty western peaks no less than six national flags were flung to the breeze and acknowledged by music and a grand salute. Music and firing of guns was kept up till 1 P. M. when the different delegations, order and nationalities began to fall in for

THE GRAND PROCESSION.

In this appeared the Mexican, German, Chilean, French Swiss and American flags. Don Pasqual Borgnes was Marshal of the Day and led the Mexican delegation; R. Dias was Marshal of the Chilinos and Julius Chelius of the Americanos. Procession moved at 2 and marching up and down Main street and making the finest display of the kind ever witnessed in the town, was brought to a halt and broke ranks at Mexican Hall to hear the ORATION AND SPEECHES OF THE DAY.

The oration was by Don Jose Maria Ovando, and his effort was received with much applause. With interludes of music and patriotic songs by the ladies above named, and cannonading, addresses were made by Don Eclisario Losano, Dr. P. G. Gelcich, Jas. Turner and others, and were all well received, the singing by the ladies especially.

With this ended the state ceremonies, but not the festivities, till sunset when, with music and formal ceremonies, all the flags were hauled down.

Among other displays in procession was an imposing car of liberty and two finely decorated chariots or cars of state. Another point worthy of note is that the Grangers made their first public parade in this procession for this county.

Dancing began at the Hall about 9, and was kept up with great spirit till morning. The celebration was a most gratifying success in every particular. There was no disorderly conduct, and notwithstanding the large attendance from all around, but two or three drunken men were to be seen, so everything passed off very pleasantly for all.

No News.

Up to this 2 P. M. we have heard nothing as to how the fight went yesterday at Bishop Creek, nor is it likely we will before to-morrow. But the temperance people are working in deep earnest, owing to the outrages they have experienced through the unlawful barter of the vile stuff to Indians, and from drunken white wretches. Though we are satisfied Local Option will fail to remedy all the evils its framers claim for it, yet we hope for its success every where because it is bound to do some good wherever it may be put in force. The ladies of Bishop and Round Valley have taken hold of this matter with a zeal that does them infinite credit—but who can have a more vital interest at issue than women everywhere in this contest against whisky? Pending the action of the Supreme Court but little comparatively has been said or done to insure a temperance victory in this instance, but there can hardly be a doubt but what Local Option won and with a good majority.

Official Appointment.

Hon. John Sedgwick has appointed V. A. Gregg, Esq., Deputy Internal Internal Revenue Collector for the 8th district comprising Mono and Inyo counties, vice S. G. Sneden, resigned. Mr. Gregg has entered upon his duties, and we are requested to state that all parties knowing themselves in arrears for revenue taxes will save trouble and costs by taking out their licenses at once.

Turn Out.

Jabez Walker, Grand Lecturer of the State of California, I. O. G. T., will deliver a free lecture at the Masonic Hall next Monday evening, beginning at 7:30. Mr. Walker has the reputation of being a first-class speaker, and this is an opportunity to hear him no one should miss. He has been at Bishop Creek for several days, and has been of vast benefit to the order in that locality.

Held to Answer.

After due examination, during which over a dozen witnesses were examined, Justice Campbell bound W. L. Callahan over in the sum of $2,000 to answer for the killing of P. Sheridan at Big Pine. Callahan has not tendered bail, and is in the hands of the Sheriff.

Preaching.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

COLD CHILLS, AGUE CHILLS.

The application of the Ready Relief to the part or parts where the pain or difficulty exists will afford ease and comfort.

Twenty drops in half a tumblerfull of water will in a few minutes cure CRAMPS, SPASMS, SOUR STOMACH, HEARTBURN, SICK HEADACHE, DIARRHEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, WIND IN THE BOWELS, and all INTERNAL PAINS.

Travelers should always carry a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief with them. A few drops in water will prevent sickness or pains from change of water. It is better than French Brandy of Bitters as a stimulant.

FEVER AND AGUE.

FEVER AND AGUE cured for fifty cents. There is not a remedial agent in the world that will cure Fever and Ague, and all other malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow and other Fevers (aided by RADWAY'S PILLS), so quick as RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. Fifty cents per bottle. Sold by Druggists.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—INCREASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.

DR. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent

HAS MADE THE MOST ASTONISHING CURES; SO QUICK, SO RAPID ARE THE CHANGES THE BODY UNDERGOES, UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THIS TRULY WONDERFUL MEDICINE, THAT

Every day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Every drop of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT communicates through the Blood, Sweat, Urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the System, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all weakening and painful discharges, Night Sweats, Loss or Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.

If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the wastes and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood—and this the SARSAPARILLIAN will and does secure.

Not only does the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional and Skin Diseases; but it is the only positive cure for

Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Urinary and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid, dark, bilious appearance, and white bone-dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back and along the loins. WORMS.—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, MASS., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

THE LOUISIANA TROUBLE.

A Mighty Wrong Righted After Two Years Waiting.

NEW ORLEANS, September 15.

The grand mass meeting which was called yesterday on Canal street, adopted resolution calling on Gov. Kellogg to abdicate the gubernatorial chair in favor of Gov. McEnery, whom the citizens claim to have been legally elected two years ago, and a committee of three gentlemen was appointed to wait upon the Governor and request the Governor's Answer.

The committee went to the executive office, where they were met by Gen. Dibblee of the Governor's staff, who informed them that he would take their message to the Governor, which he accordingly did, and returned with the reply that the Governor must decline to receive any delegation from the committee because he had definite and accurate information that there were now assembled in different parts of the city several large bodies of armed men who met at the same call that convened the mass meeting. This he regarded as a menace, and, while he would deem it one of his highest duties to receive any communication or petition from a peaceable assemblage of citizens, he could not recognize a menacing request.

Shortly afterward the Hon. D. B Penn, who was two years ago elected Lieutenanant Governor on the McEnery ticket, issued the following proclamation:

A Stirring Appeal

TO THE PEOPLE OF LOUISIANA: For two years you have borne with patience and fortitude a great wrong through fraud and violence. The government of your choice has been overthrown and its power usurped. Protest after protest, appeal after appeal to the President of the United States and to Congress have failed to give you the relief you had a right under the Constitution to demand. The wrong has not been repaired. On the contrary, through the instrumentality of partisan judges, you are debarred from all legal remedy. Day by day taxation has been increasing, with costs and penalties amounting to confiscation. Your property, your substance squandered; your credit ruined, resulting in the failure and bankruptcy of your valued institutions. The right of sufirage is virtually taken from you by the enactment of skilfully devised registration and election laws; the judicial branch of your Government has been stricken down by the conversion of a legal posse comitatus of the Sheriff for the use of the usurper for the purpose of defeating the decrees of the courts, his defiance of law leading him to use the force of arms for the arrest of the Sheriff while engaged in the execution of a process of the Court. To these may be added enacting laws in violation of the Constitution, for the purpose of guarding and perpetuating their usurped authority. A metropolitan police, paid by a city under the control of the usurper, is quartered on you to overawe and keep you in subjection. Every public right has been denied, and, as if to goad you on to desperation, private arms are seized and individuals are arrested. To such extremities are you driven that manhood revolts at further submission. Constrained by a sense of duty as the legally elected Lieutenant-Governor of the State, and as Acting Governor in the absence of Gov. McEnery, I do hereby issue this, my proclamation, calling on the military of the State, comprising all persons between the ages of 18 and 40 years, without regard to color or previous condition, to arm and assemble under their respective officers, for the purpose of driving the usurpers from power.

A CORRUPT AND VICIOUS LEGISLATURE

Given under my hand and seal this 14th day September.

D. B. PENN,
Lieutenant Governor.

The People Arming.

In response to the above the people armed themselves and assembled in Canal street to the number of many thousands. The Metropolitan Police, under command of Gen. Longstreet, marched out to disperse them, when a sharp fight ensued, resulting in the killing of a number of persons on both sides. Several other engagements took place during the day, and it is said that fifty people were killed in all. The Kellogg men seem to have great confidence in their ability to deal with what they term an armed mob, and say that unless the people disperse there will be bloody work. Barricades are erected on all streets between Poydras and Canal, and the people's party hold all that portion of the city above Canal. The Metropolitans are massed in and around Jackson Square and the St. Louis Hotel. There was quite a sharp fight at the river end of Canal street, about 4 o'clock, at which a number were killed and wounded.

Victory Perched Upon Penn's Banners.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 15.

The State House has just surrendered to Penn's militia without firing a gun.

Penn's militia are about 10,000 strong. The entire Metropolitan police force, the Kellogg militia, etc., without arms or arsenals, surrendered at 9 A. M. to the citizens, or Penn's militia. Kellogg and Longstreet and others have taken refug in the custom House.

The War Over and Peace Restored.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 15—5 P. M.

The Kellogg Government has been overthrown and the entire city is in the hands of his opponents. Lieutenant Governor Penn has taken the reins of Government and will at once install in office all those who were voted for on the same ticket with McEnery in 1873. The Courts will at once be organized and the entire machinery of Government set in motion, not only in this city but throughout the State.

Gov. Penn to the President.

The following dispatch was sent last evening by acting Governor Penn to the President:

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 14, 1874.

To U. S. GRANT, President of the United States: Hopeless of all other relief the people of this State have taken up arms to maintain the legal authority of persons elected by them to the Government of the State against usurpers who have heaped upon them innumerable insults, burdens and wrongs. In so doing they are supported by the great body of intelligent and honest people of the State. They declare their unswerving loyalty and respect for the United States Government and its officers; they war only against usurpers, plunderers and the enemies of the people. They affirm their entire ability to maintain peace and protect life, liberty and the equal rights of all classes of citizens. The officials of the United States it shall be our special aim to defend against all assaults, and to treat them with the profoundest respect and loyalty. We only ask you to withhold any aid or protection from our enemies and the enemies of Republican rights and of peace and of the liberties of the people.

D. B. PENN,
Acting Governor.

Gen. Ogden's Speech.

Gen. Ogden, the Provisional General, has just made a speech from his headquarters, stating that the war is over and advising the people to go quietly to their homes and resume their usual vocations.

Gov. Penn this morning appointed Thomas Boylan, the well known detective, Chief of Police. Mr. Boylan is now organizing a force.

Yesterday's Surrender.

An extra Picayune contains the following: As might have been expected after the decisive victory of yesterday, and the consequent demoralization of Kellogg's forces, the finish this morning was a very brief and unexpected affair. About half-past eight o'clock the State House was occupied by the citizens' force, and by 9 o'clock the third precinct station and the Kellogg station and the Kellogg armory, the last of the radical Government, was, after a sharp little assault captured and appropriated.

Gov. Penn's residence was filled all the morning with citizens congratulating him on the situation. There was universal delight and loud cheers when the news of the surrender of the police reached them. Mayor Wiltz called upon the Governor about 10 o'clock.

The cotton Exchange is closed but the excitement is subsiding. The street railroads have again started and the barricades have been removed from the streets.

The Killed and Wounded.

The loss by last night's fight foots up 15 to 20 killed and 50 wounded.

The Eastern Press on the Trouble.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.

The evening papers comment at length upon the riot in New Orleans. The Post reviews the situation, and argues that Grant's interference in domestic affairs in the Southern States has been wholly mischievous, and through his aid Kellogg has fortified his position on every side by legal barriers. It says men do not seek redress with musket in hand when they have a chance to obtain it at the ballot. Kellogg's hand now covers every ballot box in Louisiana. He ought to be left to the vengeance of the people, whose necks are under his heel.

Grant Wholly Responsible.

The Express holds that the President and Congress are wholly responsible for the present revolution in allowing the usurpation of power by the Kellogg government, and while endorsing Federal interposition considers that to stand by the Kellogg government would only add to the present wrong. It advocates the placing of Gen. Sherman in command of the troops at New Orleans.

A Good Republican.

The Commercial Advertiser says that lawlessness must be put down at all hazards. It is a question wholly apart from politics, and unless a premium is to be put upon rioting in New Orleans, and also New York as well, the recognized Government of Louisiana must be sustained.

Outlaws to be Suppressed.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 15.

Sixty State Guards will leave here to-morrow morning, by order of the Governor, for Breathitt county, to clear the town of Jackson of a band of outlaws, under command of one Strong, who have possession of the place and Rulo county. No Court has been held there for many months, and the troops will continue to support the Judge through the term.

The President on the Trouble.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.

The President, this afternoon, in a conversation with the agent of the American Press Association, expressed great surprise that the people of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana should have allowed themselves to be so influenced by their political leaders as to commit acts of violence against the citizens and authorities of the State, which has led to bloodshed and called for the interference of the Federal power. He stated that great consideration had been shown to the people. He said he had issued two orders one to Gen. McDowell, and one to Gen. Emory, instructing them to take such measures as in their judgment was necessary to preserve life and property, and to restore peace and quietness to the city of New Orleans and to the State at large, and he felt confident the steps he had taken would result in a return of harmony. He hoped that the proclamation would have the desired effect, and that the to act except to assist in arresting the turbulent and disorderly element, who are prominent in augmenting the disturbances throughout the State. He expressed himself as fully determined, with all the power at his command, to put down the disturbances, but hoped that no further action on his part would be required. He stated that any orders issued by Gens. McDowell or Emory would be sent to Washington for approval; that every step taken would be for the best interests of the people, irrespective of party or color, and that no measures would be executed not fully sanctioned by law. The President spoke in the kindest terms of the people of Louisiana, and in the same terms, incidentally of the whole South, and expressed deep regret that any section of the country was turbulent; but as Chief Magistrate of the whole country charged with the execution of the laws, which were enacted in the interest of peace between every section of the country, his duty was plain, and he would not shrink from its performance.

A Suggestion.

LIDA, Sept. 17, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Under mining news, in your issue of the 12th, we notice that Mr. Darrah has been to Sylvania. We are glad to know that he was at Sylvania, and we would suggest to him that if he were to stop in the district a sufficient length of time to visit the mines he might find some to suit him or his company. These flying visits are not likely to prove satisfactory. By looking around he can find good ore and plenty of it, and $30,000 is a good deal more than is asked for it.

SUB.

Important Lawsuit.

A complaint in a suit to quiet title to lands, covering some 89,000 acres of the San Joaquin basin, and including the town site of Bakersfield, has been filed in the Fourth District Court by John Center, C. B. Polhemus, Delos Lake and J. T. Bryd. This is based on the rights granted by the Legislature of 1857 to W. F. Montgomery and his associates, or the Tulare Canal Company, as vile a swindle as was ever perpetrated in the State. From the returns of the surveys down the whole swindle has been built up on perjury, direct and by subornation. The late Col. Baker, the founder of Bakersfield, was an active agent in the matter involved in this suit.

The Austrian Arctic Expedition.

By accouuts in the late London journals, the Austrian North Pole Expedition was frozen in at the north point of Nova Zembla in August, 1872, and was driven in a northwest direction with ice. The crew worked for five months in vain during the Summer of 1873 to free the ship. On the 20th of May, 1874, the crew left the ship, the Telegethof, in four sledges, and after traveling ninety-six days, reached Nova Zembla where they met some Russian seaman, and were thus rescued after undergoing indescribable sufferings and deprivations.

A City that is to Be.

The Arizona Miner is of the opinion that some day a great city is to be built at or near the mouth of the Colorado river. Point Isabel, a point in view, is a very good port at the head of a large gulf near 600 miles in length, and at the mouth of a river navigable for another 600 miles. The surrounding country is pretty well wooded, has a good climate and an immense back country, both mineral and agricultural, which can be made to center at this port and make it a great city—perhaps.

Fairs.

The Southern District Agricultural Association will hold their fair in Los Angeles, commencing October 26. Now here's a chance for our Granger's to do something for their county which has never been done yet—a fair representation at any District or State Fair. This county by courtesy was formally included in the Southern District. The State Fair began at Sacramento last Monday.

Ahead.

The S. F. Chronicle is certainly our most enterprising California newspaper. For instance one of its late dispatches (Moulton's statement) was eleven columns of fine print, being a total of 23,000 words. And whatever its sins otherwise its news is always the latest, most complete and readable.

Kernville

Continues to keep up its reputation as one of the liveliest towns in the county. The work on the new mammoth 80-stamp mill at the Big Blue mine progressess. The old mill is never idle. When the new mill is started the entire works will be run by water power—the mill, hoisting works and the transportation of ore from the mine to the mill.—[Bakersfield Californian.

To Be Shipped to England.

The San Bernardino Argus says: We are informed that parties largely interested in Panamint have made arrangements to have large amounts of ore hauled direct from the mines to Wilmington, and there shipped by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company to Swansea, in England.

Pony Express.

Senators Jones and Stewart have established a regular pony express from San Bernardino to Panamint, to be run in connection with their extensive mining interests in the latter place.

Great Disaster.

A cotton mill at Fall River, Mass. was destroyed by fire on the 19th instant. Fifty-seven persons were killed and wounded by jumping from windows or were burned to death.

—The Eagle flouring mills, in Los Angeles, were totally destroyed by fire a few days since.

JUBILANT.

The Los Angeles papers are all very jubilant by reason of the new impulse Senators Jones and Stewart are giving the business prospects of their city. Both of those wealthy gentlemen are highly delighted with the country in its every aspect, and what is better, have given such tangible proofs of their confidence and delight in the way of actual investments as, with their great influnce, to give almost an absolute assurance that the highest hopes indulged in by these papers will be fully realized—that Los Angeles will soon become the center of a vast railroad system and a a great city. This means the development of the "back country," the early completion of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad, the key of the whole; it means the dawn of a new and prosperous era for the Inyo mining region; it means, we verily believe, the development of the richest, most varied and extensive mineral section in the United States, we might say the world; it means, eventually, a population of a hundred in our mountains and valleys where we now have one. That is our candid estimate of the importance of railroad. And if it is that to the back country how much more must it be for the city into whose lap the concentrated fruits of all this, and contingently, so very much more from other sections must fall?

With the Los Angeles papers, we believe this route to offer the very best railroad opening of the day. It is bound to be a busy road and a paying one; it can't but be both. It is not solely dependent upon Panamint, Cerro Gordo or Waucoba nor a dozen other localities each equally as promising and, save Cerro Gordo, better developed, better proved and not a whit less important as to amount of business they may furnish than the very best of those three. It will have a half a hundred such to contribute to its business—salt, sulphur, borax, copper, lead, silver, gold—almost every known mineral in paying quantities, together and one after another, beginning at San Bernardino and extending scarcely without a break two hundred miles north close to the line, or in easy reach of this road, each and all certain to give employment to large numbers of miners, and work in the same proportion to the road which will make the profitable working of the poorest of them a fair probability. Is it reasonable to suppose that all these, all this immense region together, with its thousands of mines combined cannot load as many cars as the Comstock alone? Why, we have mines as large as that appeared to be at the commencement of work upon it, and at the same stage no less promising, while we have hundreds that are richer. There are thousands of tons of refuse ores on the dumps of the various districts quite as rich or richer, taken together, than an equal number of tons of the first class ores of the present day from that famous mine. Much of this refuse will be made of commercial value by this railroad, and with such ores and better from all this region we can surely equal the business of that one ledge, though that does require from thirty-six to forty trains every day to supply its demands. There need not be a doubt that sooner or later we will have single districts that will do this and more.

From what he has already heard and seen Senator Jones feels and appreciates in part at least the great promise of this enterprise, and says it must be put through—and it is almost a certainty that it will be right away. He has already the same as paid down $220,000, quite sufficient to give it a corporate existence and give it a fair start, all sufficient to insure its completion, for with such a guarantee, there will be no trouble in commanding all the capital required. It will, as the Senator says, be easy to get outside capitalists to do the rest if desired. But that should never be the desire, for, with the additional help that both the Senators are willing to accord, our home capital can and ought to do the rest; Los Angeles ought to do it as a guarantee for her own safety; why, need not be stated.

Shooting at Belmont.

A shooting affray occurred at Belmont on Wednesday, between George Booth, son of John Booth, editor of The Belmont Courier, and Richard O'Malley, in which the former received a shot in the right side. The ball entered about two inches below the right nipple and passed out of the side, directly across from where it entered, about midway between the hip and arm-pit. The difficulty originated from a scurrilous attack made on the elder Booth and his family in the colnmns of The Eureka Sentinel; but beyond the mere statement of this fact we have no particulars. Young Booth's wound, though severe, is not necessarily mortal. O'Malley was held for examination in $1,000 bonds.—[Austin Reveille, Sept. 18.

—Geiger, the murderer of Mrs. Strong, has entered upon his life sentence in the Penitentiary.

A STRANGE MONOMANIA.

A Man With A Beef's Liver in his Nose—His Sufferings and How He Was Cured.

The Virginia Enterprise has a "strange monomania" for lying. The latest manufacture of this monomaniac is an article under the above heading, introduced in these words:

A late resident of Owens Valley, who arrived in this city a day or two since, tells a remarkable story of a curious monomania which took possession, some weeks since, of a man who was his partner in a ranch in the valley named.

It then goes on to relate the minute details of how the man (whose name is nowhere given) began picking at his nose and worrying about it, and how he finally became possessed of the idea that his nose contained a beef liver, and how each day was to be his last, and how his wife and partner became alarmed at his strange hallucination, and their futile endeavors to reason him out of it, and how a drunken, bluff old doctor was sent for and told him it was "all d—d nonsense; there's nothing in it; not even a pimple, let alone a beef's liver," all of which only the more confirmed the monomaniac that there was a conspiracy between his wife and the partner, and between whom the afflicted man was satisfied there was a relation rather too warm existing, or likely to exist, to be as proper as it might be. "His hobby in giving his death-bed directions was to get the pair to agree to marry as soon as he had shuffled off this mortal coil. He told his son that he knew 'John—his partner's name—would be a good father to him. 'And, Maria," he would say, 'I know John will make you a good husband. He loves you! I have seen it!—I have seen it' These scenes were most annoying both to the wife and partner—particularly to the wife, who was so shocked and shamed on the first occasion of the kind that she could hardly hold up her head."

One day, as the story runs, the partner met a young physician in the town of Independence, formerly from Texas who, having heard of the case, undertook its cure by humoring the fancy of the patient, and who went with a wagon-load of instruments more or less and pretended to cut out an immense mass from his nose, playing numerous fine dodges to carry out the deception among which was the production, after the operation, of a veritable beef's liver, thereby satisfying the monomaniac that his fancies were real and that he was now cured, save some severe scratches and digs he had received, by way of "make believes," in his nose. The cure was complete, and to this day the man believes that beef's liver came from his nose. But John, the partner, and relator of the story, finding that certain unpleasant suspicions affecting himself and the lady of the ranch, still perturbed the husband's mind, sold out his interest in the ranch and left, having just arrived in Virginia when the Local corralled him and elicited the remarkable story, which is given with such an air of truth as doubtless to insure it a place in many gullible minds and newspapers. As it is neither pleasant or instructive reading, we will add that it might as well be stopped at once, for it is a fabrication from beginning to end.

Correction.

A Lida correspondent referring to mail matters says:

You are in error as to the route extending from Gold Mountain to Columbus, and doubling the route one-half the distance. The route is from Columbus to Lida, running 25 miles over the same road that the Independence mail does, and it is necessary that it should or we would only have one mail a week. Earl has not the contract, but W. Wilson has, and it does not extend to Gold Mountain. It is a mistake that Earl ever carried the mail to Gold Mountain from Lida, but he went there once to sell some onions.

We were quite well aware of the fact that Earl did not get the contract on the Columbus route, but only failed to do so as he failed on the one from this place, because Wells, Fargo & Co. didn't get his final bonds to Washington on time. We are aware, also, that under the old contract he connected at Lida with the Austin line for Gold Mountain, by which arrangement the return mail from the latter place was delayed a week; also, that of late neither the Austin stage or any other carried this mail at all for several weeks. It is also a fact that between the three lines the road is doubled from Piper's clear through to Gold Mountain, the terminus of two of the routes. That is, the Columbus and Independenee routes double 25 miles from Piper's to Lida, the terminus of the former, the Austin and Independence routes doubling over the remaining distance, viz.: 15 miles from Lida to Gold Mountain.

—Little Johnnie is dead, but before his spirit was wafted to the angels he requested that a watermelon vine might be allowed to wander at will over his green grave that it might be a warning to future generations.

INDIAN AGENTS.

A couple of weeks since we mentioned the arrival of Mr. P. (Eph) Harrington from the Colorado River Indian Reservation. In the same issue we gave a detailed account of the swindles perpetrated by the agent, Dr. Tonner, copied from The Arizona Miner. Mr. Harrington thinks that Tonner has been treated with great injustice in reference to his personal character and management of the reservation. It is claimed that the object of this persecution is to effect his removal at the instance of some land thieves, whose intended steals he has averted. While Tonner was at San Francisco about a year since, en route to Washington on official business, he was approached by ex-Surveyor-General Hardenburgh and others in San Francisco to this effect: That if he would consent to have his big ditch dug through the reservation, to be used on a large and fine body of Government land lying below it on the river, these parties would have that land surveyed and manage to gobble it up, and would give Tonner an equal interest. Tonner went on to Washington and had the whole of the land in question included in the reservation, thereby effectually barring this grab. In the meantime a surveyor was sent out from San Diego by the parties to make a survey on paper of the tract in question. This work was given in part to a local surveyor, whose name we do not now recall. He happened to be an honest man and postively refused to certify to a survey as correct and lawful which, save a corner or two, was made wholly on paper. But this fact had nothing to do with the final failure of the intended grab, Tonner having included the tract in the reservation, as before stated. But this latter fact according to Mr. Harrington's views gives the whole secret of the war against Tonner and the efforts to have him removed. The ditch was dug and, true enough, as stated by The Miner, is a total failure, since no water will run in it. But Harrington asserts that the whole story of Tonner robbing the Indians under his care and general dishonest mismanagement of the reservation on his part is postively untrue. Tonner, he says, is a most hospitable, kind-hearted man and efficient agent doing the very best he can for his wards. He invites and is expressly anxious for a thorough investigation by the proper authorities, feeling satisfied that when such is made the Colorado River Reservation will be pronounced the best managed of any in Arizona, and the best located, since, unlike that of the Verde, it possesses excellent soil, and being on a navigable stream can be maintained very much cheaper, as there is no chance for "jobs" in transporting supplies, as in the case of those further inland.

We mention these statements because we deem Mr. Harrington a reliable man, and so far as his opportunities to know the facts go, what he says may be accepted as truth. Stil we think a thorough investigation into the affairs of the agency ought to be made. As a rule we look upon Indian agents as little better than thieves, and the reservation system, as now practiced, as institutions for robbing the Government and, by slow torture, for murdering helpless Indians. It don't matter whether the agent of the Colorado reservation is an exception to the rule or otherwise, we are satisfied that the system under which he works is as we have characterized it. The whole management of Indian affairs ought to be placed in the hands of the military. The reasons in favor of this change are many, and, we think, are convincing. Peculations and brutal mismanagement may still occasionally occur, but cannot so easily be carried on or covered up by reason of red tape and political influence. The responsibility is more directly fixed and misconduct easier reached and punished under the military system, even if the supposed superior sense of honor among its officers afforded no greater security for honest management in matters of this kind.

Columbus Items.

The Miner of the 19th speaks highly of the Wilton troupe which played to good houses two nights. It also gives these items:

This morning the boiler and engine of Gen. Page's new mill for Gold Mountain passed through town on a train driven by Pittman. It is to be hoped not many months will wax and wane before the echoes of this mill, borne on the wings of zepyrs, shall die away over the wastes of Death Valley.

Gen. Page, T. J. Meadows and D. Campbell, jr., of Alida, and Richard Hubbard, of Gold Mountain, passed through on their way to attend the Republican County Convention at Aurora ....Mr. R. M. Johnson had gone to Bishop Creek, accompanied by Alex. Spencer, to settle on a ranch which he had recently purchased of Mr. Welch of Bishop Creek.

The Republicans and Democrats had, the previous Saturday, both held primaries and elected a full set of delegates.

Local Option at Bishop Creek.

BISHOP CREEK, Sept. 19, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Pursuant to an invitation by Busy Bee and Oasis Lodges, I. O. G. T., Grand Lecturer Jabez Walker arrived here Sunday, the 13th instant. He met with and presided at a meeting of Oasis Lodge on Monday evening; kindly and affably gave some instructions to, and modestly complimented the lodge, and made appropriate suggestions relating to the advancement of the temperance cause. Tuesday evening here, Wednesday evening in Round Valley and Thursday evening here again, he lectured to audiences too large to get into the houses, and many stood at the doors and windows to hear.

His addresses were characterized by a common sense, matter of fact style that commended them to the intelligence of nearly all of his auditors, being frequently interrupted by rounds of hearty applause. In Round Valley and here on Thursday evening, Mrs. L. Hutchison met with Mr. Walker and delivered address in favor of license.

Referring to this, Mr. Walker remarked that he had been lecturing steadily on temperance for the last 12 years, in England, Scotland, Ireland and the United States, and this was the first instance where a woman—the greatest sufferers by the sale and use of liquors—had taken the stand and spoken in defense of the saloons. Adding, "I am sorry! I am sorry! I am sorry!" And it is fair to presume that his sentiments were reciprocated by nearly all of his hearers, as it has been remarked that some of the most ardent of the license advocates said, "she has done our side more harm than good."

here was one long to be remembered with pleasure. According to previous arrangement, the ladies of Bishop furnished us with a sumptuous feast of good things at the Baptist Church, where there was enough and to spare of all that was needed for the refreshment of the inner man. As is usually the case on such occasions, some persons in making arrangements have to take a more active part than all can do; so now, some individuals would be more especially entitled to mention, were I giving names, but these are "too numerous to mention." For the ladies, almost without exception, gave of their bounty and added to the interest of the occasion by their presence, cheering smiles and encouraging words; they are enshrined in the memories and possibly in the hearts of our citizens. God bless the ladies! May their influence and banner of right wave over the land, our race to cheer, bless and save.

The day passed with naught to mar the feelings or pleasure of any present. All seemed to vie with each other in the observance of gentlemanly and lady like decorum; all, both for and against license, were law abiding citizens willing to allow the majority to rule. But one person seen at the polls was under the influence of liquor, and he was respectful and civil, and has since declared his intention to "strike for right and temperance."

The result was about 8 o'clock P. M. declored to be "Against License." [See returns elsewhere.] Personal and general congratulations are now the order of the day, mingled with the expression of wishes that the Supreme Court will confirm the legality of the law.

PARTAKER.

A gentleman at Lake George, after waving his handkerchief for half an hour or more at an unknown lady, whom he discovered at a distant point on the shore, was encouraged by a warm response to his signals to approach his charmer. Imagine his feelings when on drawing nearer he saw that it was his own dear wife, whom he had left at the hotel but a short time before. "Why, how remarkable we should have recognized each other at such a distance," exclaimed both in the same breath, and then they changed the subject.

BORN.

At Virginia City, Nevada, Sept. 16, to the wife of Jas. E. Parker, a daughter.

"It's a girl—anti female suffrager, no crusader," writes our junior, the proud dad. "Both doing splendidly, and everything is lovely," is the concluding sentence given with a Spencerian flourish indicating that the writer is sensible of an increase in personal altitude not less than several inches. We would remind him there's lots of girl babies in this world.

The Lectures.

State Lecturer Jabez Walker delivered a Sunday lecture at the Post, and on Monday and Wednesday evenings did some very effective and sensible talking here. He is a most earnest and energetic worker in the temperance cause, and is doing a good and noble work. We cannot now undertake even a synopsis of either of his addresses, but as time and opportunities serve shall present the more salient points of his arguments. But this we will say, that, in whatever light he presented the claims of temperance, whether voluntary or enforced, whether in a moral, physical or general business point of view—his arguments and the facts were and are so convincing that no reasonable man would ever appeal to reason to refute them, because reason and common sense must decide the arguments in favor of absolute temperance as irrefutable. It's a fight against human perversity and weakness, nothing more. Shall the spider be permitted to spread his alluring web and entangle and suck dry and cast out victim after victim, and all that he may wax fat and raise up and educate other web-builders to entrap and destroy other hundreds of weakly victims? Reason and justice says no; perversity and weakness says yes: let the sheep use their judgment and not approach the jungle where the tiger lies ready to pounce them. The shepherd says his sheep must be protected, and politely enough notifies the handsomely spotted destroyer to move on; the jungle must be cleared up because it is miasmatic and inimical in every way to every thing except beasts of prey. And the jungles and webs are being cleared away.

Mineral Patents

Mr. J. W. Searles, representative of the several companies who have heretofore applied for patents to borax lands at Borax Lake, is now here before the Land Office perfecting the papers necessary before the patents can issue. These are for four patents, each for 160 acres. There are about one hundred and fifty similar claims located around the lake, but nothing is being done upon any but those belonging to Searles & Co., an account of whose works and operations we gave last week. Most of these outside locations, it is thought, will prove of little or no value. Messrs. Searles & Co. have expended some $12 000 upon their works and claims, and have yet considerable to do before the former are completed to plans Fifteen hands, mostly Chinamen, are now emplayed in the manufacture. The works are about a mile and a half south of the Inyo and San Bernardino line, and that much within the latter county.

The Vote.

The returns from the Bishop Creek and Round Valley Local Option election, held last Friday, are as follows: Bishop Creek—whole number of votes, 108; for License, 26; against License, 82. Round Valley—for License, 6; against License, 19, making a total majority in the two precincts against whisky of 69 votes out of 133 which ought to be pretty satisfactory. A more determined, energetic set of people are not to be found than those Bishop Creekers, which means Round Valley as well. When they tell a rough to get up and get he travels, and when they want a peaceable election (and they don't want any other), that's the way it turns out. It would be a good place for those Alameda hoodlums to come to take a lesson or two.

Arrived.

Rev. Geo. Jennings, late Pastor of the M. E church at Gold Hill, Nevada, and now Pastor in charge, and Acting Elder of the Owens Valley work, arrived on Thursday last. He came down in his own conveyance, traveling some forty miler a day, preaching six sermons en route, which is pretty good work. Mr. Jennings has spent many years in the service of the church, and in every way will doubtless prove a valuable acquisition to our section.

Obligations.

We have to note quite a coincidence in the sweet potato line, and a very agreeable one withal. From Col. Stevens, down at the Lake thirty miles distant, comes a box of very fine sweet potatoes, and the same day comes another, of the same excellent but rare production for this valley, at the hands of Mr. Thos. Bell from his place at Big Pine, thirty miles in the opposite direction, with complements in both cases. Thank you much, gentlemen.

School.

Miss M. Graham will begin a six months' term of the public school for this place next Monday week, October 5th. In the meantime the old school house is to be caulked up somewhat so as to keep out some of the coarsest of the weather, and also to prevent the smaller pupils from missing recitations by slipping through the cracks. The Trustees are not going to have any foolishness of that kind if patching up will prevent it.

Preaching.

Rev. Geo. Jennings will preach at the school house here to-morrow evening, begining at 7:15 promptly. At Lone Pine on the following Sunday, October 4, at 11 A. M., George's Creek at 3 P. M., and here in the evening. Services will begin promptly at the time named in each instance.

The Virginia Consolidated.

The developments in this mine are now sufficient to prove it not only a permanent mine containing immense quanties of quartz but vast quanties of quartz of astonishing richness. Dr. R. P. Chase, of whose visit we made mention at the time, took down a lot of the ores in three lots, selected and finally assayed with a view of obtaining a fair and honest estimate of the value of the entire deposit as now exposed. The lot mentioned below as number three was a clayey substance, not less than a hundred tons of which have been thrown over the dump as of too little probable value to be worth saving. The other two lots were from a five-foot solid vein of similar ore. The ledge on the tunnel floor is ten feet wide by actual measurement, being nine inches wider than at the top of the tunnel. The walls are as perfectly defined as they ever are in any mine. Lot No. 1 gave an assay value per ton—silver, 401.38 ozs., equal to $521,79; gold, 7.32 ozs., equal to $151,30, and a total for both of $673,07 per ton. Lot No. 2 gave 253.15 ozs. silver, and 3.782 ozs. gold; total, $407,26. Lot No. 3, the clayey stuff, yielded 30.50 ozs silver and 0.342 gold, a total value of $46,72 per ton. The work now being done is raising an air shaft to the original shaft. The raise is now up 36 feet, altogether in the "gouge" and hanging wall, leaving the ledge undisturbed with the view of first ventilating and getting the mine in good working shape and condition before beginning to take out ore in quantities, for which there will be no need before next Spring. The raise will have to be continued 100 feet higher to reach the bottom of the shaft, which is 76 feet deep. It is a splendid mine without doubt.

For Panamint.

A party comprising some of our solid business men started on Wednesday for the above camp. They were J. Cohn, T. F. A. Connelly and Isaac Harris, of Harris & Rhine, of this place John Sheppard, of George's Creek, J. J. McCall and A. H. Johnson and perhaps others, of Lone Pine. A prime object in view is to see what can or will be done in reference to the proposed wagon road from the foot of the lake. It is thought a better route can be found than that via Darwin Canyon, in which case that will be abandoned If not, then sufficient assistance will be rendered Briggs & Co., who hold the right to build a road, to enable them to push it forward at once. It is a great loss to this section, particularly farmers, that the road is not open now. It would have opened a good market for every pound of our surplus productions, and that this market will be greatly needed to get rid of these supplies seems to be a settled fact. Next year we confidently anticipate that our entire surplus will find a good market much nearer home in the several new camps that will then surely be fairly under way, but this Fall a considerable amount of produce is certain to go begging for buyers unless this Panamint road is opened up. Hundreds of tons of stuff are now being shipped in from San Bernardino, most all of which could have been supplied from this direction at equally low rates to the consumer and at less cost to the shipper, because our route is much shorter and affords a chance for a far superior road.

Affrays.

Two affrays, deadly weapons figuring in both, are reported, one out at Lida the other at Panamint, but we have only heard results without names in either case. At Lida a primary election was being held, the point at issue being for or against Gen. Page for Governor. The opposition was pretty strong, and when it was found that Page had more votes counted out of the box than could have been legitimately voted into it, bad blood was engendered between two of the voters, causing one to stand over the other with a big butcher knife prepared to amputate the arm of his opponent the moment he brought his revolver in sight, as he was apparently trying to do. But he had no pistol, so the other party dropped his formidable weapon, sailed in and chawed him up as per the P. R. rules.... The row at Panamint resulted in one of the parties receiving two shots in the leg, but whether of an effectual nature or not is not stated, nor any other particulars. These two camps are about a hundred miles distant from each other and about the same from this place, the three forming nearly an equi-lateral triangle, but that fact does not facilitate the transmission of news, which generally requires from one to three weeks to get around, and then in a very imperfect state, as in these instances.

Assault and Battery.

Last Saturday, at Lone Pine, Henry Church, hostler at the stage stables took umbrage at something that P. P Dow, our old pioneer driver, had said and gave him a most brutal beating A warrant was issued, and yesterday Church was brought before Justice Gunnison to answer a charge of assault and battery. He plead guilty and was fined $50 cash or 50 days in jail. The fine will be paid.

Habeaus Corpus.

Wm. Callahan, by his attorney V. A. Gregg, Esq., sued out a writ of habeas corpus The matter was argued Monday last before County Judge Hannah, who decided to remand the prisoner to custody under $2,000 bonds Callahan gave bonds and is now at liberty.

Found Dead.

A well known engineer of this State, Wm. Wilson, by name, was found dead on the road between Musquit Springs Station and Panamint a few days ago. He had evidently been dead several days, death being caused from hemorrhage of the lungs.

Good Templar Lodge Organized.

We are pleased to know that another Good Templar Lodge for this valley has been organized and set to work at Big Pine. It was organized last Friday by State Lecturer Walker, assisted by several members of Oasis and Busy Bee Lodges, and was christened "Silver Leaf," which is a very pretty name. Following is a list of its officers: C. H. Walcott, W. C. T.; A. G. McMurry, W. V. T.; D. Hessian, W. S.; W. P. McMurry, W. T.; A. L. Pollock, W. F. S.; Mrs. Burgess, W. C.; Chas. Sears, W. M.; Dora McMurry, W. D. M.; E. R. Norris, W. I. G.; Frank Sears, W. O. G.; C. H. Walcott, L. D.; Jane McMurry, W. R. H. S.; Eddy Welch, W. L. H. S.

Freights.

The Jones and Stewart companies now have not less than 800 tons of freight, lumber, machinery and supplies of various kinds, now in course of shipment to Panamint, all of which Carter & Co. contract to transport from San Bernardino over a road yet mostly to be constructed. It is altogether probable that every pound of this and of other immense amounts to follow, might have been determined to a road from this direction if it had been looked to in time by our road builders and bullion shippers, to the latter of which it would have afforded good profits as back freights.

Credit.

State Lecturer Walker requests us to state that it was Mr. C. H. Walcott, and not himself, who first made the timely discovery of the error in size of the Local Option tickets at Bishop Creek.

Accident.

B. L. Brown, of the Pioneer stables, is out of luck. A week or two since he sprained his ankle quite severely, and had about recovered, when to-day the same mishap occurred again.

Interesting from Panamint.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

PANAMINT, INYO CO., CAL., Sept. 20.

MESSRS. EDS.—Our camp is growing at a rapid rate, receiving material accessions to its population daily. Work on the Jacob's mill has been considerably retarded by lack of lumber. The company's mine is developing to the satisfaction of all. The Jones company are now on their way from San Francisco, and will start up work immediately on their arrival. This company will employ between

TWO AND THREE HUNDRED MEN.

The machinery for their 20 stamp mill has been ordered, and the contract let for building it.

Mr. Louis Felsenthral of San Francisco, and a well known merchant of the coast, came here, and after an examination of the mines, immediately started for a stock of goods, and to the astonishment of everybody, is back again with a splendid assortment of general merchandise.

CONSIDERABLE EXCITEMENT

prevails here now over a rumor that a certain company of this place intend to employ Chinamen in working their mines, and that a large force of them is now en route from Los Angeles. I would sugget to any parties desiring to introduce coolie labor that it would be well to provide themselves with balloons. The canyon is very narrow, in places not over ten feet in width, and the boys to a man swear that for the purpose of working in the capacity of miners. In view of this fact their only recourse will be by balloon, as the only entrance is through the canyon.

FOUND DEAD.

Wm. Wilson, a man well known in this state, was discovered lying dead near the trail leading from the Hot Springs in Panamint valley, about 15 miles from this place. For a year or more deceased has been subject to attacks of bleeding at the lungs, and his death was not unexpected. Mr. Wilson had many warm friends who will be pained to learn of his sad fate. He was an engineer by profession, and served with Capt. Messic in his expedition against the Mad River and Klamath Indians in 1857-8-9. He was a good soldier and beloved by the entire command; subsequently enlisted in a California regiment, and served with distinction throughout the Rebellion.

PANAMINT.

Execrable.

A friend of ours, and a half Granger, living down the country, eat eight or ten melons more or less and went sloshing to bed. The following, as related in a private letter conveys a faint idea of his sufferings:

The melon-colic days have come, the wettest of the year.

The irrigating season is nearly over, and dam(n)s are not so prevalent as they were.

In a few days the corn will be ripe and the festive Granger, with the tearful sickle in hand, will sally forth to cut it. The same festive Granger may be seen shortly afterward sallying forth from the corn to get his shins bound up with sticking plaster. It is astonishing how many Grangers will persist in imagining their shins are corn-stalks.

The Moulton days are nearly over and the hens have commenced nest-hiding.

"They" say the steamer on the lake is nothing but an old Woodhull and keeps Tilton from side to side, and they're going to Beech her.

Physiologists say that our Bodies are renewed once in seven years. The material of which they are reconstructed is the blood, and unless it be fully charged with the elements of vitality the strengh and health of the system decline. Of all blood depurents, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS is the safest and most infallible. There is no disease arising from the deprivation of the blood which it will not speedily cure.

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

How to Paint. For mechanics, merchants, farmers, and a guide to the professional painter. Methods in plain and fancy painting, including gilding, bronzing, staining, graining, marbling, varnishing, polishing, kalsomining, paper hanging, striping, lettering, copying and ornamenting, mixing paint, tools required, etc. $1.

Life at Home; or The Family and its Members. Husbands, wives, parents, children, brothers, sisters. Rev. Wm. Aikman, D. D. $1 50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young of Both Sexes. Formation of character, choice of avocation, health, amusement, music, conversation, cultivation of intellect, moral sentiment, social affection, courtship and marriage. $1 50.

Wedlock; or The Right Relations of the Sexes. Laws of conjugal selection; showing who may and who may not marry. Wells. $1 50.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Redwood,

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 18, 1869

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essential. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with the BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory or Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints,—in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

[illegible] prevented the armed interference of France and perhaps England in behalf of the South. We are enabled to lay before our readers trustworthy information never before published in support of the truth of this rumor.

When Gov. Curtin, on the eve of his return to this country, went in his capacity as Minister to Russia to take formal leave of the Emperor, the latter closed the conversation substantially in these words: "I wish, sir, that you would upon your return express my hearty thanks to the American people for the reception they have given my son, the Grand Duke Alexis." This, it will be remembered was shortly after Gen. Grant had refused to return Alexis' call, and the latter had left Washington in disgust. Gov. Curtin noticed the Emperor's failure to send thanks to the Government as well as the people. He supposed, however, that it was a slip of the tongue until the Empress bade farewell in almost precisely the same words. "I shall be happy," said he, "to carry your Majesty's thanks to my Government and people." "I sent my thanks, sir," the Empress retorted, "to the people—and only to the people." Gov. Curtin afterward publicly complained of the slight which had been publicly put upon the Government he represented. He was invited by Gotschakoff to a conference on the subject. Three books were brought in from the archives of the foreign office. The first contained an autograph letter from Napoleon III, asking Russia to join with England and France in breaking up the Federal blockade and guaranteeing the independence of the Confederacy. The letter asserted that England had already promised her co-operation, which was probably a lie. The second book contained the Emperor's reply. He flatly declined the alliance proposed by Napoleon, and declared that in the event of any European interference in the war Russia would actively aid the North. The third book had within it copies of the sealed orders given to the Russian Admiral who, as our readers will remember, brought his fleet into New York harbor during the war. The orders directed him to proceed at once, with his whole available force, to New York city; to remain at anchorage there for some time; and in the event of European interference with the blockade, to put himself and his whole force at the command of the Cabinet at Washington, and promise abundant and speedy reinforcements. While Gov. Curtin stared dumbfounded at these unexpected proofs of Russia's fidelity to the Union cause, Gortschakoff said to him: "Perhaps you can appreciate now, sir, why the Emperor and Empress sent their thanks to the people who have honored the Grand Duke Alexis, and not to the Government that has insulted him. We saved your country, and now your President insults our representative. It is too much." Curtin quite agreed with him, and the interview ended.

We have every reason to trust the gentleman from whom we have received this story. It will probably be found substantially correct, although there may, of course, be errors in detail.

—John Lambert, who killed Levi Tidrow in a brothel at Los Angeles, was then convicted of [illegible], that being the verdict asked for by the District Attorney.

Waste in Lead Smelting Works.

[From The Eureka Sentinel.]

In a paper read before the American Institute of Mining Engineers, at the St. Louis May meeting, by A. Eilers, M. E., some interesting figures were given tending to prove that the loss in ordinary smelting operations is very heavy. "I have had the good fortune," said the author, "of persuading some friends in charge of smelting works—the one in Eureka, Nevada, the other in Utah—to communicate to me the losses incurred at their works. I am thankful to them for this favor, as they have, for the benefit of the public, disregarded the danger of divulging company secrets; and because they have conquered their professional pride to the extent of acknowledging extraordinarily large losses for the sake of truth."

The loss is described as occasioned by the escape of the furnace dust, and by the neglect to work the matte and spiess formed. In the Flagstaff, Last Chance and Wasatch furnaces, in Utah, experiments showed that on the dry assay value of the ore the loss was on lead, 15 to 20 per cent.; on silver 12 to 15½; and on gold, 12 per cent. In one work, where there were condensation chambers, 76,254 pounds of dust collected, when worked over, yielded 15,000 pounds of lead and 800 ounces of silver; but even in this work, after allowing for what remained in the slag, there was an actual loss in uncaught dust of 20.7 per cent. lead of the ore contents, and 8.1 of silver. If no matte had been saved and no dust caught, the loss would have been 38.3 per cent. on lead, and 17.4 on silver, or in the total value 26.8 per cent. In another case the loss in value was 15.3 per cent., so that the average of the two cases cited was over 20 per cent., or one fifth of the entire value of the ore smelted.

In the Eureka works the lead saved [illegible] 82.3 [illegible] gold, 96.4, and [illegible] per cent. in spiess, [illegible] and in slag 0.6. At another of our works the product for a year is stated at 81 per cent. for lead and 85 for precious metals, the loss in this case being 10 per cent. in dust and 5 per cent in spiess. A comparison of the figures relative to our district with those relating to Utah works shows very plainly that we are incurring quite so large a loss here as is sustained in that Territory; yet it is also made evident that our ores are not smelted so closely up to the fire assay as they ought to be. Improvements will, no doubt, be made in the future tending to reduce the loss to the lowest possible minimum. We have collated these figures from a recent number of The Engineering and Mining Journal.

Coal Formations on the Coast.

At the San Francisco Academy of Sciences, September 21, Dr. J. G Cooper, late of the State Geological Society, gave some information regarding the coal deposits of the Coast range:

The press had been constantly announcing rich discoveries in all directions, but the supposed coal mines were really of no value whatever, as the geological student could readily determine without the possibility of question. The discoveries usually amounted to small streaks of lignite, as he had found by examining about one hundred different coal mines between this point and San Diego, and also north of the Bay. Miners in the State are generally ignorant of the form in which coal deposits exist, and on discovering a small vein outcropping, they suppose that it enlarges as it descends into the earth, as in the case of metallic deposits. It always exists in seams, whether vertical or horizontal. There is very little coal in the Coast range, and this is of the lignite variety. The genuine coal is a formation of such vegetable matter as ferns and algæ, and belongs to the cretaceous formation, while the lignite exhibits the trunks of trees, and is of the pliocene period. No paying deposits of coal are found anywhere in the world of a later formation than the cretaceous, and this is a fact which coal prospectors should bear in mind. Dr. Cooper had visited many places between here and San Diego, where supposed mines were being worked, and capital being sunk with no probability whatever of any return being realized. The lignite in this State appears to be thin deposits on the shores of fresh water lakes, as shown by the character of the fossils with which it is associated. It may be found in some places in sufficient quantities for local consumption, but it is generally worthless for most purposes in consequence of the excess of sulphur it contains.

A Wonderful Horse.

The black stallion Blackbird, in his second trotting heat yesterday, after scoring sixteen times, and trotting not less than three miles during said scoring, made the heat in 2:22! This is certainly the best stallion record ever made in California, and, all things considered, probably the best ever made anywhere. A contest between Blackbird and Sam Purdy are now in order, and we respectfully suggest that the officers of the association tender the "off" purse to encourage the race—say on Friday or Saturday. It is not unlikely that one or the other of them would score below "Smuggler's" best heat, and transfer the honor of the best stallion time from Mystic Park to our own State.—[Sacramento Union, Sept. 28.

A Grand Enterprise.

[From The Dover Chronicle.]

The project of constructing a tunnel between England and France is assuming a practical phase. The capitalists and engineers embarked in this gigantic enterprise demand a concession of thirty years, instead of ninety-nine, usually accorded railway companies, and ask for neither guarantee nor grant. Further, they are ready to advance the sum of four millions for preliminary investigations. The project in question consists in the emerging of a duct on the English and French coasts, and the boring of two long galleries from each side. On the result of the enterprise, says The Journal de Calais there can be no doubt. The soul of the enterprise, with MM. Michael Chevalier, Leon Say and Rothschild, is M. Lavaley, an engineer who has surmounted the greatest difficulties in the construction of the Suez canal, and without whom that enterprise could not have been accomplished. M. Lavaley estimates the cost of the work at 150,000,000 of francs; the English engineers think it will amount to 250,000,000. He suggests that this work should be done partly by France and partly by England, and to induce these two countries to press on this undertaking energetically there should be a bonus for the one which works the fastest. The 4,000,000 francs forming the preliminary capital are nearly all, it is said subscribed. The French Railway du Nord will advance 1,000,000, the two companies from London to Dover 1,000,000 and Baron Rothschild 500,000 francs. It is hoped that Baron Lionel de Rothschild will subscribe the same sum. M. Ferdinand Duval offers 50,000 for the city of Paris; MM. Leon Say, Chevalier and Levaley are each engaged to supply 25,000,000 francs.

It is certain that on either side of the strait many persons will contribute large or small sums to the necessary capital. It only requires a little good will on the part of the French Administration and a slight change of the ideas of the English Parliament on the subjects of monopoly and competition, to give in five years direct communication between Paris and London.

Justice Chase.

The recently published life of Chief Justice Chase exhibit many remarkably noble traits of character in that man. In a letter to Jay Cooke he authorized the purchase of some stock, which he expected to pay for out of the proceeds of the sale of a farm in Ohio. The farm was not sold, however, and Cooke resold the stock and remitted Mr. Chase over $4,000 as profits. This Mr. Chase returned, lest it should be made a lever to affect his relations with Cooke. On another occasion, Daniel Drew subscribed $10,000 to a Methodist church in Washington—half in the name of the President and half in that of Chase. Mr. Chase wrote after his name: "Paid by the liberality of Drew." "Others were not so scrupulous," naively adds Mr. Chase's biographer.

Two Bidders.

The lowest bidder for the contract to supply the Postoffice Department with stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers is a clerk in a paper manufactory at Holyoke, Mass., and the next lowest is a stationer from Springfield, Mass. To ascertain the responsibility of these gentlemen, and their ability to fufill the contract, the Postmaster General has sent two officers of the Department to Massachusetts, who will return in a few days and make their report. —[Ex.

BUSINESS.

That's the word now with our business men. They mean business, and the business is to make a good road to Panamint just as soon as men and money can do it. This is the result of the trip made over the ground by Messrs. Harris, Cohn, Shepherd, McCall and Johnson, all of whom have returned full in the belief that it is a shame to the enterprise of this county that this road has not been built weeks ago. Of the camp itself, it is sufficient to say that several of the parties purchased lots in the town of Panamint with the view of building and establishing business houses there immediately. They all took a look at the mines, and all agree that the prospects for a permanent and extensive camp are as encouraging as any reasonable person could desire. Examining the routes for a road, that by Darwin Canyon was pronounced impracticable, while that via Coso is not only feasible and shorter but will cheaper admit of as good a road as any in this valley. A meeting was held here on Thursday, at which it was resolved to proceed to raise money by subscription and build the road at once. Tolls are to be collected on the road, and the company eventually incorporated, each subscriber to receive stock in proportion to his subscription. In a few hours yesterday morning Mr. Harris succeeded in raising $2,280, payable the middle of the present month. Lone Pine will probably do nearly as well, and make up the required amount, which will be less than $5,000 with good management, which may be considered assured, since a thorough going, practical and energetic man, Mr. John Shepherd, is to be Superintendent of Construction, assisted by Mr. J. L. Darrah, both of whom go on the road and to work at once.

The whole length of this road from Independence (not the foot of the lake) to Panamint will not exceed 110 miles. The road from San Bernardino is not less than 175 miles, and almost a continuous desert. But San Bernardino has enterprising men. While some of our Inyo freighters were cogitating about what figure they ought to have to transport several hundred tons of freight into Panamint for the Stewart and Jones companies, finally offering to do it at pretty high rates, San Bernardino stepped in and said they could and would do it for less money, although they had no road yet, and got the contract. They then went to work to build their road, putting on 200 men of their own, the companies helping with as many more. And Panamint thinks the Inyo people are slow coaches. But some of the right men have gone to the front now, so in not exceeding four weeks from date we can safely count on having at least a passable, and soon after a good wagon road by which the Panaminters can comfortably be hauled to the Court House—and jail, when that alternative is necessary. That is, direct communication will be established from the most important mining camp in the county to the county seat, and a valuable market opened for all our spare produce. Moreover, it is quite probable that the bulk of the freighting for Panamint both ways will be, sooner or later, via this road, as it has several important advantages for that purpose over any yet proposed.

A Distinguished Arrival.

There arrived in Virginia City yesterday, direct from France, a distinguished representative of the French Government. Reference is here made to M. Sauvage, of the Corps of French Mining Engineers. M. Sauvage has been commissioned by his Government to visit the great silver mines on the Pacific Coast, and to make an elaborate report of their condition, method of working, character of their ore, yield, etc. The gentliman brings letters of introduction to prominent gentlemen here, among them one from M. Michel Chevalier, one of the most distinguished mining engineers in the world, and a member of the French Academy. M. Sauvage has already expressed the greatest wonder at the extent of our mining interests, and his report upon the great Comstock lode will doubtless be a valuable contribution to science.—[Virginia Independent.

The "Escape Box."

It is stated in the reports of the different prisons of Paris that five or six thieves die annually in goal from the effects of swallowing this box. It is of polished steel, about three inches long, and contains turnscrews, hammers, silk thread and every implement necessary for escape. The box is easily swallowed, but sometimes refuses to glide along the intestinal canal as expected, and often causes death. When, however, it does appear the thief is in possession of implements with which he can saw through the thickest bars.

NO ELECTION.

The alcoholic brethern throughout the county generally were much exercised in their minds and pockets on account of the late sweeping victory of the temperance people at Bishop Creek, and have doubtlesr laid awake o'nights trying to devise some method to render the election a nullity, one way or another. They decided to take counsel in the matter in the hope that some one of two or three plans thought of might, with such help, be made sufficient to prevent the canvass of the vote by the Board, which met for the purpose last Monday; or, failing in that, to raise a legal question to keep before the Courts, something after the Oakland plan.

With this object in view a delegation gave P. Reddy, Esq., a retainer, and stated their grounds for hope. It seems that Reddy didn't think any of these plans would hold water, or gin more properly speaking, and the aspect was not encouraging. But referring to the terms of the proclamation ordering the election, in connection with the political divisions of the county, Mr. Reddy made a discovery which is not only of importance as showing that this Local Option election was not legal, but that the same fact applies to all our previous elections since the establishment of the Big Pine precinct, and will continue to do so until a change in the boundaries of the precinct is made to make them conform to the requirements of the Political Code, section 1130, as we shall presently see. In an ordinary election the only question affecting the legality of the vote of that precinct was because it embraces part of two townships, which is contrary to the provisions of the section referred to; the same rule would also have been applicable to its vote if polls had been opened there in this election; also, for another reason, which we shall presently make plain, the election was illegal because the polls were not opened; either way, the election is void under the law, as Mr. Reddy satisfactorily explained in a somewhat lengthy and quite able argument before the Board. As other duties made it impracticable for us to be present during any portion of the proceedings, we have only hearsay for an explanation of this paradoxical legal problem—that is, that this election was illegal because one precinct did not vote and would have been no less so if it had. Another issue as to the validity of the election was argued, which was that the Board neglected to officially designate the particular paper (there being none published in the township) for the publication of the order for the election, as provided in the Local Option law itself. Of this, however, we shall not speak further than to say that we do not think that omission alone, under existing circumstances, would have invalidated this election.

The points are, first, that no legal precinct can exist embracing parts of two or more (voting) townships, as does Big Pine; second, that except in case of an incorporated city or town, the entire township must be affected by an election of any kind except for school purposes; and, third, that every precinct must be given a poll in such election; otherwise its voters are disfranchised, practically the result in this instance, since the voters of a portion of Big Pine precinct, though in the same township with the two in which the election had been ordered, had no opportunity to vote at home, and could not legally do so in either of the others where polls were held pursuant to law. Yet, as it turns out, Big Pine was affected equally with the others in the result of the election, and such being the facts, no form of an election could be valid or legally binding which deprived one precinct among several from voting on a question equally affecting all. True, it was not in contemplation by anyone to include Big Pine in this issue in any manner, the election being petitioned and ordered for Supervisor District No. 1, comprising Round Valley and Bishop Creek precincts only, Big Pine being in another Supervisor District, but in the same township with those two precincts. The following diagram will make the situation easier understood:

To recapitulate: Big Pine embraces part of two townships, Nos. 4 and 1, which is not in accordance with the law. The election was ordered for Supervisor District No. 1 (which does not include any portion of Big Pine precinct), in township No. 4 (which does include a portion of Big Pine precinct). This portion being equally interested with the remainder of the township in the result of the election as the law reads, but having no chance to vote because no polls were ordered opened in the precinct, the election held in the other two precincts of the township is null and void. The same result would have followed if the polls had been opened for the other reason named, viz. that a precinct cannot be composed of parts of two or more townships, as in this instance.

We offer these statements, both in reference to geographical facts and the laws in support of the legal aspects of the case, as susceptible of proof by the county records and the laws quoted by Mr. Reddy, not deeming it essential to an understanding of the points at issue to occupy space with references and quotations. The diagram needs, perhaps, no explanation, but we will say that the black lines represent the exterior boundaries of township No. 4, and that included in these, but all north of the upper transverse dotted line, is Supervisor District No. 1, which portion of the township was alone intended to be affected in this election. From the dotted line south to Big Pine creek is four miles.

The Board decided that the election was not legal, in effect that no election had been held, so that another can be ordered at any time in due course. It is their intention and duty under the law to re-arrange and define township and precinct lines so that no more difficulties of this kind may arise in Local Option or any other election. The plan will probably be to make Supervisor District No. 1. as it now stands, voting township No. 4., comprising precincts Nos. 5 and 6 only. This will throw the whole of precinct No. 7 into township No. 1, and obviate any further disturbance of established precinct or township lines. Then the alcoholic brethern will have to hunt up a new prop to keep open the doors of the tarantula mills when the people, four to one, say they don't want 'em open.

In conclusion we will add that Mr. D. E. Hunter, who represented the Local Option side of the question, took commendable pains to have a full and fair investigation of the case or its merits, and further that Mr. Reddy, as he stated in his argument, only appeared in the case as counsel, by no means as an opponent of the Local Option law, for which under proper circumstances he should vote—that the question of law now at issue involved the legality of all our county elections, to avoid which he now contended for a decision adverse to this, our first expression in this county upon the temperance question.

So the wholesale dealers in San Francisco can raise the price a few cents and add a little more prussic acid and water, and buy a higher priced pew nearer the pulpit, because their hands on the mines and farms of Inyo will continue to contribute their earnings for their use, same as usual.

Need Killing.

We fondly hope to hear soon of a most sudden and sweeping fatality among the three-card ruffians and conductors on the Central Pacific railroad. We can think of no place where there is a prettier opening for a profitable and laudable Vigilante business than right on the passenger cars on that road. People who don't like to be trampled under foot and generally abused because they don't want to bet at the thieving games, or inevitably robbed if they do, must travel by steamer, or at all events keep clear of the Central Pacific. But where should thieves more naturally flock to ply their calling in safety than under the protecting care of that corporation? As one instance among a number reported every week, a few days since a card signed by 100 passengers was published setting forth the abuses they suffered at the hands of robbers and three-card monte thieves on a train at or near Reno. They say their train was literally captured by these desperadoes; that they went through the cars cursing and striking the passengers, brandishing knives and pistols and threatening to cut them in pieces or blow their brains out. They further state that when not engaged in their outrages upon the passengers the robbers repair to the conductor's apartment or caboose on the emigrant train, and fraternise, and probably divide, with him fair and lovingly.

The Candidates.

It seems to be pretty well settled that Dr. Hazlett (already nominated by the Republican convention at Winnemucca) and Gov. Bradley are to be the party nominees for Governor of Nevada. The Independents will scarcely nominate for that office, but talk of R. M. Clarke for their candidate for the U. S. Senate.

—The Prince of Wales has accepted the position of Grand Master of the Masonic fraternity of England.

Pacific Coast News.

It is estimated that the debt of Oregon at the close of the present session of the Legislature—independent of all debts that shall be created by that body—will amount to $837,283 91.

The Alden fruit dryer at Los Angeles was to begin operations the present week.

Every wagon and team in San Bernardino has been pressed into the service in meeting the emergency of transporting freights to Panamint, and immense supplies of corn, hay, etc., are being purchased.

There are twenty-four places in Winnemucca, Nevada, where liquor is sold at wholesale or retail, and yet the town can boast of a flourishing temperance organization.

Southern News.

Kellogg's captured private and official letters reveal the fact that many Senators and others higher in power, were bribed to support his infamous government in Louisiana. Among the rest of the rascals are Ben Butler and Senators Carpenter and West.

No compromise has been agreed upon yet between Kellogg and McEnery, and affairs look threatening. Kellogg is alarmed and wants to resign, but his pals won't let him.

Notwithstanding the alleged truce and peace now existing in South Carolina between the whire and black races, it is the opinion of persons present that a very bitter feeling prevails, and that a general outbreak may occur at any time. Governor Moses, the thief and swindler, asked the President for troops to keep the peace in Edgefield county. The request was promptly refused, and later news shows that no trouble exists in that county.

The Democratic Nominations.

The full ticket nominated by the Nevada Democratic State Convention at Carson, September 29, is as follows: For Governor, L. R. Bradley; for Lieutenant Governor, Jewett W. Adams; for Congress, A. C. Ellis; for Judge of Supreme Court (long term), A. M. Hillhouse; for Judge of Supreme Court (short term), C. H. Belknap; for Attorney-General, J. R. Kittrell; for Clerk of the Supreme Court, B. H. Hereford; for Secretary of State, C. D. Spires; for Controller, T. R. Cranley; for Treasurer, Jerry Schooling; for Surveyor-General, G. Haist; for Superintendent of Public Instruction, E. Spencer; for State Mineralogist, W. Frank Stewart; for State Printer, J. J. Hill. W. E. F. Deal was elected Chairman of the State Central Committee. The Convention then adjourned sine die.

Republican Nominations.

The Nevada State Republican Convention met in Winnemucca, September 24, at 12 M. Judge J. F. Lewis was made temporary President. After six ballots Dr. J. C. Hazlett was nominated for Governor; Wm. Woodburn for Congress; Judge Beatty, of White Pine, for Supreme Judge, long term; Warden Earl, of Elko, for the short term; Charles F. Bicknell for Supreme Clerk; J. D. Miner for Secretary of State; L. I. Hogle, of Eureka, for State Treasurer. The Convention adjourned at 9 o'clock till 10 the following day.

The General's Opinion.

Gen. John B. Winters and George Gibson, of the Sazerac, says The Carson Tribune of Sept. 16, returned yesterday from a visit to the mine in the Pinenut District. The General says the ledge looks better than ever, and the ore sent to Sacramento has turned out better than he dared to expect. Mr. Gibson brought with him some fine specimens, and says the mine is one of the biggest things he ever saw. The tunnel is in over 300 feet, and the ledge is widening as the work progresses.

Left for Aurora.

A party of miners, numbering about fifty in all, left for Aurora this morning to accept employment in the mines of that district, the same being under the management of Mr. A. L. Greeley.—[Gold Hill News, Sept. 29.

To Be Married—Perhaps.

A report is going the rounds that Hon. John P. Jones is shortly to marry Msss. Georgie Sullivan, daughter of Eugene L. Sullivan of San Francisco.

—The elections being close at hand, all the navy-yards in the Eastern States are preparing to build ships at a fearful rate.

Esmeralda Politics.

We have no particular concern in the political affairs or candidates of our adjoining county of Esmeralda, but, through a private letter, we learn one pleasing fact, and that is that there is now and then a man with independence and integrity sufficient to come out on his own responsibility, in open defiance of rings and party allegiance, when that allegiance means slavery and corruption nothing more or less. D. J. Lewis, the present efficient County Clerk of Esmeralda, announces himself as an independent candidate for the office of District Judge for that district, and from all that we have heard about him, he is eminently worthy of the position, at least as regards personal integrity and entire independence of corrupt rings, political or any other way. While saying this for Mr. Lewis, we wish it understood that we have no personal knowledge of our own justifying disparaging reflections on either of the regular candidates, whoever they may be, except on the general principle that "party," in Nevada particularly, means an organization for corrupt purposes, and it is all a good man's character is worth for him to take much stock as a candidate or otherwise with either, the way they are being run nowadays.

St. Nicholas for October

Opens with a bright story by Mrs. R. H. Davis, which is followed by a splendidly illustrated article on Egypt by Mrs. Sara Keables Hunt. "Venus' Flower-Basket" is a description of the Glass Sponge, with a picture that is postively wonderful in the delicacy of its execution. Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge has one of her charming little poems called "Coming," and C. P. Cranch contributes some comic verses, illustrated from his own designs, making fun of the comet. There is also a poem by Helen Hunt. Mrs. Louisa M. Alcott has a story, and Mrs. Abby Morton Diaz tells something more about those funny little "Jimmijohns." There is an interesting article on "Ice in India," and Wm. H. Rideing has one of his admirable practical articles called "Our Light-houses and Light-ships," which is full of interesting pictures drawn by Moran, Perkins, Runge and other noted artists. The serials, "Fast Friends," by J. T. Trowbridge, and "What Might Have Been Expected," by Frank R. Stockton, are concluded. We notice that the Letter-box, and that quaint fellow, "Jack-in the-Pulpit," are unusually brilliant this month.

Land Decision.

Copp's Western Land Owner contains the following ruling from the General Land Office:

An applicant for a patent under the mining laws may abandon from his application a portion adversely claimed by another party, and after the survey receive a patent for the portion not in controversy. Examination of an application for a patent under the mining laws should proceed beyond the papers filed in the case, and into those general records of the General Land Office which are evidence of the final disposition made of the public domain; and if it is found that any part of the premises applied for have been previously disposed of an express exception thereof is made in the patent. Land when once appropriated under the homestead law, is thereunto removed from pre-emption settlement and homestead entry, and can only be again subject to them by a cancellation of the homestead in the manner prescribed by law. Such cancellation becomes effective at the date of receipt of the order thereof, at the local office. To institute a valid right under the pre-emption law to a tract of land covered by a homestead entry, some act of settlement must be performed by the pre-emptor subsequently to the cancellation of said homestead entry.

The Aldine.

The table of literary contents for the October Aldine is quite up to the usual standard of this excellent monthly, while the engravings, four of which are full page, cannot be excelled. Some of them are really grand, but it is a waste of space to attempt a description. The Aldine Company has determined to establish an Art Union, similar to the well known Art Union in England, and distribute its works of art, both sculpture and paintings, which are constantly collecting, among its subscribers. Art premiums valued at $2,500, will be distributed among each series of 5,000 subscribers. Subscription tickets, at $6 each, entitle the holder to The Aldine for a year, to the new chromo, and to a ticket in the distribution of art premiums. The Aldine Company, publishers, 58 Maiden Lane, New York City.

Mutiny.

On the 25th ultimo the Chinamen employed in the gas works at Havana, Cuba, mutinied, and in suppressing the mutiny nine of them were seriously wounded.

—Antigua, in the State of Guatemala, is destroyed by an earthquake.

—A typhoon at Hong Kong destroyed many vessels and 1,000 lives.

—A greater portion of the wheat of California is being stored.

For a Survey.

Engineer Crawford and Capt. Moore will not start out on their surveying expedition over the line of the Soledad Turnpike till to-morrow. A favorable report from the Engineer of the Los Angeles & Independence Railroad, on this route, will be worth millions of dollars to the commerce of Los Angeles.—[Los Angeles Express, Sept. 23.

No Further Extension.

All the men, tools, etc., have been taken off the Southern Pacific Railroad on the extension south of Bakersfield, and it is considered settled that nothing more will be done in that direction this year at least.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

☞Our Only Terms: CASH, IN ADVANCE: Paper invariably discontinued upon expiration of term of subscription.☜

Pine Mountain.

Mr. John Broder returned a few days since from a visit to the Broder-Moffatt mines at Pine Mountain. He ordered work continued on the "Last Chance," the ledge generally referred to as the Moffatt mine. Although the developments in this and other mines of the district are deemed quite sufficient to justify the erection of a furnace, which, we are assured, will be done next Spring, if not sooner, the lateness of the season being the only reason for a postponement. We are told by experts in whom we have confidence that the ores of Pine Mountain, like those of Sylvania, are of the very best smelting class, there being positively nothing contained in any of them to clog or "freeze" a furnace. The average value of the galena ores proper, of which there is an abundance, as determined by numerous assays, is $73 70 silver per ton. Besides this class there is an immense amount of carbonized lead ore, treated as refuse, some of which Mr. Broder brought in and had assayed by Mr. John A. Knapp, Manager of the Swansea works. Lot 1 gave 54 per cent. lead, and 29.16 ounces silver per ton, worth $37 42. Lots 2 and 3 gave a slight percentage less in lead but silver value the same, being an average of $34 80 in silver per ton. The choice ores run as high as $270, and all considered, Pine Mountain is certain to be one of our most valuable furnace districts, and one, too, so situated as to be of great advantage to the interests of the central or agricultural portion of this valley—relatively of more value in that respect than Cerro Gordo and Panamint both together, since the bulk of everything of the kind from these two, owing to their geographical position is lost to us entirely.

Bishop Matters.

"Local Option," writing from Bishop Creek under date of September 28, furnishes us the following: It has been pretty quiet here since the election. Good health generally....J. W. Inman contemplates building an addition to his house and a section of a large barn ....J. C. Mills is to have a new and commodious blacksmith shop soon.... Fred. Schwartz is about to build him a new house. Some wonder if he is not tired of "baching"....Dr. S. A. Middleton is building him a residence.... You will have to try again in giving credit for discovering the error in the size of Local Option tickets. The day before election, in a committee-room, J. W. Inman remarked, "I am going to see if those tickets are right," and went and got one. As he brought it into the room he remarked, "We are beaten." The ticket was then measured and found too narrow. In five minutes Mr. McLeod was on his way to your place for new tickets....The hotel here, after October 1, is to be under the administration of Messrs. Doyle & Ellers.

Personals.

P. Reddy, Esq., returned from his lengthy trip to the Bay last Sunday. He admits having been before the Police Court while down there, but is rather reserved whether this had anything to do with his coming home so soon or not. Mrs. R. remained in the city, but will return in a short time.... Mr. V. Beaudry was in the city, and had been quite unwell....P. W. Bennett, Esq., will return sometime the present month....Mr. Hiskey, of Lida, was here during the week....Messrs. Isaac Harris, John B. White, J. A. Brown and Thos. Kehoe start for Panamint next Monday....S. P. Moffatt returned from Visalia yesterday.

Perhaps.

A party, who favors us with no other name save to sign himself "An Observer," writes us from Panamint under date of September 21, that "our account of the shooting affair between Horton and Henry Kirby, instead of being a true statement of the facts, is in general and in every particular utterly false." That is to say, we suppose, Horton warn't shot at all and that Mr. Kirby is a nice man, if he did make himself scarce. However, all we know about it came from a party who had obtained his knowledge of the affair while at Panamint on a short visit, and who had no interest in the camp or any person connected with the affair whatever. Until "An Observer" condescends to explain what the real facts were, we have no grounds for a different expression or belief than the one received from the gentleman in question.

Social Dance

We have to acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend a social party, set for last evening at Lone Pine, by expressing our regret that it was impossible for us to attend. And this reminds us that there is one (and only one, we suppose)—one point of similarity between the greatest of American editors and ourself. He strove for thirty years to get a half day off to go a fishing. We have tried four years to get to Lone Pine and some other places just once for the fun of the thing, but up to date we have been no more successful than was Horace Greeley in his fishing plans.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. Jennings will preach at Lone Pine to-morrow at 11 A. M; at George's Creek at 3 P. M., and here in the evening.

Work for All.

In a speech at Panamint the other day, Senator Stewart told the miners that he did not propose to put Chinamen at work on the mines but simply at road building and such work. He also stated that he was ready and desirous of employing every man in the camp, willing to work, at $4 per day. His talk gave general satisfaction in every way.

Bought Lots.

Isaac Harris, of Harris & Rhine, and Jacob Cohn, at the Post, each bought a couple of lots in the town of Panamint, paying at the rate of $300 each. Both intend to build stores and get in a stock of goods at the earliest practicable date.

Men Wanted.

We are authorized to state that as many men as choose to take their blankets and apply to John Shepherd, out on the road in course of construction to Panamint, can have immediate employment at good wages.

Auction Sale.

We would direct the attention of parties desiring to purchase blacksmith, carpenter or other tools or articles and condemned stores at a bargain, to Quartermaster Clague's advertisement in another column. Don't forget that the sale comes off promptly at 10 o'clock, Monday, October 19.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met on Tuesday to canvass the Local Option vote, which was not done for reasons stated elsewhere. Messrs. Bell and Laird only were present. Being a special session, no other business of record was transacted.

The Virginia Consolidated.

Without specifications we may state that the developments being made in the air-shaft now being raised on this mine are reported better and better.

Weather.

Considerable rain, almost a down pour at times, has fallen during the week. The mountain tops of both ranges are white with new snow.

Good Work.

The Belshaw furnace turned out 260 bars in 24 hours one day last week. We believe this is the best yet. Both furnaces are running right along.

Paper Hanging.

Wm. Goodman requests us to announce that parties desiring work in his line must apply within two weeks.

Wood Wanted.

Dealers in wood will notice Mr. Reddy's advertisement for proposals to supply wood.

School

Begins here next Monday, now that the school house has been caulked.

America Ahead.

In the International National Rifle shooting match between American and Irish teams, at Creedmoor, los Yanks beat the Patricks just enough to say it was a beat. Some of the shooters on both sides made as high as 58 shots in a possible 60, and altogether the shooting was remarkably good, perhaps never excelled. The scores were: American team, 934; Irish team, 931 The shots were fired at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards. At 800 the Americans scored 326; the Irish, 317. At 900, the Americans, 310; the Irish, 312. At 1,000, the Americans, 298; the Irish, 302. There were six on each side.

A Million Dollar Mortgage.

The largest mortgage ever placed on record in this city, says The San Francisco Bulletin of September 17, was recorded to-day. It is executed by Wm. Sharon and W. C. Ralston, in favor of the Hibernia Savings and Loan Society, as security for $1,000,000, at 7 per cent. per annum, for three years. The property mortgaged is known as the Palace Hotel property, having a frontage of 275 feet on Market street by a depth of 344 feet. The document is drawn upon one of the usual blanks of the bank, with an interlineage that the mortgagors agree to pay the mortgagee a proportion of any solvent debt tax. The clause providing that the building must be kept insured by the mortgagors for the security of the mortgagee is erased.

Occident Beaten.

The wettest blanket that has dropped on the Sacramento sports for many a day was the defeat of Occident, Gov. Standford's famous little mustang. The race was the most exciting and attracted a greater crowd than any ever witnessed in Sacramento. Vast amounts of money changed hands, falling very heavy on Occident's friends, he having sold in the pools for as high as three to one. Sam Purdy was the winner of the race over Blackbird and Occident, trotting five heats, two of which were taken by the "little mustang."

Distinguished Visitors.

Gen. Cameron and his party are at the Grand Hotel, in San Francisco. They will probably remain about two weeks in California, and visit the Geysers and Los Angeles.

—A military command, officially known as the "Big Horn Expedition," is being organized at Rawlins, on the Union Pacific Railroad, to rid the country of wandering Indians. A regular camp is to be established on the Sweetwater, where the infantry are to guard the supplies while the cavalry sweep the country. Buffalo Bill will lead the Indian scouts.

OUR BENTON LETTER.

BENTON, Oct. 1.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—You may perhaps consider a synopsis of matters and things around Benton worthy of a place in your valuable little paper, though noteworthy items from this place are rather scarce because of business being about on a stand still, notwithstanding the usual number of mills and mines continue in operation to the satisfaction of proprietors.

ABOUT TO SELL OUT.

Albert Mack is expecting parties from San Francisco to look at his mine and mill property with a view of purchasing. But it matters not to the interests of Benton how it terminates, because the property is good and is bound to scatter the "Benton bits" if properly managed.

THE WEATHER.

At the present we have the appearance of an early and severe Winter in this part of the country, as it has been quite cool and windy for about two weeks. Last night we had about two inches of rain, with snow on the mountains, mixed up with vivid lightning and very loud thunder.

WHO IS HE?

Multifarious conjectures have been made in regard to "Snob," and who he is, and the mystery has puzzled your worthy friend, who threatened to scalp your correspondent, more than all others in Benton. So you can guess how cautious "Snob" moves around here in order to keep from being scalped.

DIED.

Robert Irving, who has been here in the employ of Bircham & Hutchison for about three months, died last night at 10 o'clock, after an illness of three weeks, of bilious fever. Mr. Irving was from Havilah to this place, but formerly from Sonora. His wife arrived on the last stage just in time to comfort him in his last hours on earth. He will be buried at two o'clock this afternoon, if the weather will permit.

SNOB.

Attempt to Assassinate.

An unsuccessful conspiracy to assassinate the President of Peru by a handful of desperadoes, is announced. His Excellency escaped their shots unhurt. Several of the miscreants were arrested.

—One reason why Indianapolis has so many burglaries is because a fellow has to "crack" from six to twelve houses to get money enough to pay his railroad fare out of town.

—Report says the Central Pacific Railroad Company have contracted for tunneling the mountain near Truckee, so as to avoid snow-sheds. The cost is put at $2,000,000.

SQUIBLETS.

—"So far, so good," as the boy said when he had finished the first pot of his mother's jam.

—And now China and Japan propose arbitration. Truly "the world does move."

—Queen Emma, of the Sandwich Islands, announces her determination to marry an American.

—The widow of Gen. Stonewall Jackson is living at Charlotte, N. C. She is not yet 30 years of age.

—Queen Victoria has agreed to pay the debts of the Prince of Wales in three yearly installments of $1,000,000 each.

—Guatemala has settled with England about the flogging Col. Gonzales gave to McGee, the British Vice Consul.

—Work is to begin immediately on the British Columbia end of the Dominion trans-continental telegraph. The contract has already been given out.

—About $1,900,000 was paid to British claimants by the United States, as the award of the British and American mixed commission, on the 21st ultimo.

—Gov. Dix has refused to remove Mayor Havemeyer on the ground that he is not a thief, and therefore is a reasonably good Mayor for New York.

—Judge Field, of the United States Circuit Court, decides that the California State law against the importation of Chinese prostitutes is unconstitutional.

—"Write me while I am away," said Jones, to Mrs. Jones after an affectionate good-bye. "Treacherous man!" meditated the lady. "Not one letter does he get! He wants to sell them to one of those Western papers."

BOOKS.

GOOD BOOKS BY POST.

OUR POSTAL FACILITIES ARE NOW SO great that a considerable portion of the new books which find their way to the hands of readers do so through the mails. The cost for postage is so trifling that it is of no consequence compared with the desire to possess a really good book. We publish below a list of good books which may be ordered from this office at the price given, and received by an early post:

The Carriage Painter's Manual. Containing a treatise on the art, science and mystery of coach, carriage and car painting. Fine gilding, bronzing, staining, varnishing, polishing, copying, lettering, scrolling and ornamenting. $1.

How to Paint. For mechanics, merchants, farmers, and a guide to the professional painter. Methods in plain and fancy painting. MISCELLANEOUS.

SOLDIERS' WAR CLAIM AGENCY,

No. 34 Montgomery Block,

San Francisco, Cal.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers dischaaged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22, 1861 for three years if not paid the same when discharged. Land warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed for Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. n214m6

PUMPS, ETC.

THE PACIFIC IRRIGATING PIPE, AIR PIPE AND PUMP CO.

San Francisco, Cal.

THE ATTENTION OF AGRICULTURISTS AND farmers, especially, is called to these celbrated pumps already in use throughout the Western States and Pacific Coast, giving perfect satisfaction everywhere. For durability, efficiency and cheapness they cannot be excelled, the material used being cut from the butt log of

Redwood,

the most durable timber in use. These pumps are adapted to all climates, and are not affected by heat or cold. They are made of different sizes to raise water in greater or less volume as may be required; and various lengths to operate in wells and cisterns either shallow or of great depth, and are handsomely turned and painted to preserve them against exposure. Air pipe for tunnels, mines, etc., made of the same material, are very efficient, cheap and durable.

Agency for Inyo and Mono counties at the Inyo Drug Store, Lone Pine, where full information will be given, orders promptly attended to and pumps may be inspected, having one in good running order in the well.

WORMS.—The only known and sure remedy for Worms—Pin, Tape, etc.

Tumor of 12 Years Growth Cured by Radway's Ready Resolvent.

BEVERLY, MASS., July 18, 1869.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried everything that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of a tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

LITERARY.

Prospectus for 1874—Seventh Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. A Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of the THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world-wide reputation, and in the art centers of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood cuts are examples of the highest perfection ever attained. The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more discriminating taste which recognizes the advantages of superior artistic quality, with greater facility for production. The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most costly steel plate, while they afford a better rendering of the artist's original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art culture in America, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any decent representations of the productions of great painters.

In addition to designs by members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success and greatest general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost, enjoy in his own home the refining influences of true art.

The quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thos. Moran and J. D. Woodward.

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs appropriate to the season, by our best artists, and will surpass in attraction any of its predecessors.

PREMIUMS FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1874, will receive pair of chromos. The original pictures were painted in oil for the publishers of THE ALDINE, by Thos. Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for ten thousand dollars. The subjects were chosen to represent "The East" and "The West." One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire; the other gives the Cliffs of Green River, Wyoming Territory. The differences in the nature of the scenes themselves is a pleasing contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's scope and coloring. The chromos are each worked from thirty distinct plates, and are in size (12x16) and appearance exact fac-similes of the originals. The presentation of a worthy example of America's greatest landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was a bold, but peculiarly happy idea, and its successful realization is attested by the following testimonial over the signature of Mr. Moran himself.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 29, 1874.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & Co.,

Gentlemen—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos. They are wonderfully successful representations by mechanical process of the original paintings. Very respectfully

(Signed,) THOS. MORAN.

These chromos are in every sense American They are by an original American process, with material of American manufacture, from designs of American scenery by an American painter, and presented to subscribers to the first successful American Art Journal. If no better because of all this they will certainly possess an interest no foreign production can inspire, and neither are they any worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they cost the publishers only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons of taste will prize these pictures for themselves—not for the price they did or did not cost, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send "Thoughts of Home," a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches, representing a little Italian exile whose speaking eyes betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free at New York Office.

For 50 cents extra the chromos will be sent mounted, varnished and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

AGENTS WANTED.

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE. FREE FROM ALCOHOL

Dr. Walker's
CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS!

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place where they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office or removing and leaving it uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

THE TEMPERANCE ARMY.

Defeated but not Dismayed by the Supreme Court Decision on Local Option—A Manifesto and Resolutions Adopted.

[From The S. F. Chronicle, Sept. 30.]

The provisional government of the State Temperance League met last evening in Temperance Hall, on Market street. George Barstow presided. After a long discussion, which was maintained up to a late hour, the following circular was adopted by the League:
